Chhand :

The Rani said, "One gets honoured in the world due to sons only and one gains victory over the enemy with the help of sons only. Due to vicious sons, the wealth gets lost whereas virtuous sons bring back even the lost empire. After death even, the sons perform the last rites and love is developed due to sons only. The sons only take care of old enmity. The Raja who goes for worship (penance) discarding the sons is thrown into hell and suffers body (physical) afflictions." (47)

The Raja then replied, "We have no (there is no) son or wife ; there was neither any father nor mother ; neither any brother or sister, nor there was any country belonging to us nor any king of any country (people). Without Yoga one wastes this life without any purpose, I would prefer to discard (leave) this kingdom and life of riches, which appeals to my mind." (48)

"In the mother's womb, the human being (man) faces lot of hardships, while the woman's vagina gives him the joy of having sensuous pleasure. By licking the woman's sputum he feels he was enjoying the elixir of life (lips). So finally without Lord's worship this life goes to waste without any purpose." (49)

Chopaiee :

The Rani came to the Raja having made two kanthas (necklaces) one for self and one for Raja. "She told the Raja to wear one of them and the other she will wear as I shall also go with you for penance." (62)

Couplet

When the Rani said like this, the Raja smiled and said, "Whatever you had talked to him, you repeat those things to me, so as to listen them." (63)

Swaiyya :

The Raja further added, "O charming lady ! Staying in jungle is full of suffering, so how will you manage to accompany me ?" The body will have to bear cold and frost. So do not be obstinate for staying there. There are snakes like Saal and Kamal trees and on seeing them you will start wailing. To sum it all, I shall bear all hardships on the body and in the company of my spouse, shall lead a life by eating leaves." (65)

The Raja then said,

Couplet :

"You stay behind and protect with care the kingdom and remember your spouse all the time. Always serve your son by remembering my words at heart." (66)

Swaiyya :

"To attain the wealth of penance by leaving this kingdom, even Indra's kingdom is of no use to me. I do not need the glamour of these riches of horses, infantry and elephants. I am discarding all my sons, daughters and beautiful wife including even the gods, and this is my conviction of the mind. O beauty ! Kabit :

Where there were huge trees of Saal (shores robusta), there were ponds with thorns and he came to such a place for his penance. "Who could be such a person ?" Even Indra's (garden) glamour would appear meaningless (hazy) before the glory of such a person. Even the Nandan garden becomes speechless before its sight (on seeing it). What was the value of stars there as the sky was hardly visible. There was neither sun's light there, nor the moon's light could be seen. Neither there were any gods nor any demons to be seen. Neither any bird approaches that area, nor even an ant is to be seen. (79)

Chopaiee :

When both had reached such a dense jungle, they saw a bhavan (cottage) there. Then the Raja immediately said these words, "We have selected (attained) the right type of place for our penance." (80)

The Rani said,

The Rani said, "We will observe penance here and recite the Lord's Name (Ram, Ram). We will stay in this building (home) for (as) many days and thus burn away all our sins (into ashes)." (81)

Couplet :

The person, whom the Rani had explained everything about her secret, came there as a Yogi (ascetic) and met the Raja. (82)

The Yogi said

"O Raja ! When you come out of the river after having bath then I will talk to you about Lord's knowledge (Light of God) and explain it fully." (85)

Chopaiee :

By great effort he managed to put off the Raja and kept another person on top of the roof and told him to repeat Sat, Sat (Truth, Truth) three or four times and then keep quiet. (86)

When the Raja came back after bath, then that man (disguised as a Yogi) said, "O Raja ! Listen ! When I had poured mud on my body, then Dharam Raj had ordered me." (87)

Couplet :

"Why have you come here discarding your kingdom ?" The Raja then replied, "O Lord of the Yogis ! Listen to me and give me all details about it." (88)

On hearing these words the Raja accepted them as the heavenly voice, saying all this and took it to be true (so he thought) he will rule the country during day time and then engage in recitation ot True Name at night. (96)

The Rani made the Raja realize all this truth and diverted him from the path of Yoga through her deceit. The Raja then changed into his royal dress and came back home and accepted the functions of a Raja (as before). (97)

Couplet :

By her deceitful action the Rani had after burying the body of the Yogi having killed him, forced the Raja to return to a householder's life. (98)

Here the eighty-first episode of the King's & Minister's dialogue regarding woman's characterization from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well. (81-1442)(Contd)

Chopaiee :

When the justice loving king Jahangir died, then Shahjahan took over the reins of the country. He was very much annoyed with Darya Khan. He wanted to kill him, but he escaped from his clutches. (1)

Chopaiee :

One day, while asleep, Shahjahan got up saying incoherently and the queen being awake heard this. So she thought to herself that the husband's suffering should be alleviated by killing him (Darya Khan). (4)

So the queen said

She woke up the king by touching his feet and then saluted him by bowing three times !" Whatever you had said, I have thought about it, that Darya Khan was to be killed." (5)

Couplet :

"It is rather difficult to kill a clever and smart enemy; as he would never be caught in one's snare, but it was rather easy to kill an enemy, who could easily be won over (by deceit)." (6)

Sortha

The queen called an intelligent (wise) attendant and sent her explaining the thing fully, that she should call Darya Khan by some (clever) deceitful action. (7)

Chopaiee :

The attendant, after placing the Pathan in the cauldron started towards the king's palace. Everyone (passerby) was seeing this cauldron, but no one could even think of the secret behind this move. (23)

Taking the cauldron, he came to the queen and got down there. The queen gave lot of wealth to the attendant (alleviating her poverty). By sending the attendant, the queen called the king there and passed on the whole information by keeping close to his ears (gave him the secret of this move). (24)

Couplet :

By sending the attendant, the king was called there. Showing him the cauldron she said to him, now it was up to him how to deal with this Pathan (and act accordingly). (25)

Then the queen told her lady attendant to brandish him as a ghost and get him buried in Chandni Chowk. (27)

Chopaiee :

The attendant was taking him for killing him, while the fool was going quietly sitting inside the cauldron, thinking that he would get the queen today and then enjoy sensuous pleasure with her. (28)

The attendant, along with the cauldron came to the place where the Kazi along with his mufti (clerk) were sitting; where on the platform the Kotwal (Police Inspector) gives (announces) the sentence to meet the requirements of justice. (29)

The lady attendant said

Couplet :

"O Kazi ! There was a ghost in this cauldron what punishment should be meted out to him. ? Ifyou order, then he should be buried in the ground or if you like then he could be burnt alive. (30)

Then the Kazi said, "O beautiful lady ! Listen to me. He should be buried alive in the ground. If we leave him alive, then he could kill someone else. (31)

When the clerk of the Kazi (religions leader) gave the order to the Kotwal (Police Inspector) and by proclaiming him as a ghost, he was buried in the grave along with the cauldron. (32)

On hearing this, the Rani got frightened. She could not think of some solution to this problem, so that the son-in-law should not be killed and along with the daughter, he should be helped to escape alive. (8)

The Rani then sent for a carriage (sack) and made them sit at both the ends of it. Then she called for another sack which was kept inside the first one (9)

Couplet :

In the second sack there were kept many pearls (jewels) and covered it with a lid, while she kept some sweets in the second sack. (10)

Chopaiee :

In the second sack some sweetmeats were kept as such the inner sack was not visible (from outside) and everyone could only see the sweetmeats. No one could gauge the secret behind it. (11)

Then the Rani (queen) sent her attendant to call the Raja and the whole palace was shown to him by holding him by the arm. "Do we have no regard (fear) for you, so that without your approval, how could we arrange for betrothal ?" (she said). (12)

Chopaiee :

The Yogi would give her (Rani) some collyrium and she would be under the magic spell (being a slave of the Yogi as per the Shastra of witchcraft) and with that power she would fly off and could go wherever she desired and was having sexual accompaniment of various types (sexual affairs). (3)

They could visit various lands and were enjoying the beauty of different places because with the magic power of the collyrium no one could see them. So he (Yogi) would take the Rani also along with him to those places. (4)

Couplet :

She could visit distant lands of various types (along with Yogi) so experiencing such enjoyment. Who could be satisfied with the Raja ? (5)

Chopaiee :

When the Raja came to know of this secret, he was very furious at heart. So he thought of some means of dealing with this situation and get this woman killed (destroyed). (6)

The Raja came there personally without making any noise of his foot steps. He saw the Yogi sleeping on the bed. So he took out his sword and killed him. (7)

He took the mantravati (the magic spell) in his hand and threw the corpse of the Yogi inside a store room. The blood was soaked and drained o ff with some cloth (clothes). The Rani was lying asleep and knew not what had happened in between. (8)

Then he (Raja) wrote a letter, supposed to be from the Yogi to the Rani saying, "O Rani! I am short of money, so please send me some money." (9)

Chopaiee :

Like this he was sending letters regularly and collected (took away) all the money from the Rani. She was very rich but now she became a pauper. The Raja had totally forsaken her from his heart. (10)

The money which the Raja was getting from the Rani was distributed among Brahmins. He was enjoying sensuous pleasure with her (Rani) rival-wives and would not come anywhere near her. (11)

Thus the Raja had taken away (stolen) all the wealth of the Rani and she was made to beg from his rival wives. She was going around with a begging bowl in her hand while the rival-wives would not give her any alms (any help). (12)

She was made to beg from house to hour. Whatever money she had,was all lost and wasted and she did not have a penny. She died of hunger undergoing suffering, while begging for loaves ? (13)(1)

Chopaiee :

She had a beautiful lady attendant and the Raja used to love her. The Rani was feeling very hurt about it that the Raja was always interested in her love. (3)

There was a high caste Khatri by the name of Fateh Chand and the lady attendant called him to her palace and had sexual relations with him. (4)

As a result of this she became pregnant and the attendant announced that the Raja was responsible for it. (This action was attributed to the Raja). She would say "that the Raja had sexual relations with me and I was blessed with a son. " (5)

The Raja on hearing this secret, kept quiet and did not say anything openly with his own tongue. He was wondering in his mind that he had no sexual relations with her, then from where she had begotten this son. (6)

Couplet :

The Raja attributed this act to Fateh Chand and sent for the lady attendant. He killed the attendant himself and then buried her in a pit. (7)(1)

He had a wife by the name of Chander Prabha who was competent in all types of virtuous deeds (functions). The Raja was very fond of her and by her company he was feeling the bliss of life (he felt alive). He would not take even water, without having a glance of her (without meeting her). (2)

She was involved in a love affair with a man from Bhutant and she lost all sense of body and mind in his love (she was madly in love with him). She would send for him during day and night and would enjoy sensuous pleasure with him. (3)

While they were having sexual company, the Raja happened to come there and the Rani made the Bhutanti man hide somewhere. She made the Raja drink too much wine and in that drunken state put him on a cot. (4)

Whatever one would desire at heart, he would pray to the goddess at Bhawani's Temple (and seek her blessings for its fulfillment). He would get his desires (hopes) fulfilled. This fact was known to all, including young and old people. (6)

Couplet :

Everywhere it is one's earnestness which brings fulfillment of one's desires and there was no doubt about it. The virtuous would get noble (deeds) desires fulfilled while the vicious people get vicious results (as per one's thinking). (7)

On the eighth day of moon's phases during the month of Chet (March) there would be a great fair held at that place and all would visit that place including high and low, the King and the subjects (and no one remains at home). (8)

Chopaiee :

When the day of Astami (eighth day of moon's phases), the Rani liked one pilgrim and she wanted to have sexual relations with him to her heart's satisfaction but could not catch hold of any chance for its fulfillment. (9)

When she thought of it, she called the pilgrim at the back side and she fixed with him to fulfil this desire and told the Raja openly. (10)

"If any friend would like to meet me, then he should come there to meet me. The Raja could not understand the motive (secret) behind it, while the friend was explained its secret fully." (12)

Swaiyya :

The Rani realized that her paramour was already waiting (standing) there. She wanted to talk (to him) but was a bit hesitant, then she made a clever move through her words. She asked her attendant about the place and gave its location to her friend through an excuse (meeting place) that "she would come tomorrow for Devi's worship at the mausoleum (for mother goddess worship) and accompany them." (13)

Chopaiee :

Thus she told the friend (paramour) about the meeting place in the very presence of the Raja, that she would go to Bhawani's Temple and after worship of Mangla (goddess) only, she would come back home. (14)

Couplet :

"If there were any friends (well-wisher) then they should come there to meet me. The Raja did not see through this secret move but the friend was told everything." (15)

Thus the Rani got up and moved towards the friend's house (place). The Raja was happy at heart (in his mind) that she had gone for Shiva's Temple. (16)(1)

Chopaiee :

There was a Jat living in the land of Majha, who was ploughing his fields and would remain in his fields day and night and he was known by the name of Ram Singh. (1)

He had a wife (at home) named Radha, who was a shameless creature (who had no modesty) she would always go to the gardener and after having cohabitation with him she would come back home. (2)

When she was going to her husband taking with her some ground oats (satu) and on her way she came across the gardener. So she had sexual relations with him, having kept her clothes aside. The companions of the gardener, opened that bundle and removed the Satu (ground oats) and made an elephant out of it. (3)

Couplet

They tied the elephant, (made out of satu) into the bundle. It appeared like satu (ground maize) and not an elephant. (4)

Chopaiee :

That woman felt greatly pleased and satisfied after the cohabitation and gave him company for one pehar (three hours). When she came from his house, she brought her sheet (cloth) also. (5)

She went to her husband with the satu and was opening the cloth (bundle) of satu. That fool got frightened to see the elephant. Then the woman told him promptly. (6)

Couplet :

"If someone were to make an elephant of satus and then eat it with his teeth, then he would not be frightened of a drunken elephant." (8)

That fool got puffed up on hearing this and could not gauge the secret. "He thought that by getting this elephant chewed by me out of ground oats, the woman had saved him." (9)(1)

Here the eighty-ninth episode of Minister's & King's dialogue regarding woman's characterization from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well. (89-1562)(Contd)

Couplet :

There was a goldsmith in the town of Etawah by the name of Nana. He had been bestowed with a beautiful personality (body) by the Lord. (1)

There was a princess there called Deep Lala. She possessed wealth beyond any count and thousands of lady attendants. (3)

She sent one of her attendants to call the goldsmith to meet her. She would enjoy cohabitation with him day and night and felt great satisfaction at heart. (4)

Chopaiee :

She would call that goldsmith day and night and enjoy sensuous pleasure with him. She would carry on her love affair with him and would be prepared to sacrifice everything (her life) for him. (5)

She called him one day, when suddenly her father also came there. When she could not manage any love affair, she sent him away after putting collyrium in his eyes. (6)

Couplet :

Her father was a great fool, who could not follow the secret. The woman had sent away her paramour after putting collyrium in his eyes. (7)(1)

Here the ninetieth episode of the King's & the Minister's dialogue regarding the woman's characterization from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well.

The Raja Gobind Chand had a great f iend in Madhvanal who was studying the six shastras along with Kok Shastra and music. (1)

Chopaiee :

He used to play on his flute with a very sweet tune. If any woman would par chance hear the flute with her ears, she would get spellbound and get enamoured by it. She would forget everything about her household chores. (2)

The residents of the town then came to the Raja with a complaint saying that this fellow Madhavanal be either killed or exiled from that land. (3)

Couplet :

(They complained) that He had enticed the hearts of their womenfolk. Either they should all be exiled and only he be kept in the town. (4)

Chopaiee :

Then the Raja sent for some lotus flowers (being plucked) and spread them like a bed spread. All the lady attendants were made to sit there, after they were embellished with various ornaments. (5)

Then he called Madhvanal there and seated him in the assembly. Then the Brahmin (Madhvanal) played on his flute with great love, which appealed to the ladies gathered there. (6)

All the women got enamoured with the hearing of the tunes (of flute). Their bodies were stuck with lotus petals. (7)

Chopaiee :

The Raja then ordered Madhvanal for exile (to go out of the land) immediately but did not kill him as he was a Brahmin. He came to the town of Kamavati after that. He developed love for Kamkandla there. (8)

Couplet :

Madhvanal (Brahmin) had reached a place where Kam Sain Raja ruled the land. There were 360 women, who would dance in the presence of the Raja. (9)

Chopaiee

Madhvanal came to the Raja's assembly and made his obeisance to him (Raja). There were many warriors there and Kamkandla was performing her dance. (10)

Couplet :

Kamkandla had worn a dress of Sandalwood, which was tightly worn by her. They could not see the Sandalwood but only the tight dress was visible. (11)

With the fragrance of Sandal wood a black bee came buzzing but the movements of her breasts sent a strong gust of wind which made the black bee to fly off. (12)

The secret of this whole movement was understood by the Brahmin. He felt very happy in his heart. Whatever wealth he had brought from the Raja, was given away to Kamkandla. (13)

Couplet :

The Raja thought that all the money he had given him had been squandered by him. So such a spendthrift Brahmin could not be tolerated by him anymore (could not keep him any more). (14)

Chopaiee

Being a Brahmin he had been spared his life, but he must be exiled from this town immediately. Moreover if he was found hiding in some one's house then that person will also be cut into pieces. (15)

The Brahmin had heard all this, so he came moving slowly to Kamkandla's house. (He said) that the Raja had been very harsh and enraged with him, so he had come to her house. (16)

Sortha :

Kamkandla had become pale in colour due to his separation, as if the blood had dried up (there was no blood left) within her body, as her paramour was gone having taken away (stolen) her heart. (24)

Couplet :

The body had become frail and there was no flesh left in the body. For the separated ones the maladies of body, flesh or breathlessness were good. (25)

Kamkandla was tossing around on the ground in the love of Madhvanal. Just as an addict, being cut off from his dose, feels desperate and pulsates around on the grou nd. (26)

Madhavanal then went there and wrote a couplet with full deliberation. "So that Bikramajit may read it sometime resulting in my rehabilitation." (35)

"The person, who is suffering from various maladies could find a solution out of it. But the person suffering from the pangs of separation of body, flesh and mind could not be saved from this plight." (36)

Chopaiee :

Raja Bikramajit came there by walking (on foot) and paid his obeisance to Gorja and on reading that couplet got surprised and said that some separated soul had visited this place. (37)

Couplet :

"If anybody had visited this place, he must be called (to meet me) and whatever mode of action for his life (saving) he would suggest, I will help him to realize that." (38)

Chopaiee :

Bikramajit then sent for Madhvanal and received him with great honour (made him sit) and said, "O Brahmin ! Whatever you would order, I would act accordingly. If my life is to be staked for its realization, I am prepared to do that (and fight for it)." (39)

When Madhvanal spelt out his secret, then Bikramajit called out his whole army. He got dressed up with arms and protective cover (coat of mail) and marched towards the town of Karriwati. (40)

Sortha :

He (Raja) sent an emissary to inform Paja Kamsain that he should handover (one) Kamkandla and thus save his country (from destruction). (41)

Chopaiee :

An emissary came to the town of Kamwati and he bowed his head to the Raja Kamsain. He gave the message of Bikramjit (Raja) and the Raja felt greatly aggrieved. (42)

Couplet :

The Raja thought in his mind and felt that it was impossible for him to hand over Kamkandla, even though the moon might shine during daytime and the sun may rise during the night (these thing may be possible). (43)

The emissary said -

Bhujang Chhand :

"O Raja ! Listen ! What is the value of this woman Kamkandla whom you have kept with you even dearer than your life itself. You please accept my proposal. This is exactly what the Raja (Bikramajit) had told me to convey. By handing over (this woman) you meet my Raja (Bikramajit) thus keeping his honour intact." (44)

Chopaiee :

"Our army was very stubborn, which you must realize. Whose strength was well known and accepted in all the ten directions. Whom the gods and demons all have known as very powerful, why do you want to stop him and fight with him ?" (45)

When the emissary said such painful and striking words to the Raja then many dreadful drums were beaten in the Raja's assembly. Then Raja Kamsain said, "O stubborn warriors ! Let us fight it out. What is the value of poor Bikramajit, we will cut into pieces ev en the god of death !" (46)

So he launched an attack with a huge army of warriors which included Khandels, Baghels, Pandhers, Pawars, Gaherwars, Chouhans, Gohlots etc. and other warriors, who had never been defeated by others. (47)

When Bikramajit heard about it, he also collected all his warriors and all of them came and established their positions in the battlefield. On both sides the warriors were having great hopes (of victory) It seemed as if Jamna had rushed to meet and embrace Ganga. (48)

At some places the soldiers were striking with swords while at some other places they were trying to save the onslaughts of the enemy with their shields. At places you could hear the sounds of striking weapons on shields and protective covers producing heat, which was resulting in producing sounds of music or flames of light. (49)

At places, there were reeling (waving) arms, maces and bullets being used, while at places the arrows in the form of half moon were being shot while at other places the warriors were fighting fiercely with their spikes, pokers and bayonets in hands. (50)

The warriors had double edged swords, or swords in hands or were having a noose resembling the curls of hair of the (King's) queen. They were striking like drunken elephants and whosoever was pulled by throwing the noose was killed instantly.(51)

When the warriors were fighting so fiercely and were falling being cut into pieces, the Raja Bikram laughed and said, "O Kamsain ! Listen to my words !" (52)

Couplet

"Kamsain, on hearing these words became very furious with rage and racing his horse called out Bikram to come and fight." (56)

Then Kamsain went in front of the warrior (Bikram) and said, "If you are able to protect yourself against my attack with a javelin and then are in a position to cause wounds on my person, then only you could be called Raja Bikram." (57)

Then Bikram upheld the attack of his (Kamsain) javelin at his stomach he became furious and wounded Kamsain with his dagger. (58)

"Such a person needs to be opposed in such a manner and such a person should not be left alive." With his dagger he killed Kamsain, so that he was made to rest at that spot only. (59)

Being in the guise of Yogi, Raja Bikram went personally for the Brahmin's function and came to the place where Kamkandla (in anguish) was pulsating up and down in the name of Madhvanal. (61)

Chopaiee :

On reaching there, the Raja announced these words. "Madhav had been killed for your sake in the battle." On hearing these words Kamkandla also died and on coming back the same news was given by the Raja to the Brahmin also. (62)

When Madhavanal heard these words with his ears, then he also gave up his life in a moment. When the Raja saw this wonderous drama then he also decided to immolate himself and give up his life. (63)

When the Raja, after preparing the pyre was about to immolate himself, then a betal (evil spirit) got up from there. He sprinkled an elixir (amrit) on both of them (Madhav and Kamkandla) and brought them to life, thus alleviating the pangs of his suffering. (64)

Couplet :

Having faced the attack of a javelin and then trying to burn himself alive, the Raja saved both of them and handed over Kamkandla to the Brahmin. Truly Bikramajit was worth saluting. (65)(1)

The women of the south are very clever. Any Yogi, who goes there becomes a householder. There was a famous Raja by the name of Mangal Sain, who had brought all the enemies into submission. (1)

He had a beautiful wife called Sarup Kala who was almost like Parbati. The Raja had great love and affection for her. He would act according to her wishes and whatever she stated. (2)

Ruaal Chhand :

When the Raja would visit the pleasure palace then Roop Prabha would also be seated there along with other beautiful women (colleagues). The musical instruments like trumpets, lyre, flute and mirdung would play the Kanra Raga then, and there would be lot of pomp and show of various hues and colours with lot of noisy scenes. (3)

There was a juggler by the name of Bisan Datra, living there. The Raja would make him dance to his tunes all the twenty-four hours (eight pehars) (doing various feats). The Rani (queen) on seeing his charming personality was pierced by the arrows of passionate love (god of love) and then fell down unconscious on the ground. (4)

Chopaiee :

Now the weaver was going further by uttering the words, "Come flying and remain full of life." The thieves heard him and felt that he was an ill-omened person and beat him with shoes hundred times. (3)

The thieves then said

Couplet :

"You should say while going "Bring up and keep it here," but if you repeat the earlier slogan then we will kill you with an arrow." (4)

When the thieves told him to say then out of fear he was saying "Come and bring and go after keeping here and going along further." (5)

The king had four sons and one of them had died. He was in great grief and were taking him for burial. (6)

Chopaiee :

So the weaver was proceeding further saying, "Bring and come and keep and go." When the Raja's army heard him say this, they punished him with fifteen hundred shoes beating. (7)

One Raja had many wives, but w ithout having a son, he was too much in anguish. Then being mad about it, he got married again. Then he was blessed with a son by the God's Grace. (9)

All were very happy and overjoyed at heart. In the meantime the weaver came along saying that, "it was very bad what had happened" and sang it aloud. Whosoever heard this, punished him with shoe beating. (10)

The residents of the town said —

When the people beat him with shoes they said, "You should say what had happened was very good." Then the unfortunate weaver reached a place where a huge fire was going on (had erupted). (11)

Here great buildings were being demolished (due to this fire) and there were piles of broken and damaged hutments (the sheds). This fool was saying, "It is a very good thing." So whosoever heard him, gave him a good beating. (12)

Couplet :

The weaver had beating with the shoes for about ten thousand times and after that he reached the place of his in-laws. (13)

Chopaiee :

The people there offered him food but he would not eat. He was hungry and dying with hunger but due to his shame he could not tell anything. At about midnight, he felt extremely hungry. (14)

With a wooden log he broke a pitcher of oil (made a hole) and drank all the oil, without leaving a drop inside. Then the sun shone forth and stars had disappeared. He took some sticks of the weaving bamboos. (15)

Couplet :

He sold the whole weaving structure and bought a sword out of it. Then he left in search of a job in great haste. He reached the place w'here a lion used to kill the people. (16)

Due to fear, the weaver with the sword in hand, climbed on a tree. The lion becoming furious, stood underneath the tree. (17)

Chopaiee :

When the lion sighted the weaver on the tree, the sword (spear) from his hand fell down due to fear, which struck the mouth of the lion and passed through his back. It appeared as if the bud of lotus flower was sprouting. (18)

When he became sure that the lion had died, he came down and cut his ears and tail. He went up to the Raja, showing these parts and got a job worth a high (big) salary per month. (19)

Couplet :

The Raja had an enemy, who suddenly attacked him with a huge army. Then the Raja made this killer of lion as his army commander and sent him to fight (against the enemy). (20)

When the weaver was running away alongwith his wife, the dreadful clouds started gurgling and roaring. The lightning would shine at times which would show them the path. (22)

This path was leading to the same place, where the Raja's enemy forces were entrenched. There was a well there and the weaver fell into the well, as he could not see it. (23)

Couplet :

When he fell into the well and became unconscious, the weaver woman shouted out that lion killer had fallen in the well. (24)

Aril :

"The lion-killer had fallen in the well," These words were heard by all around, then the whole lot of troops got frightened greatly. They started fighting among themselves so severely that not even a single person was left alive. (25)

Couplet :

There was a famous village of Chandpur in the land of Chandan. There lived a Brahmin in that village called Deen Dayal. (1)

Chopaiee :

Women used to come to that Brahmin from far and wide lands and bow to that Brahmin in reverence and he would also talk to them very nicely. The women took him to be like the god of love (Kamdev). (2)

Couplet :

At that place there was a woman whose beauty was akin to Rati's form (Kamdev's wife). That woman thinking him to be the spouse of Rati (Kamdev) got enamoured by him. (3)

Then the emissary came to Bairam Khan and made him enraged greatly. The emissary said, "O People cursed by God ! Why are you sitting idle ? You have been invaded by the forces of Arab countries." (4)

Bairam Khan got frightened by hearing the news and madé plans of running away from the land. The Pathan woman came to him. Whatever she said, I would like to relate that now. (5)

Couplet :

"Your father was so brave that he was famous in the world for his bravery, whereas you are such a coward that you want to flee from the battle front." (6)

Chopaiee

"You hand over your turban to me and wear my trousers (Salwar). When I will wear your arms and weapons, 1 will cut the enemy into pieces." (7)

"Having said this she placed her husband in an underground cell and snatched all his weapons. That Pathan woman dressed up like a male and wearing coat of arms (protective covering) (played) beat the battle drums" (8)

Couplet :

With the whole army at her back the Pathan woman launched an attack and told the warriors that Bairam Khan had told (ordered) this slave of his, to fight out this battle. (9)

She attacked the enemy taking the command of the whole army and making a round (circle) of the troops, confronted the enemy and told the enemy that Bairam Khan had ordered his slave to fight this battle, so you could advance further only after defeating my forces." (10)

All the warriors were filled with rage on hearing this news and armed themselves, with various weapons and she was surrounded from all sides and then shot the arrows from their stretched bows. (11)

Couplet :

They were armed with swords, noose, shields, maces and gufaw etc. The warriors pierced with spears were falling on the ground. (12)

Bhujang Chhand :

Taking their swords and bayonets the warriors in millions launched the attack and stubborn warriors encircled the enemy in the battlefield. With great wrathfulness they came towards the woman (leader) and from both sides cries of 'Kill Them' were being heard. (13)

Swaiyya

By fluttering their banners on the flags, the warriors were advancing by beating the drums. Holding their shields in hands they were shouting 'Kill Them', 'Kill the enemy'. Many attacks had been launched and the golden like bodies of warriors were blown up in the form of sparks. It appeared as if the iron smith had heated the iron to red-hot and then by beating it (to form a desired shape) sparks were rising from the fire. (14)

Many warriors of various castes including Gurai khel, mehmodilai, Doujeaiee etc getting furious with rage, had joined the battle. Many stubborn warriors getting enraged with swords in hands had invaded in strength. (15)

Chopaiee :

The swords were being used in great numbers and man)' proud warriors had been killed (in battle). The arrows were being shot (in continuous showers) like the heavy rain in the month of Asuj (September). (16)

The warriors had stormed the battlefield from all four sides in large numbers. By shouting 'kill the enemy', they were making lot of noise. The Kashatriyas were not relenting from the battlefield as they were getting into frenzy (behaviour) as if it were the flame of dooms-day in fact (in truth). (17)

The great warriors of Arabic lands had started off, whom people of the three worlds were saluting. They were wielding their tridents so nicely as if lightning was seen shining among the clouds. (18)

Chopaiee :

With a huge formation the warriors had launched another attack suddenly and had pierced some proud warriors with the arrows. They were shooting arrows by stretching their bows and the warriors came in circles to face the enemy. (19)

When the Pathan woman would glance them with her eyes, she would use many types of weapons (of various kinds). She would dispatch them to hell (sans) without their arms, legs and heads. (20)

Many proud warriors had died fighting in the battlefield and some were moving without their elephants, horses, chariots and swords. Many mighty warriors had been killed in the battlefield, while some proud warriors were (dancing) jumping around. (21)

Couplet :

Getting furious with rage and after killing many warriors, they returned to the place, where Pathan woman was standing. (24)

Chopaiee :

With gnashing their teeth, the warriors would face each other and the stubborn warriors get cut into pieces soon. Those of the warriors, who face death with courage, facing enemy, were taken by fairies in their heavenly chariots to heaven. (25)

Couplet :

On seeing these warriors being taken by fairies in their chariots, then many more warriors fought similarly facing the enemy. (26)

The bullets and arrows were being shot like a shower of rain. The swords, knives, daggers and arrows were in use largely. Great stubborn and proud warriors were attacking the enemy and had landed in the battlefield making circles. (28)

Many warriors belonging to different castes like Gurekhel, Mohamadi, Lejak, Doujiee, afridis and lodis had been killed. The mighty Niazi warriors were beaten badly and the warriors with their heads thrown open were fleeing away. (29)

Swaiyya :

When the warriors being (cut) wounded were gone, then the Pathan woman taking up her arms,came fully enraged. She made an attack at one time with many weapons like parsai, patis and iron-fists on the enemy. Some were fighting, some accepted defeat and moved away, some were getting frightened on watching the warfare, while some others were being killed without facing death (by fright only). Millions of warriors casting aside their bows and (with small thorns in mouth) had accepted defeat. (30)

Couplet :

The weapons like Bajas ban, scorpion like weapon and arrows were used in great numbers (iron load was hurled) so that all high and low cowards and warriors were brought to the same level (by death). (32)

Chopaiee :

When the battle was raging so fiercely then the Arab ruler in great fury said, "Let us not allow them to go back alive and kill them by surrounding them from all corners." (33)

When the Arab Raja uttered these words in wrathfulness, on hearing those words, the egoistic warriors became more furious. So they shot arrows by stretching their bows fully, which pierced the Pathan lady and passed through her body. (34)

Couplet :

When the arrows passed through her body piercing it, she became furious with rage in her mind and fought furiously. "Now I am going to describe that detail." (35)

Chopaiee :

She pulled out those arrows and then shot back the same arrows at the enemy. Whosoever was hit by them was wounded badly and were killed (being wedded by fairies). (36)

Thus many warriors were killed. All those on elephants, horses and chariots were killed. A fierce and horrible battle raged there (took place) and not a single warrior was left alive. (37)

Then the Arab King came forward himself and fought the Pathan lady. Then the Pathan lady shot four arrows killing all his four horses. (38)

Then cutting the chariot (into pieces) she killed the charioteer and shot an arrow at the Arab King. He became unconscious and was caught and then she sounded the bugle (drum) of victory. (39)

She tied him up and brought him home and distributed wealth in plenty (squandered money). At her place, the victory drums were beating and all the household members were elated and happy. (40)

She brought out her spouse from the underground cell and showed him the enemy and bade him farewell by giving him a horse and giving a turban for tying. (40)(1)

Here the ninety-sixth episode of King's & Minister's dialogue regarding woman's Character from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well. (96-1724)(Contd)

Chopaiee :

Whatever goddess Chandika had said was enacted accordingly by her. The Raja made an army out of mud; when Chandika glanced at them with grace, all those warriors got ready with their weapons. (5)

Couplet :

The warriors were created from mud, who were furious with rage. Many horses, elephants, chariots and infantry men along with many Rajas got up and moved further. (6)

Couplet :

Thus with this thought (of fighting) ingrained in then fully, the warriors launched a severe attack on Bikram's army and made the Bikram's troops to retreat. (8)

Bhujang Chhand :

Many charioteers were killed along with countless elephants and many royal horses with great embellishments were destroyed. Many warriors roaming in the battlefield died fighting. "1 am unable to count these as they were countless." (9)

Ruaal Chhand :

Then the Raja came out with a huge army along with himself which included millions of warriors armed with weapons and other ornamental things. Many warriors, being hit with tridents, bayonets and arrows were being killed in the battlefield while lighting. (10)

Bhujang Chhand :

With the battle raging there, many warriors were killed and falling down, while reeling around like drunkards. Some were shouting "kill them, kill the enemy" Some warriors having given up their weapons, had dressed up like women (to save themselves). (11)

When the warriors thundered from all four corners and sounds of conch shells and great drums were heard and the fearless warriors had gathered in large numbers, then Kalika produced her own crackling sounds (joyful shrieks) (12)

Shiva also came there with the beating of his small drum and sixty four fairies joined together to sing songs. Some-where the evil-spirits being furious, were showing their pride while the ghosts and evil spirits were moving naked elsewhere. (13)

Tomar Chhand :

When Bikram, being enraged .sent for his different warriors (of various types), they collected together at that place with great stubborn attitude. (14)

Many warriors without caring for anyone else, were fighting to death, many musical sounds were being produced and the song of Maru Rag (song of death) was being sung. (15)

Chopaice :

Whosoever attacked were killed forthwith and some others invited by the god of death also joined there with zeal. Those who came to the battlefield, died fighting and went to heavens. (16)

When the armies fought,,then not a single warrior was left alive. Then both the Rajas with stubbornness came forward with the sound of different types of music. (17)

Many musical instruments like clarionets, instruments and nafiris were played and coach shells, drums and battle-drums roared. Many types of war music was being produced errand to watch the fun ail the gods came there in their heavenly chariots. (18)

Whatever attacks Bikram was launching against him, were saved by Chandika (goddess) herself and not a single wound was inflicted on him. She would ; protect him as her slave (devotee). (19)

Salbahan had a queen consort who was frightened terribly on watching this warfare and she worshipped Gorja, considering her as their protector, both in the past and in future as well. (21)

Then she got a glimpse of Gorja (goddess) and the queen got up to pay her obeisance to the goddess (Gorja). She praised the world's mother (Gorja) in many ways and got her blessings for a victory of her spouse (for their forces) (22)

Couplet :

Salbahan and Bikram fought a duel for quite sometime and the battle between the two raged for (eight pehars) twenty-four hours. (23)

Chopaiee :

The Raja of Sialkot (Salbahan) then feetting furious with rage, started fighting valiantly, using many tactics and shot an arrow stretching his bow fully, like a powerful archer, which sent Bikram Rai straight to the heavens (killed him). (24)

When the Raja came to Antaipur, he heard about the blessings attained by the queen (through the goddess) and he said, "My victory was possible through the blessings of the goddess attained by the queen. Thus his love for the queen increased considerably. (26)

Couplet :

"The queen had propitiated the goddess Gorja in my favour and Bhagwati being pleased had enabled us to gain victory in the battle. (27)

Chopaiee :

Now the Raja would always remain at the palace of the queen and would not give any time to other queens. When many months had passed in the company of the queen, then the goddess blessed him with a son. (28)

He was named Risalu. Chandika then said that this man would be a great celibate and powerful king. There was none in the world to compete with him. (29)

As Risalu grew up, he would go out for (shooting) hunting and kill many deer and other wild animals. He was travelling for fun to far and wide lands (distant) without any fear of other kings. (30)

When he would return from his hunting sprees he would get involved in a game of chess. He would win over the hearts of other kings and would leave them by giving them certain names or symbols. (31)

Then a juggler came to his house and arranged a game of chess with him. When the juggler lost his clothes, turban and horse in the game and told Risalu (Raja) while a symbol was being portrayed on his body. (32)

"I will consider you a great chess master, if you would accept my (one) request. You arrange for a game of chess with Raja Si. kup and then come back home having won the game." (against him). (33)

On hearing these words, Risalu got astride his horse and moved towards that Raja. He came to the land of Sirkup and started playing the game of chess. (34)

Then Sirkup played many deceitful and hypocritic moves but lost all his robes, weapons and everything else. After losing his wealth he laid his life (head) at stake, which was also won by the fortunate Risalu. (35)

Having gained a victory over him he was preparing to kill him. But he heard from the inner part of palace (harem) a voice saying, "Do not kill the Raja, but take his daughter Kolcila instead." (36)

So he pardoned the life of Raja Sirkup and took his daughter Kolcila as his reward. He got a palace built in Daudak forest and made her abode in that palace. (37)

When her childhood period was over and she became youthful, the Raja would not go near her and she felt greatly pained (in anguish). (38)

Once the Raja came and the queen uttered these words, "You take me along with you to the jungle where you are hunting deer and killing other animals." (39)

The Raja took her along with him, where he used to hunt the deer. He made the deer run and then killed it with an arrow. This game play was being watched by Kolcila. (40)

Then the queen said like this. "O Raja ! Listen to my words ! I could kill the deer with the arrows of my eyes even. You stand here and watch this fun. (41)

Leaving aside her face-cover, she came running and the deer seeing her beauty got enamoured with it. When the deer watched her extreme charm, it would not move without having any fear (of being killed). (42)

When the queen caught the deer with her hand and Risalu watched this game play he became furious with rage and chopping his ears made it run away. (43)

When the deer saw its ears cut off, then he came underneath the Hodi palace. When the Raja of Sindh saw him, he rode his horse and rushed after him. (44)

Then the deer came running underneath the palace of Kolcila. The Raja of Hodi saw Kokila's beauty then he was hit by the arrow of the god of love (Kamdev). (45)

When Kokila saw Hodi, she laughed and remarked, "Come and let us sit together and no one will know this secret." (46)

The Raja Hodi got down from his horse and entered the palace and had cohabitation with Kokila. He went away after the sexual companionship and came again the next day. (47)

Then the bird maina (the black bird) said, "O Kokila ! Have you become mad !" Hearing these words of the bird, she killed her (bird). Then the parrot remarked to her. (48)

Then the Raja said like this, "O dear queen Kokila ! Listen. 1 have already lost a deer, which getting frightened was hiding somewhere in these plants." (61)

Raja Risalu had remarked these words hinting at Raja Hodi, while Kokila took it to be referring to the deer." So she told the Raja ! If you say so, 1 will get the deer killed and feed you its flesh (meat)." (62)

Then Kokila felt overjoyed as whatever she had thought in mind had happened actually also. The foolish queen did not see through this secret. Then Raja Risalu went away for the deer, leaving her (Kokila) behind. (63)

Raja Risalu holding his bow and arrow came to the stairs and stood there with the wall. When Hodi came there by walking then Risalu laughed and said. (64)

"I am telling you to launch an attack on me by supporting your weapons. Hodi, being frightened was trembling and could not hold on to his weapons. Then Risalu shot an arrow by stretching his bow." (65)

With the striking of the arrow, Hodi fell down on the ground and (succumbed to) died with one wound only. Risalu took out his flesh and after roasting it brought it to Kokila. (66)

When Kokila ate this flesh she liked its taste being saltish and she enjoyed it at heart. "O Rajan ! There was no other meat so tasty and 1 am thoroughly pleased at heart." (67)

Then Risalu said, "I had caught hold of the deer with whom you had enjoyed a sexual relationship, while he was alive and after his death you had eaten his flesh." (68)

When the queen Kokila, got a bit of this hint, then her colour changed from red to pale yellow. She said, "Cursed be my life in this world and cursed be the person who had killed my friend (paramour)." (69)

Couplet :

On hearing the death of Hodi the queen Kokila pulled out a dagger from the Raja's waist and struck it to her heart. Having struck her chest and keeping fixed Hodi's face in her eyes, she fell down from the palace. (70)

So by striking the dagger in her stomach she fell down from the palace top; for a while she was heaving with sighs and then she gave up her life. (71)

Chopaiee :

Falling down from the palace she came down on the ground and with a shameful face she went to hell. Then Risalu walked up to her and then gave their flesh (both of them) to the dogs to eat. (72)

Couplet :

"If a woman, leaving her husband goes to someone else, then she deserves this sort of punishment immediately and why not ?" (73)(1)

There was a Jat Ranjha (farmer) living on the banks of Chander Bhaga river (Chenab). Any young girl (belle) who would have a glance of him, would get enamoured by his charm (would occupy cot on seeing him). (1)

Chopaiee :

On seeing him with their eyes, the women would get enamoured by his beauty. It appeared as if a deer, getting hit with an arrow, would fall down. They were feeling greatly pleased on sighting him and were repeating his name "Ranjha" all the time. (2)

The cycle of time moved in such a manner that a famine gripped the land there. There was no one left alive in the area (land) and only the person having some money was left safe. (3)

There was a queen by the name of Chittar Devi in the town who had a son called Ranjha. No one else was left alive in the house except the mother and the son. (4)

When the queen was tormented with hunger badly she took up a tattered cloth (beggar's dress) around her body after selling the child. She would go to various homes for grinding wheat etc. and would eat left overs from the kitchen. (5)

So she died finally due to hunger. Then the Lord Almighty blessed the area with heavy rain (showers), so that all the dried up plants became green and there were signs of victory (with beat of drums) everywhere. (6)

There only Ranjha was left alive, as all his relatives had died. The person who had bought Ranjha, looked after him and sustained him well and he was grown up like his son. (7)

"So far we have talked about Ranjha now let us talk about Heer. Now I would relate her story and please your heart with her anecdote." (10)

Aril :

In the town of Inder Rai (Inderpuri) there lived a fairy and all used to call her by the name of Main Kala. Any Raja, who would see her charming beauty would get involved in passionate love for her and would reel down thus falling on the ground. (11)

Chopaiee :

Kapil Muni came to her assembly, so he got a chance of sighting Mainka and on seeing her, the Muni lost (discharged) his semen. Due to this the Muni got furious with rage and cursed her. (12)

So Heer Said :-

Swaiyya :

If he goes out, I will go out with him, when he comes back home then 1 would follow him at home. If the lover sits at home being obstinate, then she would also sit back home, keeping his image at heart. "O friend ! I am so much overpowered by sleep and I do not have any rest even in dreams. This Ranjha does not leave me in peace even during day or night, whether sleeping or being awake (I have no peace of mind due to his thoughts only)." (20)

Chopaiee :

She was always reciting the name of Ranjha and was remembering him all the time, whether sleeping or being awake. She would always find him in her company whether sitting, standing, walking, moving about, he was always along with her (in her company). (21)

Whosoever Heer would see, she would find Ranjha in him and think as such in her mind. She had gone devoid of hunger, sleep (lost all hunger etc.) as her love had reached such proportions (developed extreme love for him). (22)

She was transformed into the form of Ranjha, just as a drop of water, mingles with water (without any distinction). Her condition (state of mind) was such as that of a deer who, on seeing the hunter, comes towards the hunter, being tied (attracted) towards him on his own. (23)

Mostly it is heard that a sword could cut anything into two pieces, but those smitten by the sword of separation become one entity from two different forms. (25)

Ranjha and Heer had become one entity due to their love for each other, though physically they were two different bodies to look at, while in actual fact they had taken the form of one body (frame) only. (26)

Chopaiee :

The love of Heer for her beloved was such that she had lost all her sense of proportion (consciousness) and she was transformed into the form of Ranjha only and forgetful of any modesty (shame) she became mad (in her love for him). (27)

Then Chuchak thought to himself that this girl would not live any longer, so she should be given to the family of Khera's (in marriage) and this needed to be done without any further delay. (28)

So they called the Kheras immediately and marrying Heer (with their son) she was sent along with them. Ranjha went along with them as a (saint) beggar. When he got a chance while begging, he took her to heavens (died). (29)

When Heer and Ranjha mingled with each other (after death) then all their pangs of suffering were alleviated. When their mortal lives had finished (their time in the world) then both followed the path towards heavens. (30)

Couplet :

Then Ranjha became Indra and Heer became Mainca. In this world the poets fraternity always sing the praises of both (their love) with great patience (regard for their true love). (3I)(1)

Chopaiee :

There lived a woman in Pothohar who was known in the whole world as Rudar Kal. The muslim religious leaders would visit her home daily and would take away money from her by frightening her (at fear of death). (1)

One day she did not give any money to them, then the Maulvis got enraged and picking up Koran in their hands, they came to her house. (2)

They said, " You have shown disrespect to the Rasool (prophet) by throwing blasphemy at him. Hearing these words, the woman got frightened at heart. She made the Maulvis sit at home (await in her house) and told the (governer) in-charge Mohabat Khan about this thing. (3)

He sent his infantry men immediately to her house who were (seated) hidden in the house. She made food and served the Mulanas with this food and herself told them like this. (4)

"I have not used any blasphemy against the prophet. Tell me my mistake, if any. If I show any disrespect to the prophet, I would prefer to die by striking my dagger."

(5)

Whatever money you want to take from me, you may take but do not inflict this as a fault of mine (disrespect). The Mulanas than said that for the greed of money only, we were saying this and they said this while laughing. (6)

Once a battle was raging between the gods and demons and Indra (god) had asked for the help of Raja Dasrath and called him. (2)

Chopaiee :

Indra sent his emissary to go immediately and call (bring) Raja Dasrath along with his army. "He should leave all his household chores and should fight in the battle from our side. (3)

Couplet :

The emissary sent by Indra, told Dasrath whatever the master had told him to convey. (4)

Chopaiee :

Whatever Indra had told him .he conveyed to Dasrath in toto. On hearing this, Kaikaiee followed the basis of all this. So Kaikaiee told Dasrath "That if you go then I will accompany you; but if you do not go then I will also remain here. If you do not allow me the freedom to do accordingly, then I will immolate myself in the fire." (5)

Kaikaiee had developed great love for the king. So the Raja taking Kaikaiee along with him proceeded to the battlefield. Kaikaiee said, " I will serve you. O Master ! If you get killed in battle, then I will burn myself in the fire (and give away my life)." (6)

The Raja of Auyodhya immediately started off for the battlefield where the demons and gods were at war and where arrows like bajar and weapons like scorpions were being showered and the warriors were getting furious and stretching their bows. (7)

Bhujang Chhand :

Indra along with his forces went to the place, where both the gods and demons were engaged in fighting and challenging one another and the warriors being furious with rage, were thundering and were attacking each other with swords drawrn out. (8)

The gods had runaway from the field with the demons shooting arrow's and the warriors of Indra had also given the slip, leaving behind Indra alone. A great battle raged with Indra while Raja Dasrath also took a leading part in the battle. (9)

On one side was Indra along with Raja Dasrath w'hile on the other side were mighty demons. The stubborn warriors from both sides were not relenting. They were surrounded from all the four sides as if with the blowing of wind dark clouds had gathered. (10)

A fierce battle was fought between the gods and the demons and a great warrior (with canopy overhead) was still adamant and fighting, whom all the seven worlds had known and the demons made a sudden attack against him. (11)

The obstinate demons getting enraged advanced closer and surrounded Raja Dasrath from all the four sides. Bajar and others were involved in launching the attacks with shooting of arrow's and the mighty demons were shouting 'Kill him'. (12)

The proud stubborn warriors were not relenting at all and great many mighty warriors were being slain, who were furious with rage. War drums were being sounded from the four corners. The Maru Rag was being played and the great warriors were roaring. (13)

Many were challenged and killed and many were frightened into submission while many were hit with the shield's and many were chewed with teeth even. Many warriors were making noise only creating confusion all around and many warriors with canopies overhead had died fighting in the battlefield. (14)

Couplet :

Then a great mighty demon came forward from amongst the demons and with shooting of many arrows, killed the charioteer of Dasrath. (15)

Chopaiee :

When the mother of Bharat (Kaikaiee) heard about it that the charioteer of the great son (Dasrath) was killed, she herself dressed up like a warrior and took charge of Dasrath's chariot as a charioteer. (16)

She steered the chariot in such a manner that not a single arrow could hit Raja Dasrath. Wherever the Raja intended to go, Kaikaiee would take the chariot there for action. (17)

Kaikaiee was steering the chariot so deftly that the Raja could wherever he desired, reach there to kill the enemy. The dust rising from the battlefield was touching the sky, while the swords were shining like the lightning. (18)

Some were cut into pieces by the Raja and some were cut from the waist. Raja Dasrath getting furious with rage had thundered in the battlefield and Maru Rag was played in the battlefield. (19)

Couplet :

In the battlefield countless conch shells, clarionets, Kaure, turhi, and bhor (musical instruments) were being played and thousands of muchang, small drums and kettle drums were being sounded producing musical tunes. (20)

Bhujang Chhand :

The cowards on hearing the thunder of warriors were fleeing away and some dreadful notes were being produced by great drums. The ghosts had thronged the place and the warriors with canopies overhead were facing steadfastly with great fury. (21)

Millions of unsheathed swords were seen in hands and many youthful warriors were seen falling down in the battlefield and the warriors were in great trouble as weapons, daggers and swords were being freely used. (22)

Much of weaponary (iron) was clattering and many warriors had fallen dead or run away. Many had come to the battlefield in groups. Bullets and arrows were shot so fiercely as if the (rain) torrents of the month of Asuj (Sept) were falling heavily (rain of dark clouds). (23)

There was much fierce fighting with weapons (iron) clashing with each other (producing sound) which pleased the warriors greatly. Somewhere ghosts and evil spirits were dancing and singing while at places evil spirits were seen sucking the blood. (24)

Many smart and sturdy warriors were moving around and somewhere warriors were being killed and thrown around, while elsewhere warriors were shooting arrows by stretching the bows, while else where the warriors were being dragged with their hair. (25)

Somewhere Parbati was making a necklace of skulls while Shiva was singing the Raga Maru, while elsewhere the evil-spirits were furious with rage and making shrieking noise, while at places warriors were dying on their own (without being hit). (26)

At places drums, clarionets and lyres were being played and many a warrior were getting furious and thundering. Many warriors were killed with noose around their necks being thrown and gone to heavens, leaving their bodies. (27)

The gods had killed many demons on the battlefield and many had proceeded to heavens giving up their lives. Many wounded warriors were reeling around and it appeared as if addicts having consumed hemp were moving around in circles. (28)

The warriors, shouting 'to kill the enemy', had slain many of the proud Rajas with canopies overhead. Many arrows with wings attached had been shot in countless numbers and all the canopies were reduced to pieces in no time. (29)

A fierce and horrible battle was raging in all the four directions and challenges were being thrown all around. The poet Siam has stated that innumerable warriors had been killed there and had attained martyrdom by fighting in the battle. (30)

Chopaiee :

Wherever Dasrath desired, Kaikaiee would take the chariot there and she had steered the chariot so deftly that her beloved Raja was neither wounded nor any harm was done to him. (31)

Wherever Kaikaiee had taken, the Raja Dasrath had killed all the enemies. This warrior had fought so well that these news had spread throughout the world including Rome and Syria. (32)

A deer came in front of his horse and he followed him by racing his horse. He left the company of his troops while chasing the deer and reached the town of Bubana. (5)

When he was tormented by his thirst, he came to a garden of Bubana. He dismounted his horse and drank water and then felt sleepy. (6)

He slept there in deep slumber with great comfort and by the evening a woman came there. When that woman saw' such a youthful and charming person, she was possessed with passionate love (kamdev) like an arrow hitting her heart. (7)

On seeing his beauty she was enamoured by him and became her slave without a second thought. She was so much overpowered by his love that she lost all her hunger or sleep. (8)

Couplet :

The woman who gets involved in the love of her beloved, loses all her hunger and modesty (shyness) and all her cleverness gives way. (9)

The day she meets her beloved she feels the bliss of life and that comfort was not to be found in heavens even. (10)

Whosoever suffers the pangs of separation, she alone knows the suffering, just as the army commander losing a battle, leaves his troops in great suffering and tribulations. (11)

Then Bubana said-

"Which land's King are you and which c ›untry's Raja are you ? Why have you come here ? Tell me the secret of all this." (12)

Then Jalu said –

Chopaiee :

I am the son of the king of Thata and while on a hunting spree, 1 happened to land here. Being tired and after taking some water I went to sleep and have now got a chance to have your glance. (13)

Couplet :

On seeing his charm, the great lady became obsessed with his love, just as the rain drop mingles with the river. (14)

The love of the beloved completely occupied her heart and she forgot all her cleverness and she fell down on the ground being unconscious (being hit with the arrow of separation). (15)

Sortha :

There was no blood left in her body and the worldly modesty was also forsaken by her and the woman seeing the charm of the beloved was completely under his spell.(16)

Chopaiee :

"One day I shall attain the company of my beloved," (she said) "and I would sacrifice myself to that moment." Bitten by his separation (love) she became his slave, forgetting all her modesty (and shyness). (17)

Couplet :

Bubana on seeing him became under his magic spell and was caught in the pangs of separation (from him). She lost all her thirst and hunger and became his slave without any consideration. (18)

That woman had worn ornaments of thirty-two types and embellished herself with various beauty aids. For the love of her lover she even got a hole made in the nose. (19)

Both the lover and the beloved got involved in their love so much, that both had forgotten about their families or homes and hunger or modesty had completely vanished. (20)

Swaiyya :

Neither she could see anything, nor she would smile while walking and all her modesty (shyness) had vanished. She could not chew the betel nut even and could not sit at home either but was all the time lamenting (for her lover). Leaving the comforts of Indra-puri (like home) she could not bear the pangs of separation. "It is better to be hit by an arrow or a sword but one should not meet the loving eye of the beloved." (21)

Couplet :

When the mother saw Bubana, pulsating on the ground, then that wise woman could see through her suffering that she was suffering from the pangs of separation of someone. (22)

Chopaiee :

She was involved in the love of someone thus she had lost all her hunger and thirst. So something must be done to alleviate her pain, so that her pangs of separation were removed. (23)

She thought to herself and told her husband like this that "your daughter had grown young, so she should be betrothed somewhere." (24)

"Let us perform a huge Swambar for her, calling great many Rajas there. Your daughter will view all the Rajas and then wed someone she liked most out of them." (25)

In the morning, the Raja made this programme and gathered all the residents of the town. Many emissaries were sent to distant lands and kings from various lands were invited. (26)

Couplet :

Bubani was going daily to that garden and after meeting Shah Jalal would come back in the evening to her place. (27)

Chopaiee :

Both had developed love for each other to such an extent, that both had lost all worldly consciousness. They were looking beautiful like the lotus-roots (Vishnu). They were having, no doubt, two bodies but the same wave-length of love was pulsating in both. (28)

Couplet:

In the morning her father had called all the Rajas and asked his daughter to select a person of her own choice to be her spouse. (29)

Chopaiee :

She had already sounded him (Shah Jalal) that , " When I shall sight you with my glance, then I will adorn you with my necklace of flowers." So she called Shah Jalal also there. (30)

She rode a chariot to see the Rajas (for Swambar) and made a glance over them. When she saw Shah Jalal she gave the (flower) garland to him to wear around his neck (she threw the garland around his neck). (31)

Then many musical instruments were being played. It appeared as if Shah Jalu was being saluted everywhere, while all other (faces of) Rajas became pale as if they had been looted of their prize (by God). (32)

Couplet :

All the Rajas had turned pale and went back home (dejected). Then the love of Bubana and Jalu developed further. (33)

Chopaiee :

This woman had played this trick and came back as if a poor person had gained all the nine treasures of the world. Thus this woman came under his spell and became a part and parcel of Shah Jalal (became like Shah Jalal). (34)

Couplet :

The woman then made her lover to wear red coloured shining robes and then embracing him to her breasts, she enjoyed sensuous pleasure with him in many ways. (35)

Chopaiee :

They developed love to such an extent that people would sing songs about their love with affection. They were singing their fables while sleeping, being awake or going enroute thus this anecdote became popular throughout the world. (36)(1)

Here the one hundred and third episode of King's & Minister's dialogue regarding woman's characterization from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well.

(103-1935)(Contd)

Couplet :

There was the wife of a Jat who developed love for a thief and would enjoy his company by calling him at home daily. (1)

When he would see that the day had dawned (had appeared) a bit then he would tremble greatly in his heart. By stealing the heart of someone he would run away, leaving the opening (wide open) made in the building wall. (3)

Chopaiee :

"First by making a hole in the building wall, you should steal money from the house, then I will show it to my husband. Kazi and his clerk would all see that the thief had run away after making a hole in the wall (in that direction)." (4)

Couplet

She gave the thief lot of money and made him flee and told him, "After informing the Kotwal (Police Inspector) I will come to meet you." (5)

Chopaiee :

She gave the thief lot of money and then made him run away and making a hole (in the wall) raised a hue and cry. She woke up her husband and told him, "The money had been looted. The Master of this country had not imparted justice to us."

(6)

The woman then said-

She went to the Kotwal (Inspector) and cried to him saying, "Some thief had looted our wealth." All should reach there and do some justice to us." (7)

That woman then brought the Kazi and Kotwal at home and showed the gap in wall. On seeing this hole, even the spouse cried loudly "That the thieves had looted all their wealth." (8)

Couplet :

After showing the hole to the Kazi, Kotwal and her husband and taking out money from there, she went out and met the lover. (10)

Chopaiee :

All were saying and believed that she was not imparted justice. Being without money the woman had suffered heavily and had become an ascetic (Jogan) and gone to the Jungle. (11)(1)

Chopaiee :

Alimarda had a son called by the people as Taas Beg, who once saw a child of a jeweller and then he was possessed by a passionate desire of Kamdev (enemy of Mahadev). (I)

He would go to his house to see him and would be pleased to see him. Then he developed love for him and wanted to have sexual relations with him. So immediately he sent his emissary to that house. (2)

The emissary was making lot of efforts, but Mohan Rai was not coming into his grasp (would not agree). So he went back and informed Tas Beg accordingly, so he got enraged and he beat him. (3)

Having been beaten the emissary became furious with rage and considering him (Tas Beg) a fool he tried this means and said. Mohan had said, "I will come today." So "O Tas Beg ! You will get him to-day." (4)

On hearing these words the fool got puffed up and thought it to be true in his mind. After sending away other people he took some wine. Though being a human being, he was behaving like an animal (he became animal-minded). (5)

"Since the time I had seen Mohan I had become his slave (being bought over by him). Once I see him again, I will sacrifice all my body, soul and wealth on him." (6)

When the emissary saw him drunk and unconscious he broke an egg on his private parts. He (stole) took away his turban, clothes and ornaments, but the foolish person did not know about it. (7)

The fool was fully drunk and out of senses and could not regain consciousness till the next morning. The night had gone (finished) and the day had dawned. Then he tried to look after his body and mind and kept his cool. (8)

When his hand fell on his private parts then he got a shock and spoke like this. He called the attendant, who explained to him the whole secret (about what had happened). (9)

Couplet :

(He said), "You were unconscious being drunk with wine, so you could not appreciate anything. Due to my kindness Mohan Rai had come to your house." (10)

"Mohan had made you pleased and delighted by fondling with you greatly by various means. Then without having any second thought or doubts you had given him your jewellery, robes and clothes etc." (11)

"You had enjoyed sensuous pleasure with him and enjoyed his company. When the night was over and day had dawned, you had bid him farewell." (12)

"Then you had gone to sleep being completely drunk and thus half the day also had passed. When you gained consciousness after the drunken state, then you have called me." (13)

On hearing all this the fool felt happy and opening his wault (treasure) gave away lot of money to him. He never got to know the secret of all this move. So the attendant looted the money from him, which he had usurped from other people. (14)

This sort of deceitful action he was repeating daily, thus making him drunk and then making him sleep. When he would find him unconscious then he would remove anything he desired from his body and take away himself. (15)

Couplet :

The attendant was doing this sort of action daily and foolish Taas Beg could not follow anything. By making him drunk he grabbed (looted) all his money and took away his wealth. (16)(1)

They stopped at a distance of one Kos (11/2 Kil.) each and they thought over in mind and decided that if it passes ahead of anyone he should say like this. (2)

"Why are you carrying this dog on your shoulders ? What is wrong with your sense ? Throw it down on the ground and proceed with ease and comfort." (3)

Couplet :

"We are telling you this considering you a good person. You are carrying this dog on your shoulders and 1 am feeling ashamed of it." (4)

Chopaiee :

When that fool came walking that way, then all the four persons said this thing to him. He thought it to be true and felt ashamed in mind and left the goat thinking it to be a dog. (5)

Couplet :

All the four friends caught hold of the goat and then took it home and ate it (after killing it). That fool let go the goat and hurriedly went away home without realizing the deceit behind their action. (6)(1)

There was a Jat by the name of Jodhan Dev, whose wife was Maen Koer. When Jodhan Dev would go to sleep his wife would go to her paramour. (1)

When the lucky Jodhan went to sleep then Maen Koer got up (woke up) and leaving the husband she went away to her paramour. She glanced at the hole in the wall. (2)

Then she came back to her home and then woke up Jodhan Dev, saying, " Why have you lost your senses, that a theft (by making a hole in wall) had occurred and you had not seen it yet." (3)

After Jodhan got up all other people also got awakened. The thieves then fled away from the house. Many of the thieves were killed or caught and tied while some had run away out of fear. (4)

Jodhan Dev was very happy that his wife had saved his home. He praised his wife much, but the fool did not realize the secret behind it. (5)

She had saved her house and the thieves were punished and had woken up the paramour. So Maen Koer deserves our salutations truly. (6)

Couplet :

One day Sri Kapil Muni went to some place and seeing a fairy he became under her spell. "O wise Raja ! You (better) listen to this episode." (1)

On seeing the beauty of Rambha the semen of the Muni spilt immediately on the ground. (2)

When the semen of the Muni fell (on the ground) Rambha became pregnant and from that pregnancy a gjnJ was born to her. Throwing that child in the river Sindh, she went away to heavens (passed away). (3)

Chopaiee :

Being washed away down the river the girl reached a place, where the Raja of Sindh was living (ruling). Brahm Dutt Raja saw that girl with his eyes and getting her removed from the river, he brought her up as his own daughter. (4)

She was named Sasya and served her by all means. When she had grown up to youth (to a young belle) the Raja thought to himself. (5)

He thought of Raja Punnu to be her spouse, so he sent an emissary to him. On hearing these words Punnu came there and the Raja made arrangements for the marriage.(6)

All the people of the town playing various musical instruments gathered together and came there. All were joining together and singing songs and on glancing at Sasya they were all praise for her (getting sacrificed on her). (8)

Couplet :

Many types of musical instruments like clarionet, Kanra and drums were being played. All the women including young, old and children came there to see her (and none was left at home). (9)

Chopaiee :

Not a single woman was left at home (remained at home) and they were all overjoyed to see the charming beauties of both Punnu and Sasya (were all sacrifice to them who (Which) was Punnu out of the Two ? (Question being asked) (and the answer was) "the person who was glorified by holding the green coloured mace in hand." (10)

Swaiyya :

In all the houses, drums and mirdang were being beaten (played) and there was lot of hue and cry (noise) in the whole town. The residents of the town were singing songs and clapping their hands and were abusing loudly. At one time only thousands of lyres (clarionets) were being played and young beautiful women (belles) were laughing. All were blessing them saying, "O Lord ! This couple (made by you) may live long throughout the four Yugas (millennia). (11)

On seeing the charming beauty of the Raja the town residents were getting overjoyed with comfort. Men and women had thronged there and all had forgotten about their worries or sufferings. Due to the virtuous deeds enacted during their previous births, they had been blessed with a loveable (as desired) mate. They were saying, while moving up and down "O young belle ! May your spouse live long !" (12)

The girls sprinkled saffron on the marriage party with great eclat. Both men and women were feeling delighted and were looking gorgeous while singing songs from all the four corners. On seeing the charm of Raja (Punnu) the people felt that the other Rajas appeared pale before him (as compared to him). They were laughing heartily and saying, "O darling Princess ! We are all praise for your beloved (spouse) (all sacrifice to him). (13)

As an auspicious omen, seven married women were rubbing his body with some pulp (Vatna) and the women were losing their consciousness on seeing his charm. The poet on seeing his beauty has remarked in praise, "as if the moon had appeared in all its glory among the stars." (14)

On the doors of Raja of Sindh the sounds of the conch shells of (gods) Indra and sun along with their musical instruments were being heard. The flute was also being heard with its sweet musical tunes while the drums of various gods were beating loudly. The drums of victory were being played (beaten) in the palace of the Raja (of Sindh) and mouth organs with beautiful tunes were being played there. On the completion of marriage (ceremonies) of the Raja, many musical instruments with enjoyable tunes started playing. (15)

When the marriage of Punnu was solemnized (with Sasya) on one side, then the other queens of Punnu heard about this news. They were shocked and wonder struck. Previously they were different and now they had changed into something else. (They were unwilling to accept the new Co-wife of their husband). They read many mantras and wrote many jantras (magical spells) and with all this witchcraft they (prayed) thought that the newly wed (beloved) princess would always remain gloomy and morose and should not be loved by the spouse (beloved). (16)

Chopaiee :

Thus Sasya became gloomy and sad losing all her sleep and hunger. She was asleep and got up suddenly wondering but nothing would please her. She would try to run out of the palace (house). (17)

Couplet :

Then Sasya with a sure thought in mind (found this solution) made an effort (to overcome) and called all her wise and clever lady attendants (friends) to her side (for consultations). (18)

Chopaiee :

Then the friends (attendants) found this solution and with some magic spells (witchcraft) they managed to call Punnu. He developed great love for Sasya and forgot about the previous queens. (19)

He would be engaged in various kinds of love affair with her and for him one year's span was like one day. He was attached so much to her that he totally gave up all his state functions or other household chores. (20)

Having attained her, firstly, a woman, the: very clever (wise) and thirdly very youthful, he always wanted her to be close to his bosom. He could not afford to leave her for a moment even. (21)

Chopaiee :

Sasya was also enjoying sensuous pleasure with him day and night and he was considered by her dearer than her life even (very dear). All the time she was attracted towards his besom just as a fly gets attached to the raw-sugar (molasses. (22)

Swaiyya :

With the very thought of her beloved that woman felt overjoyed and both the woman and the man were involved in their love affairs all the time and seeing each other were delighted to the maximum (would sacrifice on the other). Due to her passionate love for him, Sasya whose brilliance matched that of the moon, would laugh on meeting his glances. That Sasya was madly in love with her beloved and was never satiated having attained such a charming partner. (23)

Kabit:

Due to her youthful (buoyancy) charm, her love had reached extreme limits (forcefully), which was very different for the oppressive Punnu from the world as such she had lost all sense of proportion (her consciousness) she was always enamoured by his charming personality just as a king gets tuned to his stately functions (kingdom) completely (being forgetful of other activities) she would embellish him with ornamental things herself without the help of her attendants. She was always closeted to his bosom (in his embrace) and would offer herself in sacrifice to him with closed lips. That beloved only knew how to maintain that sort of continuous love for her lover. The charming beauty of the beloved wa very alluring while his eyes were bewitching and invaluable. She felt her heart had been won over by his tilted eyes completely (having paid the price). (25)

Swaiyya :

That woman (Sasya), seeing the fountain (treasure) of charming beauty of her beloved spouse was elated in her mind. With the very thought of the beloved spouse, she would feel that the wisdom (cleverness) of all her attendants was of no avail to her. Her attendants had given up all their shyness and pomp and show and were watching her closely by trying to stop their mind from interfering in anyway as they were also impressed by her intense love for the beloved. (26)

Then Sasiya said -

"O friend ! Without the presence of his company my whole body is aroused by the passionate love of Kamdev (enemy of Shiva) and since then I have no liking (interest) for anything else and all my cleverness including hunger and thirst has vanished. I want to get rid of his love with a stroke (from my mind) but his attraction is so much that I cannot overcome it by any means, whatsoever. I had gone to swindle a cheat but could not succeed and instead got myself swindled by the cheat himself. I am all sacrifice to him (wonderful man)." (27)

After saying these words, she came out of her house and bought a horse after paying ten lakh (1 million) rupees). When she would ride that horse it would move off swiftly (like wind) seeing which even Indra's horse would feel ashamed (belittled). (5)

She had covered herself with glamorous robes, which were fitted with ornaments. Her long tresses (hair) were resting on her shoulders as if they were throwing (spreading) their fragrance all around. (6)

By putting collyrium in her eyes she had embellished herself beyond comparison (looted even ornamentation). Her loving tresses were looking glorious like a chain, seeing which all the gods, men, snakes and demons were all getting enticed. (7)

Her heavy eye-brows were looking glamorous like a bow as that alluring figure was enamouring all the fourteen worlds. Whosoever would get a glance of her would lose his sense of proportion. (8)

Couplet :

Kartikya got six faces, Shiva had five faces and Brahma got four faces but none could get at the secret of her grace. (9)

Chopaiee :

She had worn various weapons on the body (limbs) which were embellished with various instruments (musical). Her face was glorified with jewels and pearls in the world, as if stars were trying to enamour the moon. (10)

Swaiyya :

That woman was armed with many beautiful weapons, while the (body) limbs were glorified with various strange weapons and a necklace of rubies was shining round her neck which was having a radiance comparable to the sun's brightness. Various lines of pearls were glorifying her face. The eyes of the beauty were embellished with collyrium like a deer, which were enamouring everyone's heart around as if Sri Krishna had decorated them (himself) personally. (11)

Her beautiful tresses (of hair) were falling on her shoulders while a beautiful turban was looking glamorous on her head. All the limbs were beautified with shining ornaments. That godly appearance was looking lovable to all, while the women were looking at him as their beloved when he would walk to the courtyard with airs (coquettishly). Many women of the gods and demons were getting enticed by him thus losing their senses even and on seeing him even their chastity was being demolished (thrown to the winds). (12)

After wearing her ornaments she rode her chariot and tied her sword and the quiver. Chewing the betel nut she was looking glamorous and had thrown both the gods and demons into doubtful positions Indra with his thousand eyes, seeing her beauty could not get at its limits. Creating this beauty with His own hands and fixing his eyes on her (even Indra) could not gauge its limits. (13)

Chewing the betel nuts with a dignified manner, she was armed with ornamented ornaments. That charming woman with collyrium in her eyes was alluring both the gods and demons. That woman was wearing a necklace of pearls around her neck along with bangles and golden rings. Many demi-gods, Kinars (mythological horse with human face) Bhujangs and people from ten directions were watching her. (14)

Indra with thousands eyes could not gauge the extent (depth) of her beauty. Sheshnag with countless fangs was singing her praises but without gauging, its extent. To watch the complete version of the sari (the dress) of the loving woman, Shiva had developed five faces, his son (Kartikya) had got six faces, While Brahma had made as such he was known as the god with four faces. (15)

The gold, parrot, moon, lion, the partridge, pigeon and elephant were all clamouring. The sister of Kalap tree (Lachhmi) and pomegranate seeing her charm were all praise for her (had sold themselves for her beauty) charm. All the gods and demons were enamoured by her charm on sighting her while the men and gods were getting mad on seeing her beauty. From her limbs the young belle appeared like a princess but could not be exactly traced (explained). (16)

Couplet :

Ravana with ten heads speaks (about her qualities) and writes about it with his twenty arms but could not gauge the depth (extent) of her beauty. (17)

Swaiyya :

She was wearing an ornament studded with jewels on her head while a necklace of pearls was looking glorious around her neck. Even Kamdev (the god of love) was feeling abashed (belittled) by seeing the glamour of her beautiful ornaments. By seeing her one's happiness and bliss (of mind) gets exalted while the suffering of body take to their wings (get alleviated). The exuberance of her youthful charm was akin to the glorified presence of Indra among various gods. (18)

The youthful beauty had loosened the strings of her inner garments and had embellished herself with beauty aids while chewing the betel nuts. She had put collyrium in both her eyes while a vermillion mark (round) was made on her forehead. While turning her neck around the ear-rings get lowered which according to the poet Ram appeared as if the mind of the rival wives was bundled and sent to the prison. (19)

She had beatified herself with all sorts of embellishments while the loose black hair tresses were looking glamourous on her head. Her charming fragrance was spread all around, on seeing which the Munis (ascetics) forgetting their penance feel repentant about their (mis) behaviour. The demi-gods mythological horse with human face, Bhujang and women from all the ten directions were coming to see her (beauty). The women folk of celestial singers, gods and the demons were all sacrifice to her charming appearance (were enjoying her beauty even at the cost of their lives). (20)

One day that woman did like this. She accepted the salutations of the subjects, while she was seated in the loft and sent for all the warriors. Hearing this Urbasi also got to know the secret (of her move). (28)

She also got herself embellished with all her ornaments and came out of her house. She rode on a dark (black) horse and was looking glamorous as if the moon was also feeling ashamed (belittled) during the night. (29)

On her shoulders her black tresses of curly hair were looking glorious and her ornaments were shining beautifully and it is beyond me to narrate it All the gods and demons were getting enamoured at her beauty, while the Rajas were equally baffled at her charm. All the people of the three worlds were trying to look at her leaving all their worries by stopping the woman (on her way). (30)

That beautiful woman had embellished herself with beauty aids and had put collyrium in her eyes. She had worn very glittering robes as if she had completely enamoured Kamdev (god of love) to shed his pride (egoism). She was riding a horse with great delight having ornamented herself with a plume and head ornaments (gaj gah) and her curly hair. This woman had enticed all the women with her charm (without spending any penny). (31)

The plume and turban (end) were looking glamorous being studded with jewels (rubies) along with some other ornaments of the head. She was wearing many necklaces around the neck seeing which Kamdev was being allured. She was trotting her horse while chewing the betel nut and smiling being ornamented. The poet Siam says "It appears she had come to allure the women of this world." (32)

Or are you Kalindri's (Jamna's) Master (Sri Krishna), or Varuna or tell me which Raja's son are you? O my Lord ! For what purpose have you left your country to serve here in this guise ? (37)

Urbasi then replied, "Neither I am Kuber, moon or sun nor I am appearing glamorous in the guise of beauty in this world. Neither I am Sheshnag, Indra, Ganesh or Mahesh nor Jagdish (Lord) as stated in the Vedas. Neither I am the spouse of Kalindri (Krishna) nor Vaman Incarnation in the form of a beggar or Varuna but I am the son of a Raja in the south. My name is Mohan and am going to my in-laws place. Swaiyya :

"O beautiful lady ! I have come here after traversing thousands of miles on hearing about your glory. I will not feel frightened if I get company on this auspicious occasion of today. But it is the custom in our clan (family) not to glance any other woman except the (our) wife. You enjoy in comfort and watch the fun and frolic here but bid me farewell to proceed to my in-laws place." (39)

When she heard the words of bidding farewell, she felt greatly upset at heart as it did not appeal to her. The woman was red faced like gulal (dry colours used in Holi) but her face became pale immediately. She started beating her breast with her hands and the marks made by the finger rings On the breast were such as if to see the beloved , both the eyes of the woman's heart had opened up (her heart was keenly watching the beloved). (40)

Couplet :

"My heart is pining to meet you but the bodies cannot be mingled. The tongue of the woman should get burnt who wanted to bid you farewell." (41)

Then the queen said, "Stay with us for few days and talk nice words (things) to us. Why have you developed so much love for the in-laws. Take charge of this kingdom and rule over this land as a king. By raising your hand give me those things for which my heart was pining for. On seeing you, Kamdev (god of love) had overtaken my heart due to which I have gone mad, having lost my sleep and hunger. Do not go there and make my bed more beautiful (with your company). O Master ! You had developed a wrong attachment." (42)

"I will serve you to my utmost (by standing on one leg) and will fetch water for you being your slave (attendant) and would wed you only. Pray fulfil this desire of mine. Take charge of this kingdom and give me something to eat with your own hands. O darling ! Develop greater love for me, so that my life becomes worthwhile. Whatever you would ordain I shall obey that and would go wherever you desire (order) me to go. O Master ! Have pity on me on seeing my state of mind. So stay with me talk nicely and smilingly and talk to me sweetly and do not even think of going to your in-laws place." (43)

Urbasi then replied, "O beautiful woman! Listen. If I keep company (sexual) with you, leaving my wife then my moral turpitude (conduct) is badly affected. So you should continue ruling your country with dignity and occupy these palaces. Since the time I have appeared (taken birth) in the world I have not cast an evil eye on any other woman, discarding my moral code of conduct. Why are you interested in me? You should have patience in mind and meditate on the Lord (Raghunath)."

(44)

"O my (dear) beloved ! Even if you try your best (millions of efforts) I will not forego my desire to enjoy sensuous pleasure with you. So how could you avoid me ? (run away from me). I will only wed you nicely today. If you do not meet me today (If I do not get you today), then I shall take poison and give up my life. By that time the woman had reached her house and filled with passionate love she embraced him. She did not know her secrets and took Urbasi for a male person.(54)

When she had cohabitation with him (her) and felt greatly satisfied at heart. By that time with the poison taking its tool, she became unconscious and went to the valley of death (died). (55)

When Urbasi had killed her, then she went to heavens. Where the god of death had organized his assembly and Urbasi had reached that place. (56)

The god of death (Kaal) gave her lot of money and said, "You have done a great job for me. The woman, who had killed her spouse had been destroyed (killed) by you in such a manner." (57)

Swaiyya :

There was a king of Eastern (land) country named Rupeshwar who resembled Kuber. The Lord had made him very beautiful in that even the enemy of demons, Indra was not comparable to him. He had a bulky body like a mountain and in case of a calamity he alone could match the enemy in the battlefield. He could crush the enemy into pieces and was as charming as (Kamdev) god of love. (1)

Chopaiee :

He was not blessed with a son and this was the worry of the subjects (in mind). Then his mother being bothered to madness, calied a woman to herself (to meet her). (2)

She saw a princess and told the Raja to wed her. She brought her to the Raja's town but she did not appeal to (the Raja) Rupeshwar. (3)

People were tired of telling the Raja but he did not marry her and forgot about her. But that obstinate woman was very stubborn and remained at the place of Raja for many years. (4)

Swaiyya :

The (father of this princess), the Raja became furious with rage and attacked Rupeshwar. When he heard (Rupeshwar) about it, he called out his whole army and with the beating of drums and trotting ill horse with fury, he launched an attack on the enemy as if Brahmputra river with its many tributaries had flown to mingle with the ocean (in a torrent). The warriors from both the sides attacked with great fury by stretching their bows and shooting arrows. Many mighty warriors were falling down with thuds in the battlefield and were slain with the swords, being cut into pieces. (6)

The ghosts and evil spirits were dancing in the battlefield while the vultures and jackals were dragging away human flesh. Many stubborn warriors were being cut into pieces while fighting and wedding the fairies, were proceeding to heavens. (7)

Couplet :

With arrows like powerful men, and spears, the warriors were fighting facing one another and were suddenly falling on the ground, thus proceeding to heavens. (8)

Swaiyya :

Horrible weapons were being used in ihe battlefield and who could dare to oppose them? Countless horses, infantry men, charioteers, chariots were killed in the battlefield. Who could keep an account of these ? There was an heap of weapons like swords, bayonets, tridents and wheels but who could keep an estimate of these in the mind ? Those who are killed in the battlefield cannot be brought back alive again. (9)

Innumerable warriors having shields, maces, axes and dreadful tridents in hand and with spears, jamdhar, knives, swords etc. faced death after fighting in the battlefield. Saying that the life span in this world was very short and temporary and trotting their horses, they were advancing forward. The warriors getting furious with rager facing wounds from the onslaughts of the enemy, were not retreating from their positions. (10)

The poet Siam has said that warriors from both sides, covering their faces with shields were engaged in fighting. Countless arrows fixed by the young warriors on their bows were being shot. Somewhere Rajas were lying dead, while at places crowns were lying scattered on the field, while somewhere else charioteers were lying dead and at places cut off hands were lying scattered. The enemy like clouds were being dispersed before the warriors moving like the wind. (11)

The warriors were attacking in columns, while striking the enemy with wheels or guns. The chests of the mighty warriors were being pierced through with arrows like the drills, cutting through the sandal wood with holes. Like the black deer sans their heads, feet and waists, the warriors were falling down. With a huge army collection, he broke through the walls of the enemy with the killing of many mighty despots. (12)

Chopaiee :

Thus the Raja won the battle and then proceeded towards his palace. The princess also heard the news of the Raja Rupeshwar, having come back after winning the battle. (13)

She then dressed herself in red coloured beautiful robes and holding cocoanuts in both hands having distributed all the wealth she had* and she assumed the guise of a Sati. (14)

The woman got a pyre made on the same route which the Raja was supposed to follow. In the meantime the Raja reached there and saw the (woman) Sati. (15)

The Raja laughed and looked at her and calling the attendant near him said, "Go and find out who was this woman going to commit immolation (Sati). (16)

Couplet :

Hearing the words of the Raja the emissary reached there and finding out the details (secret) of the woman about to commit immolation, came back and related to the Master all the details. (17)

Chopaiee :

On hearing the words of the woman, the Raja was thrilled and was praising and saluting that woman. (He said), " I had not developed any love for this woman but she was prepared to give up her life for my sake." (18)

"In fact, I curse myself for not realizing this fact so far and had not got married to her so far. All those women with whom I had developed love, none of them came to my help." (19)

So now I shall marry her immediately and shall continue loving her so long my body is alive. Now I make her free from any further test also. She had already burnt herself for my sake, so it is no use burning her bodily any more. (20)

The fire pyre, which that woman had prepared (for immolation) was used for circum-ambulation (around it) considering it as the fire of separation and thus the Lord had converted that poor woman into a queen. (21)

Thus with this deceitful action, that woman had attained (the love of) the Raja. The Raja had then forsaken all other queens from his mind. She had thus diverted the Raja under her control (spell) as if she had bought a slave. (22)

Couplet :

From that day onwards the Raja's love for that woman increased immensely and she attained the bliss of life and the Raja was made to forget all other queens from his mind. (23)(1)

(110-2106)(Contd)

Chopaiee :

There was a great king by the name of Durjan Singh, who was being saluted (worshipped) by all people from the four corners (of world). All were allured by his charming personality and the subjects were very happy and satisfied. (1)

Couplet:

Whsoever would visit that county would get enamoured by his charming personality, thus forgetting his own whereabouts and would settle (in that town) there only like a slave of the Raja. (2)

Chopaiee :

When the Raja would go out for hunting then he would get many deer caught through his dogs, along with hawks and water hens and would dish out lot of money to beauties. (3)

He would kill many deer everyday and would always roam around the jungles only. He would shoot the arrows with both the hands and no animal could escape from death (at his hands). (4)

One day the Raja had gone for hunting spree and seeing a black deer got allured to it. He wanted to catch the deer alive from the horns without causing any harm (wound) to him. (5)

On sighting the deer, he raced his horse and came following him. When the deer reached the foreign land, then no other attendant could reach there. (6)

There was a princess by the name of Raj Prabha, who was very dear to the Raja. He had a grand palace, which was as high as the moon. (7)

There was a river Tapti flowing near by, which was called by the world (people) the daughter of sun. There the birds were picking food (with beak) and looking glorious, which would allure the hearts of onlookers. (8)

The Raja managed to push the deer into the place with a latticed window inside the palace. By racing the horse the Raja made the deer tired and caught hold of the deer with its horns. (9)

This scene was watched by the princess and thought to herself (in her mind). "I shall marry this Raja right now or else I shall kill myself with a dagger (10)

She developed such a love for the Raja which could not be separated by anyone. She called the Raja with the signs of her eyes and enjoyed sensuous pleasure with him. (11)

They formed a perfect couple like that of Radha and Krishna. He was twisting her hands some how, as if a penniless person was searching for money. (12)

The Raja was embracing her time and again as if the pride of Kamdev (god of love) was being destroyed (removed). By keeping her legs on his shoulders he was having sexual relationship with her as if Kamdev had tied two quivers. (13)

They had many types of cohabitation and the woman enjoyed his companionship in many ways. By holding her he embraced her many times as if a poor person had gained all the nine treasures of the world. (14)

She had enjoyed the paramour's love in many ways along with his cohabitation and kisses which cannot be recounted. That woman was laughing and smiling and was completely attached to his body. The robes of the woman, gold plated and studded with jewels were shining like the lightning in the clouds. Seeing her charming radiance all the friends (attendants) were trying to copy it. (15)

Her body was (shining) beautiful like the gold and the eye-lashes of her smart eyes were very sharp. They were pleasing like wagtail (very attractive eyes) to the mind. Both the gods and demons were delighted on perceiving them. It appeared as if Kamdev (god of love) had moulded them in one mould only "O woman ! Your glamorous eyes are glorifying your youthfuf^exuberance like the rubies." (16)

Couplet

Both the woman and man developed great love for each other. They had given up their robes and both were without any clothes. There was no hypocrisy between them (both were in great attachment). (17)

They were having various types of sexual relationships and both the lover and beloved were embracing each other. Both were enjoying the bliss of life which cannot be recounted (estimated). (18)

Swaiyya

That woman on seeing her charming beloved was exceedingly happy and had given up all her musings or thoughtful considerations and was laughing when both the eyes would glance at each other. Her eyes were always waiting greedily to see the smart and invaluable shadow of his eyes. Having attained a lover of her own choice she was completely enticed and being enamoured could not utter a word. (28)

With warm youthfulness they were looking glamorous and a knavish light was lit between them. They were enjoying like the pied wagtail and were looking glorious with great pride and power. They were shining and looking gaudy like the arrows, the off-springs of deer and swords. O friend ! I am completely enamoured by the great and enchanting eyes of the beloved. (29)

"O dear friend ! Since the time, I have met my beloved fully without any hesitation, I do not relish anything else, as if he had taken me completely under his spell. (I have sold myself to him) In fact I have been wounded with the arrows of his stretched bows of eye brows. O dear friend ! Listen. Kamdev (the god of love) had attacked me in a manner that I have been reduced to a slave of my beloved's name only." (30)

Many women with lotus like beautiful eyes were allured by seeing him only (being hit with the arrows of the eyes) without chewing betel-nusts, could not sit at ease but were talking incoherently being half mad (in love). They were neither talking nor laughing. I could swear by the Baba that they were fully enamoured and were all sacrifice to him. Even the fairies of heavens were fully enticed by the beloved. (31)

Chopaiee :

One woman (friend) got enraged on seeing the beauty. She went to her father and told him everything about it. The Raja was furious with rage on hearing these details and came towards the daughter's palace. (32)

When the princess learnt about her father's visit, being enraged, then she thought to herself what she could do except killing herself by piercing a dagger (in her body). (33)

Couplet :

When the paramour saw the woman in this predicament, then he laughed and said, "Why are you so much worried. Tell me the secret ! (of your worry). (34)

In the meantime two partridges (Chakvis) came there which were sighted by the prince with his eyes. One he killed with the arrow by stretching the bow and shooting another arrow with the other hand he killed the second one. (44)

With two arrows he killed both of them. Then in no time both were roasted and both of them ate them (both) and without hesitation enjoyed further sensuous pleasure. (45)

Couplet:

After eating the partridges, they removed their skin and wearing it on their heads they delved into a river (and started swimming). (46)

They were seen by others as partridges and no one could make them out as human beings. They swam many thousand miles and then came to the bank of the river at one place. (47)

They rode on two horses there and reached their land (country). The Raja made her the queen consort and mitigated all her afflictions (sufferings of mind). (48)

Couplet :

By wearing the skin of the partridges and escaping the sight of the (girl's) father they escaped from there. They appeared as birds to all the people and were not thought of as human beings. (49)

They thus reached their own land and a new palace was erected for the queen. Then the Raja was enjoying sensuous pleasure with her with increased mirth and enjoyment in many ways. (50)

They came to their owm hand and got pattled there and a new place was got was got built for the queen. By they and might the Raja was enjoying persons pleasure with her in many ways with greater affection. (51)

The Raja was always under her spell (control). The Raja was acting according to her dictates which she would say smilingly. Her ordains were obeyed by the subjects fully and they were all treating her as the king (of the land). (3)

Couplet:

The Raja was fully under her spell by mind and action on seeing her beauty and would stay at home day and night and would not even look at another woman. (4)

Chopaiee :

One day the Raja sighted another woman and in his mind thought of having cohabitation with her. When he found it was nightfall then he called her in his palace through an emissary. (5)

After calling her he enjoyed sensuous pleasure with her and treated her, a stranger woman, as his own. He wanted to bring her into his palace but was too much afraid of the queen. (6)

He had decided in his mind and while enjoying sexual pleasure he told her about it. He told her verbally that he would get married to her and would make her a queen from a pauper. (7)

When the woman heard these words, she developed great love for the Raja at heart and said, "I would become your spouse, O dear ! Whenever you wish (want) you could marry me. (8)

"Whomsoever we develop love for a moment - we should never go back on it for the whole life. One should give support with pleasure (one should take hold of one's hand with pleasure) and one should continue supporting her till one's death." (9)

(O Raja !) "You come along with the queen in a planquin and come here. You try to make me understand and send the queen to me." (12)

She had said whatever she wanted and the Raja kept that thing in mind. The moon had disappeared and the sun shone forth. That woman had dressed up like a Sati.(13)

On the dawn of day, the Sati along with high and low started off with stubbornness. The Raja came along with the queen. He then bowed to the woman (Sati) on reaching there. (14)

The Raja then told her not to immolate herself (not to perform Sati act) "Why not take enough money from me instead ?" "O queen ! Please you also make her understand, thus saving her from immolation." (15)

Both the Raja and queen tried to make her dissuade.then the woman (Sati) laughed and said, "O Raja ! I am telling you, this wealth is of no use to me." (16)

Chopaiee :

The woman then replied, "O dear Raja ! What use was this kingdom to me ? This kingdom should always remain under your control. I would not be living for all the four Yugas (for all times) but with my immolation (being Sati) I would live for ever, even after the death of my spouse." (20)

Then the Raja sent his queen again to make her realize (understand) and save her from immolating herself and do according to what she desired." (21)

Then the queen again sent for her (walked) and talked to her in many ways (to make her understand). The (Sati) woman then said, " I am saying one thing, "This thing cannot be accepted by you (the king) and I shall continue to be obstinate (in my resolve)." (22)

The woman told the queen, "You give away your husband to me and you remain as a slave to me. Then I shall enjoy sexual companionship with the Raja in your presence and make you (carry pitcher of water on your head) obey my ordains." (23)

The Raja told the woman (Sati), "O Woman ! (Sati) ! You do not immolate yourself and address me as you like. If you want I shall marry you and make you a queen from a pauper." (25)

On saying this, the Raja caught hold of her by her arm and made her sit in a planquin. O woman ! You do not burn yourself in fire and make (consider) me as your spou se." (26)

Couplet :

Before the eyes of everyone else he made her sit in the planquin and with this deceitful action made her queen by marrying her. (27)

Here the hundred and twelfth episode of the King's and Minister's dialogue regarding woman's characterization from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well.

(112-2175)(Contd)

Couplet :

In the land of Bungus there was a great Raja called Bishan Singh. All the high and low people of the kingdom were subservient to him. (bowing to his orders). (1)

Chopaiee :

He had a queen consort by the name of Krishan Koer who was so beautiful as if she was taken out after churning the Cheer ocean. Her lotus like eyes were looking glamorous. Even women were enamoured by her beauty. (2)

Couplet :

She had a charming figure (appearance) and she was glorified all over. By seeing her, the Raja was totally enticed (hit by her arrows of beauty) by her beauty and could not escape her onslaughts (of love). (3)

On seeing another woman, the Raja got enamoured by her and his love for his own wife was on the wane, (lessened). When Krishan Koer heard about this news she got annoyed with the Raja. (5)

Krishan Koer became furious with rage (in her mind) and chalked out a plan (to deal with this). "Today I shall enact a difficult task and kill the Raja and then take my life also." (6)

Couplet

The queen got totally upset and felt enraged (at heart) just as glass gets cracked and broken with the hitting of an arrow. (7)

The Raja then sent for the woman through an emissary and then satisfying his passionate love (lust) by having cohabitation with her, went to sleep with full satisfaction. (8)

Chopaiee :

When the queen heard about this fact she took up a sword in hand and rushed to that place. First she killed her spouse Bishan Singh and then killed the woman. (9)

After breaking all the limbs of the Raja with a heavy stick, she brought it to the stairs and threw them on the ground. (12)

Being half mad with the intoxication of wine, the Raja came down stringling through the stairs onto the ground with the striking of the sword in the chest. (13)

The whole ground (Earth) was red with blood-stains and being hit with a dagger, the Raja fell down on the ground. (14)

Chopaice :

When the woman siw the Raja being dead she expressed her grief in many ways. The god of death had been very unkind to me in that the Raja being pierced by a small dagger had died. (15)

Then the queen replied with great sorrowful mood that it was not possible to decipher this secret. First the Raja had sent for some meat and ate some of it while the balance was sent for the attendants. (17)

Then the Raja sent for some wine which he took himself partly and partly gave me to drink. With the wine the Raja got drunk. First he was in consciousness then he became unconscious. (18)

Being drunk with wine, the Raja went towards the palace for satisfying his lust of sexual desires and being in the control of sexual desires (passions) the Raja held my hand in his hands. (19)

"Then he slipped from the staircase and being drunk fully he fell down with my push. The dagger suddenly (slipped) jumped and pierced through his chest which resulted in his death." (20)

Couplet :

From the stair case the Raja fell down onto the ground and the dagger further pushed into his stomach, thus he gave up his life. (21)

Chopaiee :

Thus the queen related this story to all of them which they heard and then she pushed the dagger in her own chest. The woman thus gave up her life after killing the Raja. Thus the clever lady performed this deceitful action. (22)(1)

Swaiyya :

There was a Muni (ascetic) living in a thick jungle who had horns on his head as such he was called 'Rishi Sring'. According to some versions his father Vidhadav (Rishi Sring's father) had produced (created) him through a deer's womb. From then onwards he was doing penance when he became little grown up to be intelligent enough. He was worshipping the Lord day and night and never went to the town even by mistake. (1)

The Muni (ascetic) was undergoing penance (worshipping the Lord) and would gain peace of mind by meditating on Lord's True Name. He would always take bath, then meditate and then recite the Vedas (orally) and then would try to think of the Lord with full concentration. He would lead his life according to six shastras (code of conduct) and would bear sufferings on the body but would not falter in his heart. Whenever he felt hungry he would pick up fruits from the jungle and eat. (2)

Time passed on and then there was famine in the land (and all heard about it). There was no seed left and all the people were pining for food particles. Then the Raja sent for all the well-read Brahmins and asked them. "What evil deeds had he performed so that his subjects were suffering and dying ?" (3)

When the Raja asked the Brahmins like this, then all the Brahmins said, "You are following the (political will) statesmanship and we have neither seen any sins committed by you. Then studying Smritis and Shastras they thought over many aspects and finally said, "We feel that Sringi Rishi should be called to your palace (house) and this is our considered opinion." (Which appeals to us). (4)

"If you approve of this thing, then "O King ! Send somebody to call him." Somehow the son of Vibhandav should roam around the streets of the town. This should be taken as perfect truth that as soon as he would come and settle here, the famine will end. If he does not come through a messenger then either you should send your son or you should go personally to bring him quickly." (5)

Sortha :

Having sent his emissaries (attendants), friends and even his son, the Raja felt dejected and then personally went to beseech the Muni (by holding his feet) but the Muni would not come. (6)

Swaiyya :

All the people then thought over it and were worried about what should be done now. Even the Raja had gone personally but the Muni was not satisfied or willing to come. "If someone were to bring him here I would handover half the kingdom to him." (The Raja said). All felt ashamed of themselves and came back home. They thought of some plan to placate the Muni so that all his penance should be destroyed. (7)

There was a juggler type woman living there, who came to the Raja's palace. She explained to the Raja the secret of the whole thing verbally. By chewing the betel nut she moved towards the place and she was capable of alluring the hearts of the gods and demons. On seeing her moving (towards the jungle) all the people were delighted, forgetting their sufferings and totally forgot about their afflictions. (8)

If he would open his eyes and take a glance at me for a short while. ! will show my beauty to him and entangie him in my talk I will cast my spell on him, I will get his tuft of hair shaved off and with a turban on head, O Rajan ! I shall bring him to your place. O my Master ! You just listen to me slightly and 1 only need your permission to go." (9)

"O Rajan ! Listen to my petty talk ! I could bring down stars from the skies. What is the value (power) of gods, demons and human beings, I could cast my spell and control even the highest gods. I could arrange for the moon to shine during daytime and make the sun shine at night. (I could attempt Impossible Things). I could win over the eleven Rudras, Vishnu and Brahma with all their intelligence, with my own mode of action." (10)

Couplet :

After uttering these words the woman started from there and reached the place (of action) in a moment (within the winking of an eye). (11)

Swaiyya :

That poor woman got enamoured by the jungle of Rishi Sring engaged in penance and felt greatly pleased at heart. Whatever fruits Vidhadav used to eat, she attached nice food materials with those branches (trees) when the Muni felt hungry then he came there with the affliction of hunger. He ate those food materials (thinking them as fruits) and was surprised and felt great relief in mind. (12)

The Muni thought to himself "as to how God had created such fruits.
He had never seen such fruits in the jungle before and never tasted them before. Or Indra with his deceitful action had come there to watch my penance. Or the Lord (Jagdish) through His benevolence had enacted this to placate me." (13)

The Muni was much delighted at heart and felt wonderstruck after eating those fruits (delicious foods). (He felt) there must be some reason behind it and he looked around on all the four directions. He saw that a beautiful woman with ornamental embellishment was standing there in a jovial mood. She was looking glorious on the bedecked Earth as if she was the ornament of the embellished Earth. (14)

Her youthful exuberance was looking glamorous and a woman was standing there in the jungle. Her eyes were shining like blue lotus and seeing her beauty even Kamdev (god of love) would get allured. " What was the value of partridge, pigeon, moon, lion, parrot and deer (their beauty) before this woman ? On taking a glance at her, one's afflictions get alleviated and one gets delighted to watch her beauty." (15)

The Muni on seeing this woman thought to himself "What should I consider her comparable to a god, demon, demi-god, snake, godly person or a god himself ? Or was she a princess on whose beauty I could sacrifice my whole body ? (everything). I would love to be near her day and night, perform my penance, while living in the jungle." (16)

The Muni went towards the woman and bowed to her (saluted her) and said, "Listen to me ! Tell me who you are ? Are you the daughter of gods or demons or are you Ram's spouse Sita, looking glamorous in the jungle. Are you a queen or princess, who could allure even the demi-gods and snakes. Tell me the truth, are you Sachi (Indrani) Shiva (Durga) or the wife of Kamdev, Rati ? Or are you waiting for the arrival of your spouse ?" (17)

The woman replied, "O Nath ! (O Master !) Neither I am Sachi, Rati, Shiva nor a princess (born of a Raja). Neither I am a queen nor an off-spring of demi-gods, snakes, gods or demons. O Yogi ! Neither I am the spouse of Ram (Sita), but I am an offspring of Rishi Udalak's (woman) wife. I had heard about you as a perfect Yogi, so I had come to wed you." (18)

With her bewitching eyes the woman had cast a spell on him. With lots of coquettish movements she had cast her spell on the Muni (under her control). She shaved off his tufts of matted hair, made him wear a turban and wore ornaments on his body. She had won him over and made him her slave and from an ascetic she made him a householder. (19)

The ascetic had given up his penance, being enamoured by her charm (in his heart). Having attained the company of the great fasting ascetic, the woman forgot all about her suffering and attained the bliss of life. That beauty was moving around in the jungle in many styles and gave birth to seven daughters and six sons. Then the ascetic decided to leave the jungle and settle in a town. (20)

The woman told the Muni, "O Muni ! Listen. There is a great jungle nearby so let us go there and stay there to-day. There were many flowers and beautiful fruits which were looking glorious on the banks of Jamna. Without further delay, let us go there. That appears to be more enchanting than this jungle. "Both of us will enjoy sensuous pleasure there and defeat (mitigate) the pride of Kamdev (god of love)." (21)

The woman showed the Yogi all the Jungles existing in that land. Then the woman took out bangles, earrings and other ornaments from her bundle and made the Yogi to wear them. On seeing them the Yogi got enamoured and forgot all about his Yogic exercises. No one gave him any teachings or knowledge and the Muni came back to his own house. (22)

Couplet :

They placed the seven daughters ahead of them and the woman took charge of three sons. The other three sons were placed one each on shoulders one in arms and the youngest on the Muni's head. (23)

Totak Chhand :

When the people in the town heard about the coming of the Rishi, then all of them proceeded ahead to worship them. All the people were overjoyed in many respects and none of them whether old, child or young remained at home (to welcome him).24)

All of them were having flowers of saffron in their hands, which they showered on the Muni. On seeing them the Rishi was delighted greatly and huge clouds of Savan (July) started pouring. (25)

Totak Chhand :

When the clouds burst into torrents, then there was water flowing everywhere. Then the people were worried (dual-minded) that so long the Rishi-royal did not move away from this town, the whole town would he destroyed in the deluge. (27)

Then the Raja called that woman and gave her half the kingdom and then asked her to take away the Rishi from there so that the sufferings of the people may be alleviated. (28)

Swaiyya :

Then the woman addressed the Muni thus "that you had spent the whole life under the spell of the woman without worshipping the Lord at all. You have become mad. Leaving the discourses on Vedas you are mumbling incoherently. Why have you forgotten about death, having forsaken the righteous path, being involved in sensuous desires and being separated from the Lord leaving the virtuous role ? You are moving around the town in glorious robes ; O fool ! You have enacted foolishly having given up your modesty !" (29)

Couplet:

On hiring these words, the Muni thought in his mind and left the town immediately being half mad and rushed towards the jungle. (30)

Swaiyya :

"O Indra ! Listen ! Ahliya had fallen down unconscious and had not (worn) kept the Vermillion (round) mark on the forehead. Someone had played a magic spell on her and she had not embellished herself with ornaments even. She could not chew the betel nut and was bowing to her girl friend and had not taken (drunk) water even. So move quickly Why are you waiting here ? You had enamoured the woman too much." (you had won over her pride of beauty)." (10)

That lotus-eyed woman was pining in your separation in millions of ways and does not get a wink of sleep during day or night. She was hissing like a she-snake lying on the ground and had given up her modesty even (shyness) due to her obstinacy. The beautiful woman was not embellishing herself (with ornaments) and was washing her moon-like face with her tears only. So let us go quickly, why are you waiting here ? The Munis wife was waiting for you and watching your arrival there ?" (11)

On hearing about the condition of the ascetic woman, Indra left for that place where the woman was waiting. On hearing about the arrival of Indra. she chewed a betel nut and embellished herself with ornaments time and again. Indra taking a chance,though afraid of the Muni's curse, and getting worried about it, left for that place. He could neither go there nor abstain from going there and like a drunkard he was moving ahead with trembling awkwardness. (12)

The friend said, "O dear (Indra) ! Go and meet your beloved (of choice) quickly. Now we belong to you from to-day. O King ! At this time of your meeting her, the Muni had gone out for meditation so the paramour came and embraced and kissed her in many ways and had cohabitation with her. With this sexual companionship Ahliya's heart was greatly thrilled and she forgot completely about the Muni. (13)

The woman having attained the company of the Lord of the three worlds, charming Indra in the form of her spouse had forsaken the Muni from her mind. (14)

Swaiyya

The Muni concentrating in Mediation hearing some noise with his ears, got up in shocking surprise. He lost all his concentration (in meditation) and became furious with rage and started for his hutment (place) and seeing him, Indra hid himself underneath the cot. The Muni got surprised and thought to himself that some shameless person had committed this sin. (15)

Couplet :

Then Rishi Gautam getting enraged said, "Who had come to the house ?" Then the woman laughed and replied like this. (16)

Chopaiee :

"A he-cat had come here. On seeing you he had got frightened and being afraid of you had hid himself under the cot. O Muni ! I am telling you the truth." (17)

Totak Chhand :

The great Muni could not get at this secret. Whatever the woman had done was told by her to the husand. "The he-cat was hiding under the cot and it seems he had the glamour like Indra." (18)

Hearing these words the Muni went away. Then Rishi's wife (Ahliya) asked Indra to come out from underneath the cot, After many days the Muni got to know the whole secret and getting furious with rage, he slapped his head in distress. (20)

Then being greatly enraged the Rishi hurled a curse on him and the king of the gods, Indra was made a symbol of vaginas and due to the curse, Indra's body was filled with thousand vaginas symbols. On seeing this Indra felt greatly ashamed of himself. (21)

Couplet :

Then the Muni cursed the woman, saying that she had committed a deceitful action as such she should remain like an unholy stone slab for four Yugas (for all times).
(22)(1)

Bhujang Prayat Chhand :

Once Sund and Upsund, two mighty demons, had established themselves and all the three worlds were bowing to them. They underwent penance for a long time, thus placating Shiva and gained a blessing from him that they would not be killed even, when someone would try to kill them. (1)

When they got this boon (favour) from Shiva they forgot all the others from their mind. If they sighted any god then it was impossible for him to save himself from their onslaught. (3)

Thus they made the gods to suffer too much at their hands and all the gods then approached Brahma. Then Brahma called Vishwakarma and consulted him (for a solution) fully. (4)

Brahma then told Vishwakarma to create a woman of such a type who Would have no other competitor in beauty (whom no other woman could match) so create such a unique beauty. (5)

Couplet :

Vishwakarma on hearing these words, went home and brought a woman called Tilotama after (creating) moulding it in no time. (6)

Vishwakarma had created a most beautiful woman like Nidhi. Whosoever would see hen,would get attracted towards her and could not maintain (keep up) his celibacy (chastity). (7)

On seeing her enchanting beauty all the women would get enraged thinking that (lest) their spouses may not get attracted towards her on seeing her beauty. (8)

Thus with such a a beautiful form, this woman started off and came to the town of Thanesar quickly. (9)

Chopaiee :

All the gods get together and the exalted position of Indra was bestowed on Jujati. When he attained the kingdom of Indra, then he got allured by the beauty of Sachi. (Indra's spouse). (6)

Then Jujati told her, "O dear Sachi ! Listen. You now accept to be my wife as Indra would not be traceable even on searching for him and what is the use of finding him now ? (7)

Then Sachi wept and said, "My spouse (Master) had gone to some foreign land, if you will try to destroy my chastity, then you will be thrown into the depth of hell." (8)

(She thought to herself) "My greatest worry was that this sinner would not leave me (safely) alone. So I should think of some witchcraft so that he could be removed from the kingship." (9)

"You may ride a planquin and let the Ri his lift it and then come here making them proceed with a running spree (speed) and then accept my hand in marriage ?" (said Sachi). (11)

So he sent for the planquin immediately and made the Rishis support it Being tired they would try to slow down (in the mind) so they were pushed forward by beating them with lashes. (12)

Couplet :

There was a Rishi called Udalak among them. He became furious with rage and he slapped a curse on him. So from that moment onwards, he was divested from the position of Indra and he fell down on the Earth. (13)

Chopaiee :

Thus with a deceitful action Sachi got rid of Jujati from getting around her love (from her neck). Then they arranged to locate Indra and found him. Then the kingdom (of heaven) was handed over to him and there was lot of joy in heavens with the sounding of drums of victory (joy). (14) (1)

Here the hundred and seventeenth episode of the King's & Minister's dialogue regarding woman's characterization from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well. (117-2296)(Contd)

Chopaiee :

There was a king in the west by the name of Dev and he was under the spell of his queen named 'Mantar Kala'. That fool was acting according to the wishes of his queen, whatever she would say. Without seeking her permission, he could not proceed with any action. (1)

Couplet :

Then a man (person) happened to come there who was a source of great charm (was very charming). On seeing him the queen got enamoured by him and was hit by the arrows of his love (separation). (3)

Sortha :

So by sending an attendant (lady) she called him to her palace and told him to be (seated) along with her without any hesitation. (4)

Chopaiee :

Then that smart person thought to himself and told the queen frankly. "If you agree then I would like to say something or else I will not stay in your place any more." (5)

"Whatever I shall say If she were unable to act accordingly then she should forget about (getting) me. If this difficult act, the woman could perform then she could marry me (even to-day) right now. (6)

Then the woman did exactly what he had suggested and called both the sons to her place and by giving them wine to drink, made them both unconscious and with a sword (taking out a sword) killed both of them. (8)

Couplet :

Both the heads of the sons were placed in her lap (by her) and assuming the form of Madhvi, she begged in the town, (bazaar). (9)

Chopaiee :

After begging for alms she went ts her paramour and showed him both the heads (of her sons) and said, "For your sake, I have killed both my sons. O dear beloved ! Now come and have cohabitation with me." (10)

When the paramour saw her accomplishing this difficult task then he became unconscious for three hours (a pehar). When the second pehar began then he gained consciousness leaving his state of unconsciousness. (11)

Swaiyya :

He was in dual-mindedness as neither he could discard her nor he could enjoy sexual companionship with her. Neither could he stand nor he could sit or say something with thoughtfulness. Neither he could leave her nor he could take her in his embrace and he was worried in his mind that he could not enjoy sensuous pleasure with her. (he was in two minds). Then she sent for some hair remover and making a paste applied to his beard and moustaches. When the hair were removed then the prince was looking like a woman. (6)

Couplet :

She made him wear all feminine clothes and embellished his body with ornaments. On seeing her beauty Rudra became extremely jealous and he became passionate (with sexual desires). (7)

Chopaiee :

Dressing him like a woman she brought him to her mother and said that she was her foster-sister and told everybody about it. (8)

Couplet :

"O mother ! Listen ! My foster sister had come (to stay) with me and after introducing to the Raja and giving her lot of money, you should bid her farewell. (9)

The Rani Said,

The queen said, "O dear Raja ! Listen. Your foster daughter had come here so bid her farewell by giving her (presenting with) lot of money." (11)

Chopaiee :

When the Raja heard about it (that his foster daughter had come) he gave lot of wealth from his treasure and bade her farewell with great love. (12)

Mantar Kala then told the father that her foster sister was very dear to her, so she would accompany her and show many sceneries of the countryside to her. (13)

So saying this, she came back to her palace and told her beloved while laughing, 'O my foster-sister ! You are very dear to me. So you sit with me in the same planquin." (14)

We will both go together while talking to each other thus alleviating our sufferings of heart. So she made him sit in the planquin and started moving in the jungle and the countryside. (15)

When the planquin passed through the bazaars then she opened the curtains (cords) so that they could not be seen by anybody and both were going making fun and frolic. (16)

They were having sexual companionship of their choice and even during daytime, no one could see them in the bazar. In the planquin carried by eight labourers, the paramour had taken both the legs of the princess on to his arms. (17)

As the planquin was moving the paramour was pulling her closer producing some sounds and with the hearing of these cracking sounds, the labourers were holding the supports to their shoulders tightly. (18)

They stopped in the jungle and placed the planquin on the ground and they enjoyed sensuous pleasure of many types. Whatever he wanted and took lot of wealth and making her as his wife, he took her to his land (country). (19)

Then the princess wrote a letter and kept it in the planquin and wrote to her mother and father, "Since I liked this person very much, so I played this magic trick (deceitful action). (20)

"That person was not your foster daughter whom I had placed (made to sit) in the planquin. With the hair remover I had removed his hair and dressed him like a woman giving lot of ornaments." (21)

Couplet :

One day Sri Indra went to the house of Sh iva. The great Rudra had assumed a horrible form, seeing whom there was lot of worry. (1)

Chopaiee :

When Indra saw Rudra (in that form), then he got furious with rage and attacked him with strength. This resulted in Rudra becoming more furious and a flame of fire was bursting out of his mouth. (2)

The fire spread throughout the whole world (was filled with fire), which was burning all the three worlds. All the gods and demons got frightened and came to the great Rudra all together. (3)

Then the great Shiva gave up his fury and threw the (flame of) fire in the ocean. All the strength (glory) collected together and then the demon Jalandhar got created (was born). (4)

He took the woman called Brinda as his spouse who was known throughout the world as the most faithful wife. Through her munificence her husband was controlling the kingdom and no devil could cast an evil eye on him. (5)

He had won over all the gods and demons and was controlling all the fourteen worlds. Sheshnag and Kuber were much distressed and took over Vishnu Puri even under his domain (control) by defeating him. (6)

Couplet :

He took over Sheshnag, Varuna, Indra etc. under his control and made them stay in his kingdom (Puri). But the fool on seeing Shiva's wife got enamoured by her (beauty). (7)

Couplet :

"The daughter and sister are given away as per Vedic principles but O Demon King ! Listen. No one had ever given away his wife." (9)

Chopaiee :

The proud Demon-King got furious with rage and collected a great army of demons. He called all the demons including Sumbh, Nisumbh, Rakatbeej, Jawalachh etc. at that time. (10)

Bhujang Chhand

The obstinate demons were enraged and roared loudly. They came in beautiful robes looking glorious. They were having tridents and spears in their hands and looking glorious. Was there any other warrior who could curb them ? (none could control them). (11)

On this side, Ṛudra was equally enraged and started beating his small drum and Indra along with a huge army also landed there. The (gods) sun and moon also gathered many companions who were armed witli tridents and spears fully. (12)

With great fury the obstinate demons had collected there we and were moving like a flame of fire. They were holding maces in their hands and the great warriors were roaring loudly. They could neither be removed from the battlefield nor could they be killed (in battle). (13)

The stubborn gods reached with huge armies to fight on the side of Mahadev (Rudra). Even Vishnu, along; with many warriors was looking glorious, seeing whom the godly women were losing their egoistic tendencies. (14)

On this side were smart demons while on the other side were gods looking glorious, as if they were alluring the minds of Diti and Aditi. Both sides were striking with heavy armour and none of them was running away from the battlefield. From both the sides the Kashatriyas were trotting their horses. (15)

There the swords were striking with great strength as if it were raining heavily in the month of Asuj (September). The stubborn Shiva having the trident in hand solidly was bent upon killing the warriors in that sector quickly. (16)

In that battle-front the Maru Raga (song of death) was being played and only those persons who were of no consequence, had fled from there. The young and old were furious with rage and fighting in the battlefield and surely had fallen martyrs. (17)

The battle drum was beating with thuds (of dum dum) while swords were shining brightly in various, hands. Many mighty warriors were dying in the battle field being cut into pieces. They were being wed by the fairies with great love and affection (were taken to heavens). (18)

Millions of banners were fluttering in the field (with the blowing winds). They were countless in numbers so that the sun and moon were not visible. The evil spirits were making fun there while the warriors were fighting and dancing with the tunes of musical instrument. (19)

Couplet :

There was a heavy shower of the (bajar) arrows along with swords, parsia and pasa. All the warriors were wounded while countless warriors had become martyrs. (20)

The demons were saying, "O Indra ! Where are you running away ? We will not allow you to escape and we shall kill you in this battlefront. The warriors were remaining steadfast in their positions with their horses and arrows. Being enraged they had made the scene more glamorous. (22)

Then Vishnu thought to himself and assumed the form of Jalandhar (demon) completely. Where the woman Brinda was sitting in the garden and even Kamdev was losing his pride on seeing her. (23)

Couplet :

Vishnu assuming the form of Jalandhar reached that place (where Brinda was sitting). Seeing the charm of the spouse, she got delighted with love and affection. (24)

Chopaiee :

Vishnu in the form of jalandhar played many games of love with her thus removing (destroying) the pride of Kamdev. "I will now relate the battle scene which will make you delighted." (25)

Bhujang Chhand :

On hearing these words the Raja came there. He was made to sit between the enclosure of four each. They wanted to see his weapons which he promptly handed over. (5)

He gave the weapons in a manner that they could make pairs out of these. So both the arms were sewn, as if they were tied down. (6)

Giving the secret to a Bhatt it was arranged to be mentioned by him, "If you were to hand over all the weapons to me, then you may be considered as our benevolent giver." (our benefactor). (7)

On hearing this the Raja handed over all his weapons. The ministers were trying to tell him not to do so, but he did not listen (and handed them over). When the Raja was divested of weapons then he was made to wear some cloak (clothes) (8)

Couplet :

Having worn the cloak, the Raja could not take out his arms. The Khan was standing nearby and he tied him down. (9)

Chopaiee :

Both the gods and demons joined together to churn the Chheer ocean. When all the fourteen jewels were taken out, the demons got up being fully enraged. (1)

And said, "We shall take all the fourteen jewels else we will not allow the gods to live in pease. Then the armies gathered in countless numbers. The demons said, "We will not run away from the younger brothers." (gods). (2)

Couplet:

The whole glory of kingdom and its glamour belongs to the elder brother and the younger ones do not claim it. (3)

Bhujang Chhand :

Then the mighty demons, being infuriated launched an attack and drums of death were sounded and horrible music was played and from the other side, the gods also got furious and came there for a battle. It appeared as flames of fire had erupted. (4)

Being furious with rage,the warriors positioned themselves. On one side were charming gods while on the other side were horrible demons. Being enraged the warriors gathered together and proceeded for launching an attack with great pride. (5)

At places there were iron marks (for forehead) lying while at places, the broken helmets were lying around. Millions of warriors in their grandeur had gathered there while at places mighty warriors had been cut into pieces with weapons and millions of indestructible elephants had been killed. (6)

Many warriors were draped in blood baths and many wounded warriors were reeling around and countless warriors had fallen down being swung around. Many were asking for water, while many were shouting, "Kill them, Kill the enemy." Many had proceeded there with unsheathed swords. (7)

Many were saving (taking) the enemy onslaughts on their shields, while many were joining the fighting in the battlefield. Many were getting egoistic on herting the tune of 'song of death', while many cowards were fleeing away, while many mighty warriors had been crushed. Many horses had been killed while millions of chariot masters had been deprived (of their chariots). (8)
Somewhere warriors were lying killed or mutilated and elsewhere horses had been killed. At places the mighty warrior sons of Diti and Aditi had fallen down reeling on the ground. Many warriore had died being wounded in battle, while some warriors were being glorified in the battlefield. (9)

On one side the Sun and on the other side the Moon were getting furious with rage. On this side, Indra organizing a huge army had arrived there, on the other side the great warrior (god) Budh had hoisted his flag and on this side the god of death in great fury had arrived. Who could win over him ? (10)

On one side Brahpati in great fury had advanced further while on the other side Shukracharya was in great wrathfulness. Someone was shooting arrows while someone else was chanting (mantras) magic spells, while someone else was writing talisman and another was managing with mystical formulas. (11)

Somewhere swords were being unsheathed and elsewhere arrows were being shot, while at places maces and bullets were in use. Somewhere mallets (clubs) were striking and somewhere else arrows were being showered, while at places warriors were striking horror at the enemy forces. (12)
Somewhere Rajas with canopies were fighting, while at places canopies were lying broken and at places great steeds or Coats of mail were lying scattered. At places people were caught in nooses and somewhere people were being pulled around. Somewhere warriors had been floored soon, while the young soldiers were let off (without harm). (13)
Somewhere the warriors were draped in blood baths, white elsewhere the safe youthful warriors were trotting their horses. Horrible kettle drums or large drums were being sounded. On one side were beautiful smart gods while on the other side demons were thundering loudly. (14)

Everywhere the horrible song of death was resounding. On one side the great demons Sumbh and Nisumbh were standing like pillars, while stubborn warriors like Biralachh, Jwalachh and Dhumrachh were not relenting on anyone's advice even. (15)

Many weapons were used in the fierce battle. On this side the gods were fighting furiously white on the other side the demons were hurling challenges (on the enemy). Both the brothers were fighting and out of the two who would run away ? Whosoever flees from the field, his mother would feel humiliated (ashamed). (16)

Both the brothers were fighting. Which one (brother) gets defeated ? They will fight to death for Truth but will not retrace their step. The Kashatriyas were filled with pride, white Rudra was dancing. A fierce battle was raging and many weapons were used there (struck there). (17)

The stubborn warriors were proud of their obstinacy and those engaged in the great battle were getting furious with rage. Great tridents and bayonets were being struck against each other. On this side were youthful demons and on the other side the gods were established in position. (18)

On this side the gods were getting enraged, white the demons were in great fury in opposing them. They were not running away, as they had dug in their feet on the ground. Then Vishnu thought to himself and assumed the form of a beautiful girl. (19)

Vishnu (Kahna) had assumed the form of a charming beauty and whosoever glanced at her was enamoured by her. On one side were youthful demons and the gods were looking glorious on the other side. Being enamoured by the charming, beauty both the sides stopped fighting. (20)

The (fairy) Rambha and Dhanatar (Vaid) were given for the peace and bliss of the world. Three more gems wee taken out by him. They were given to whom, just watch and see. (23)

Swaiyya :

On seeing her beauty both the gods and demons were feeling delighted, forgetful of their sufferings. Both gave up their fight and the great fortunate Vishnu (the beauty) was liked by all. The ego of elephant, parrot, moon, lion and Kamdev was also gone (on seeing her). Whatever that beauty gave them was accepted by both smilingly and no one picked up any weapon. (24)

Bhujang Chhand :

The gods then distributed the nectar (Armit) and the demons got wine. Vishnu assuming the form of a beauty had deceived all. On this side Vishnu was looking glamorous while on the other side all the gods and demons were allured by her. (25)

Couplet :

Vishnu had quickly assumed the form of a woman and the deceptive form had deceived all the demons and went away. (26)(1)

One day Bijai Singh went out for hunting and seeing the beauty of Bharmar Kala, he was enamoured by her love. (3)

Chopaiee :

By marrying her there and then he brought her home Shi was also allured by seeing the Raja. Phul Mati on hearing the news of his new marriage was furious with rage but she brought her home with due regard. (4)

Phul Mati showed lot of affection for her and called her as her foster sister but that woman (Phul Mati) in her heart was greatly enraged. She was keenly looking for a chance to destroy Bharmar Kala (in her mind). (5)

The queen then thought of killing her rival wife through the deity who was her god. She got a temple constructed in the name of Rudra wherein lot of money' had been spent. (6)

Both the Co-wives used to visit that temple and would come back after worshipping Rudra. The temple was very grand and a huge banner was fluttering atop and looking glorious, which would enamour the hearts of the gods, humans, snakes and demons. (7)

Couplet :

All the beautiful women of the town were visiting that temple and after the worship of Rudra, would come back to their homes. (8)

Aril

One day the queen took Bhannar Kala to that temple and taking a sword in hand she cut off her head and the beheaded head. She ! offered as an offering to the idol of Shiva and came back weeping and told the Raja herself. (9)

Couplet :

"My foster sister took me along with her to the temple of Rudra and cutting off her head with her own hands, she offered it to the idol of Shiva." (10)

Chopaiee :

On hearing this the Raja came to the place where Phool Mali had killed Bharmar Kala. On seeing this the Raja was shocked and surprised and did not say a word to the woman. (11)

Couplet:

The Raja then said, "The woman who had offered her cut off head to the deity (Shiva) was truly praiseworthy and the land was also worth saluting and her father was equally praiseworthy." (12)

After performing the last rites of the woman and being greatly distressed, the Raja came back to live in the palace of Phool Mati again. (13)

The queen after killing the rival wife with her own hands and showing it to the Raja through her deceitful action, made the Raja under her spell. (14)

None of the gods including Brahma, Vishnu, demons, moon, Sun, Ved Vyas and the Vedas could ever know the secrets of the woman (woman's mind). (15)(1)

Here the hundred and twenty-fourth episode of the King's & Minister's dialogue regarding woman's characterization from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well. (124-2431)(Contd)

Swaiyya :

One spoiled demon once heard the story of Raghunandan (Sri Ram) in Lanka that he had killed Ravana along with his son and wife in the battlefield. Getting enraged and taking up his mace, sword and coat of mail (iron protective cover) he drank some wine and became drunk. He jumped from the fort and crossing the ocean, the proud demon came to a foreign land. (1)

With his coming there it was total darkness for about eight days. Then the sun shone forth and the darkness disappeared. On seeing the demon, the people got dual-minded and worried. Many Rajas, collecting together large armies made out a plan to win over the enemy (in the mind) and launched an attack on the enemy and fought against him with arrows, bows, maces and spears. (2)

Many mighty warriors were getting confused and falling down and some warriors were reeling, getting wounded . Some had fled from the battlefield and some warriors had died and fallen on the ground. Some were killed while riding their horses and fighting, while some others died either on elephants or their chariots. It appeared as if Munis were facing downwards at Tribheni (Allahabad) holy place and smoking there. (3)

The tall warriors, tying their coats of mail, swords and quivers etc with their waists were looking glorious. They launched an attack with great eagerness from all the four sides as if the dark clouds of Savan (July) had gathered on the sky. There was a ferocious battle fought among the warriors and Shiva danced there himself. The brave men were filled with wrathfulness but did not retrace from there, being frightened and the foreigners were draped in red colour of the sun (blood- red). (4)

Chopaiee :

The battle was more fierce then Mahabharta even and the warriors were dancing. The warriors attacked the demon many times, but he was not hit, rather the demon became more ferocious with rage. (5)

He held the mace in one hand, with a sword drawn in the second hand. Whomsoever the demon would strike running down, would be crushed with one stroke. (6)

If anyone attempted to strike him, his sword would be broken with the handle remaining in his hand. Then the demon would get more furious and many foreigners would be killed. (7)

Bhujang Chhand :

When that demon would attack with the beating of drums then many troops would be killed before he returned. Was there any warrior who could fight with him getting enraged ? On the very sight of him, many warriors were running away quickly along with their horses. (8)

On seeing this huge demon all the Rajas were running away and were distressed being afraid of him. All the stubborn Rajas with downcast necks (eyes) on their elephants, horses along with infantry men were fleeing away from the battlefield. (9)

Chopaiee :

On seeing their armies retracing, the warriors became furious with rage and being enraged again advanced and attacked. But the demon on seeing those returning again to the field, killed them all, sending them to hell. (10)

He had killed twenty thousand elephants and destroyed about thirty thousand horses and forty thousand chariots were cut into pieces and the warriors (groups) dispersed like the clouds. (11)

Couplet :

Then the demon taking up his mace destroyed many troops and killed many of them without hesitation in many ways. (12)

Chopaiee :

All the warriors after fighting against him got tired but no one could kill the demon. Tha sun had set and the moon shone forth. All the warriors came back to their places (tents). (13)

When the day dawned and the darkness had disappeared, the warriors became furious again with rage. They collected their forces and again came to the place where the demon had killed many warriors. (14)

They were trotting their horses after putting saddles on them and many were shining their swords. Many were shooting arrows by stretching their bows and many strikes were made on the demon. (15)

When the demon felt hungry he came to the jungle tor taking fruit and breaking the pitchers he ate the food material and drank wine to his heart's satisfaction. (28)

After taking wine the proud demon became unconscious. When the prostitute became sure of this (his condition), then she played many musical instruments and sang songs in many tunes. (29)

As the pros was dancing forward the demon was moving his head accordingly. When the craze of the battle was completely removed from his mind then he handed over his mace to her. (pros). (30)

When he saw the (beautiful) beloved coming near him, he gave her his sword also. Having presented his weapons (to her) he was without weapons and the prostitute, Knew al this. (31)

She came dancing towards the demon and touched (tied) a chain to his hands. Having done this witchcraft (deceitful action) and with his slight movement she arranged to arrest him. (32)

Couplet :

With her slight touch he was tied down with chains. With this magic spell the woman had tied down the demon. (33)

Bhujang Chhand :

Thus the woman with this deceitful action had completely cast her spell and the most beautiful woman had taken him under her magic spell (control). With the strength of her magic spell the warrior was coming under her control and the prostitute showed it to all the residents of the town. (34)

Couplet

The demon with a sword in hand had killed countless Kashatriyas but had been deceived by this woman through her deceitful action (witchcraft). (36)(1)

Here the hundred and twenty fifth episode of the King's & Minister's dialogue regarding woman's characterization from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well. (125-2467)(Contd)

Couplet :

In the land of Tapisa there was a fortress called Sinsini which could not be won over by anyone and many had failed in their battles against it. (1)

Chopaiee :

Abdul Nabi then attacked it. For four days a fierce battle was raging there with cannons being shot in abundance. The workers had lost all their sense of proportion. (2)

Finally they were able to break through the fortress and no one stopped them going further. One loft was left which was under great fire. (3)

One woman loading a gun aimed at Nabi Khan and hit him on the heart, with the striking of the bullet, he was thrown dead in the planquin without heaving a sigh.(5)

Couplet :

Nabi was killed with the gun and then followed a fierce battle. The attendants took away Nabi Khan to his house and no one knew about it on this side. (6)

Then a gunner aimed with his gun and shot a bullet at the husband of this woman with great fitry. (7)

Chopaiee :

With the gun wound, the brave man was killed. The wife, standing next to him realized this. Shi rubbed a firestone (chakmak stone) and produced a flame and burnt the hukment immediately. (8)

The Mughals, Sheikh, Sayyad (all) came there and said to the woman, "You become our wife now." The woman went closer and said to them. (9)

Rattan Singh took up his arrow and bow. Whichever arrow was being shot by Rattan Singh, the thief would cut it into two with his dagger and throw it away. When he had shot fifty-nine arrows then he said (to himself), "There is only one arrow left in my quiver." (5)

Couplet :

"O Thief ! Whichever arrow I had shot so far had hit the target, so listen to my words." (6)

Chopaiee :

"Whatever arrows I had shot you had broken them and thrown away. Now I am your slave from my heart. So please tell me what can I do for you ?" (7)

Couplet :

"I have got one desire left in my mind, which I would tell you. You point out anything to me and I shall kill that object, so you give me some object" (8)

Chopaiee :

Hearing these words the thief was much delighted so he took up a leaf in his hand and showed it with a sign. Once the thief took off his eye (sight) from him, he shot an arrow at his chest by stretching his bow. (9)

Couplet :

There was a Raja in Marwar by the name of Ugar dutt, who would spit fire, when enraged and would be cool like water when he was normal (with good behaviour). (1)

Chopaiee :

Once the robbers had looted his money and the herdsmen complained to the authorities in the town. To take revenge, the drums and kettle drums were sounded and the warriors got ready with their coats of mail (protective covers). (2)

Couplet :

The war drums (of death) were sounded from all four sides and the warriors were red with wrathfulness. The horses were decorated with saddle gear and were trotting while the cowards became pale (with fear). (3)

Bhujang Chhand :

The mighty warriors being enraged were thundering. In that area the Kashatriyas had been destroyed quickly. They had attacked with spears, arrows and bajras. Many were killed in the battle and many others were let off free. (4)

Many horses had been cut into pieces, while many had been killed in the battle. The war drums (of death) were sounded along with other musical instruments. No warrior was left alive nor those playing the music were saved. The enemy forces being under fear complex had fled away. (5)

Chopaiee :

When the whole army had fled away, the Raja became furious with rage and he launched an attack facing the enemy (from the front) and for seeing this battle the god king Indra himself came to the battlefield. (6)

On the other side there was a proud warrior king by the name of Bisan Dutt. He came to fight in the battle himself and from the opposite side Raja Ugar Dutt came himself. (7)

Both the Rajas along with their armies proceeded to the battlefield with great fury. They were brandishing their swords tridents and spears and were playing the Maru Raga and Sandhuria Raga (song of death). (8)

Swaiyya :

Somewhere the crowns of the Rajas were lying on the ground, somewhere their embellishments and ornaments along with coats of mail were lying; while somewhere else horses and grand elephants were lying dead. Somewhere evil spirits (Betal) were singing while somewhere else the ghosts were dancing around. The cowards hearing the drum beats and viewing it as a horrible period of suffering were running away. They were trembling as if the cannon shots were being hurled like the hailstorm. (9)

Many warriors being frightful of the terrible times were fleeing away, while many warriors with swords and bayonets had proceeded to the battlefield and were not relenting, while some were asking for water only, while some others were shouting "Kill them" loudly. Some had died fighting, while some were still breathing and some Rajputs were satisfied by fighting it out. (10)

Couplet :

Many weapons were in use, while the warriors were throbbing (in agony) on the ground. Those who had escaped injuries so far, got wounded with the Lord's Will. (11)

Chopaiee :

Thus the battlefield was littered with the warriors (lying down) and none of the warriors escaped unhurt completely. The Raja also fell down in the battlefield but was still alive (and not dead). (12)

Couplet :

On seeing the Raja lying down in the battlefield many warriors fled away. The poet Siam has said that not a single warrior was left safe in the battlefield. (13)

Kabit:

The mighty warriors were shouting aloud and said to the queen." We had been defeated and the Raja was also killed (alive), many chariots were cut into pieces and many heads of warriors were (broken) lying there, many horses had run away and many horses were killed. Many elephants had been killed or cut into pieces. Many infantry troops were crushed while many others had fled away from the battlefield. Many archers had been divested of their horses and many were slain along with their horses and many invincible warriors were cut into pieces. (14)

Swaiyya :

The queen called the meeting of the other warriors and discussed the means (plan) which should be adopted, as none of the warriors was left alive. "I am filled with grief completely, which should be alleviated. Why not die fighting by taking a huge army? Either I shall return after winning the battle or I shall die fighting where the Raja had been killed." (15)

Couplet :

Many war drums (of death) were sounded (indicating) that her spouse had died fighting in the battle, so let us take a huge multi-faceted army as it only behoves us now. (16)

"Many warriors had been killed and were lying unconscious on the battlefield in a state of calm and peace, later it was heard that my spouse (Raja) had also died fighting and he was always present in my heart, (I am always reminded of him) O friends ! Without him all my beautification seems of no use. Either I should kill the enemy and then meet my beloved or I should rest along with my beloved (after death). (17)

She took a huge army by collecting millions of warriors, who were embellished with many ornaments. With a mighty sword tied (to her waist) the queen rode a chariot on seeing which all the gods and demons were surprised. She was chewing a betel nut and was smiling while necklaces of pearls were fluttering on her breast and the head gear was looking glorious (on her head) and the sun's brilliance was feeling belittled (ashamed) before the ornament (flower) on her forehead. (18)

Couplet :

She started advancing with a huge army of stubborn warriors and within no time she reached the battlefront. (19)

Swaiyya :

On arrival she engaged the enemy in a fierce battle and crushed many horses, elephants and chariots. Many enemy troops were caught in the noose and many heads of warriors were cut apart (bashed up). Many had fled away on seeing that women and some started fighting while some warriors died fighting in the battle, whose life span had finished. The arrows of the woman were moving like wind, as a result of which the enemy forces were dispersed like the clouds. (20)

All the women attendants (friends) were engaged in the fighting with great joy and none was a coward out of them. All were going to the battlefront for fighting and the rest would depend on Kaal (god of death). (22)

Swaiyya :

The queen by beating the horse with the whip, thrust herself in the (enemy lines) in the battlefield and killed many soldiers by unsheathing by her sword. Many enemy soldiers were caught with the noose and sent alive to the prison. Some were crushed with the strikes of the mace, while many were sent to hell with the shooting of arrows. That one woman alone had defeated many enemies and the rest who were on-lookers, also fled away from the battlefield. (23)

Many enemy troops were caught in the noose and with the sword, many enemy troops were done to death. Many were killed with the mace and some were thrown down by catching hold of their hair. Many millions were destroyed with the tridents, spears, bayonets and arrows. Some had run away while some others were killed (died fighting) and many had gone to heavens along with the fairies. (24)

Chopaiee :

When that woman fought such a fierce battle then Indra Dutt watched the whole battle standing there. Then he ordered his army and surrounded the enemy from both the sides. (25)

All the warriors got furious with rage and surrounded the enemy from all four sides. With greater eagerness, they were fighting more vigorously. (26)

Chopaiee :

They were shouting 'Kill them', 'Kill the enemy', while shooting arrows at them and confronted Manwati. Then the woman managed to take up all her weapons and she killed many warriors. (27)

She pulled out the striking arrows from her body and after pulling them out, those arrows were shot back. All those hit by the arrows strongly, fell down and never regained consciousness again. (28)

The enemy forces were killed in many ways. Those who were still alive, left the battlefield and fled away. First she killed Indra Dutt and then looked at Ugar Dutt. (29)

Couplet :

The queen had won the battle and then saw Ugar Dutt alive. The queen was thrilled and lifted the Raja. (30)

Aril :

The queen getting elated lifted the Raja and coming to her palace gave much wealth in offerings (alms). The enemy horses were destroyed in large numbers, and then killed the commander of the enemy forces and then ruled the land with great happiness. (31)

Mirza, on hearing these words, started immediately and in no time reached the village of Sahiban. When Sahiban heard this news, she sent another friend to him. (17)

Couplet :

"O friend ! Do not come here before nightfall, lest someone may recognize you and then inform the parents and the marriage party." (18)

Chopaiee

Then her girl friend went to him (Mirza) and explained the whole thing. He spent the day in a garden, when the sun set down and the night fell, then he proceeded towards Sahiban's village. (19)

With the nightfall, he went to Sahiban, and made her ride at the back of his horse and left for his village, having eloped with her. Whosoever followed him, was shot with an arrow. (20)

He kept her throughout the night on the horse back and with the day dawn, made her get down (from the horse). Though he was young and delicate, his body had got tired and started his love affair with Sahiban. (21)

Then being tired, he went to sleep. By that time, all the relatives of Sahiban had learnt about it, so all the warriors got astride their horses and like an army followed him. (22)

"When Sahiban opened her eyes, she saw riders all around along with her two brothers and due to love her eyes were filled with tears." (23)

She did not wake up the sleeping friend and tied his quiver with the tree and hid his other weapons also, which could not be traced even on trying. (25)

By that time all the fighters had reached there and were shouting 'kill him', 'kill him'. Then Mirza opened his eyes and asked for his weapons. (26)

He said, "O mean woman ! What have you done ? You have tied my quiver with the tree. Now mighty warriors had come. Where have you kept my weapons ?" (27)

"O woman ! Tell me, without the weapons, what can I do ? What should I plan? Moreover, there is no comrade with me and that is my greatest worry." (28)

I am tired of looking for my weapons, but they are not traceable. In the meantime, the riders had surrounded him. Her brother threw her on the back of his horse and started moving towards the village. (29)

Without the weapons, Mirza was seen by all running away. All thought about it fearlessly. We will not allow these two to slip away and shall kill both of them. (30)

Someone followed him with the bayonet, someone wielded the sword and someone shot the arrows. Then the Mirza's turban fell down. (31)

Someone shot an arrow at him and someone struck him with the sword, while someone else struck him with his mace and Mirza was killed there only (in the battlefield). (33)

First Mirza was killed and then they attacked Sahiban. They sat under the tree where both of them had spent the night. (34)

Couplet

Then she took out the dagger from his brother's waistband and by piercing it through her stomach, she also joined her lover in death. (35)

He was telling the queen as to why she was meditating on Shiva. "There was no special power in it, this is what I feel." (3)

The attendants took him there and they had known about the room filled with cotton. They thus alleviated Raja's painful anguish and holding him up, threw him on the cotton. (10)

The Raja thought, she had killed the vagabond, but the man did not suffer any body injuries. He got up from there and went away home. Thus, she saved her lover through a deceitful action. (11)

Then the Raja said, "That they should show me the corpse of the thief, who was thrown from top of the palace. My order should be obeyed." (12)

The queen said, "The person, who was thrown from here, must have been broken (cut) into pieces and reduced to bits and pieces and could not be seen. Who will bring him to show ?" (13)

His limbs would have been broken to pieces and the vultures and crows would have eaten away his flesh. No limbs were visible there. So, who will bring his body ? (14)

Bhujang Chhand :

"O Raja ! If a person was thrown from top like this, how any limbs could be seen ? He must have been reduced to pieces and scattered all over and vultures or crows would have eaten him away." (15)

Chopaiee :

Hearing these words, the Raja kept quiet and got busy in his royal functions. Thus the queen had saved her paramour by showing to the foolish Raja this deceitful action. (16)(1)

(131-2591)(Contd)

Chopaiee :

There was a place called Palaou, whose king was called Mangal Dev. He had a noble queen by the name of Sughar Koer and it appeared as if the world's glory was rampant in her beauty. (1)

That queen once saw Garbi Rai and she was in passionate love with him. She got enamoured by him on seeing his charming beauty. She lost all her body senses (being madly in love). (2)

Sortha :

She sent her lady attendant and called him at home and with great joy enjoyed sensuous pleasure with him. (3)

Couplet :

She had cohabitation with him in many styles, while embracing him nicely. She had love affair while kissing him closely. She was having relations with him without leaving him at all. (4)

Chopaiee :

She liked her paramour much and completely forgot about the Raja. She belonged to him through body, mind (speech) and action. Instead of being a stranger, she became like his wife. (5)

She was staying with him day and night, as if he had married her through a Swambar. That woman was not going anywhere near the Raja, as she was enjoying sensuous pleasure with the paramour all the time. (6)

She was having sexual affair with lot of kisses and cohabitation enjoying various poses. She was having sexual relations with great joy and would show her love through sexual relationship. (7)

Someone informed the Raja about this secret, that some paramour was visiting his palace. "O Raja ! Your wife had totally forgotten you, as she was having great love affair with the paramour." (8)

Couplet :

"O Raja ! Being under the magic-spell, you had lost your wisdom even, while your queen was having a great love affair with her paramour." (9)

Chopaiee :

The Raja heard the details with his ears and unsheathed his sword. The Raja came to the queen's palace and placed his guards on all four sides. (10)

The queen's attendant got the clue of this and informed Sughar Koer. "O dear ! Why are you lying with your paramour ? The Raja had placed a guard (watch) on your activities." (11)

"So O queen ! You must think of some means and save the life of your lover. If he were caught by the Raja then both of you will be sent to the valley of death. (12)

In one huge kettle, the paramour was placed (kept) with a lid (of iron plate) with a round mass of butter, it was closed and with reduced heat, it was kept on top. (14)

Couplet :

With the iron plate covered with ghee, it was pasted on top. By putting a paste of mud on sides, fire was lit underneath. (15)

Another kettle full of rice and milk pudding was kept nearby and this kettle was also kept there. All were thinking it to be the foam over milk and no one thought it to be the paramour (itself) inside. (16)

Chopaiee :

She went forward to welcome the Raja and honoured him by all means. "O Raja ! I have got erected some new palaces, which you have not seen." (17)

The Raja had come with a certain doubt (worry), which he told the queen. "I will see the whole palace and catching hold of the paramour, I shall kill him." (19)

She showed the Raja around the whole palace. After going through the palace, the thief was not seen. Where the paramour was kept in the kettle, she brought him there and seated him (spouse) there. (20)

She said, "When I heard about the Raja's visit, then I got elated and my suffering ended. Then I got this food prepared, when I heard about your coming here." (21)

She removed the cover and gave milk to drink to the dear Raja and then distributed to others but the foolish Raja could not gauge the secret. (22)

One kettle was sent for Yogis and another for Bairagis (ascetics), third to Sanyasis and fourth for celibates. (23)

Fifth kettle was given to attendants and sixth to infantrymen. In the seventh was the paramour and it was sent away home along with a lady attendant. (24)

The queen sent away the paramour from there in no time (before the watching eyes) but the foolish Raja could not know the secret behind it. He was taking more interest in the queen then, thinking that she had done something useful for him (and he felt happy). (25)

Couplet :

That foolish Raja, with increased love and affection, was watching the face of the queen. In the meantime, the queen managed to send away her paramour by placing him in big kettle. (26)

Chopaiee :

The foolish Raja was kept gazing with open mouth but the paramour was not caught. The guards with downcast eyes started eating the milk-rice pudding, which was sent to them. (27)

That woman had arranged to send the beloved alive to his house, whom neither the Raja nor the guards could see. When the friend (attendant) came back after safely leaving him at home, the queen got greatly delighted. (28)

Then the Raja enjoyed sensuous pleasure with the queen and told her his own thought (mind's secret) that someone had created a doubt in his mind that is why he had come home to see for himself. (29)

Then the queen said, "O Rajan ! You listen to me. You tell me about the person, who had given this news to you or else you should leave any hope of my love (I shall die)." (30)

When the queen said like this, then the Raja gave the name of the attendant. Then calling the attendant, the queen said, "Whatever you had told the Raja, either prove it right or face death." (31)

"Does anybody blame the queens, whom the whole world bows in reverence ?" The queen thus got the attendant, considering her a liar, killed. The foolish Raja could not get at the secret. (32)

By sending a girl attendant she called him and she enjoyed sensuous pleasure with him, being over-excited and then after enjoying his company, bade him farewell and said, "Please come to-morrow also to my place." (5)

After cohabitation, the Raja went away and came again next day. He enjoyed sexual relationship with the woman and the queen told the paramour, "O my dear beloved ! You have stolen my heart." (you have conquered my heart). (6)

O friend ! To-day I will enact a witch-craft so that I could attain you as my spouse. O beloved ! Whatever I Would say, you do accordingly and take me out (kidnap) with great joy. (7)

She tied a cup with a bamboo tightly and showing it to all, she (fixed) buried it in the sand. "With eyes closed (blind-folded) and racing his horse, the person who would shoot an arrow at it (cup) at night will enjoy the queens company." (8)

First, the person will get his eyes bandaged (blind-folded) during the dark night will race his horse, then shoot his arrow on the sound of a word that person will enjoy the company of the queen, after that. (9)

All heard this news. With racing their horses, they shot arrows, but in the dark night with closed eyes, they were aiming at one side and the arrow would fall on the other side. (10)

The Rajas from various lands would come there and would shoot arrows with closed eyes and nothing was visible during mid-night, so they would shoot the arrows in some other direction, but the arrows would fall somewhere else. (11)

Couplet :

During midnight, with closed eyes, they would shoot arrows but no one could win over the queen, rather they would hand over their queens. (12)

Chopaiee :

Raja Himat Singh was much delighted to see that the queen had told him the secret of this move. No one could gain the hand of Sujan Koer but they were handing over their queens to him. (13)

Then Param Singh came along, who had enjoyed cohabitation with the queen. He was received properly and given a proper place to stay with great honour. (14)

In the night, the queen called him and had sexual companionship with him. As the night approached with darkness, the bamboo was removed and the cup kept on the ground. (15)

With the arrow stuck in the cup, the queen had sensuous pleasure with him and then the whole secret was explained to him. (16)

Chopaiee :

He was told to go to the Raja now itself and tell him, that "I have also come for shooting the arrow and want to show my art of archery." (17)

On hearing the talk of Raja Param Singh, the Raja (Himmat Singh) was greatly pleased and thought to himself what this fool was saying, that "he would shoot arrows with eyes closed and on his failure to succeed. I will gain both of his queens." (18)

Both of his eyes were bandaged and the bow and arrow placed in his hand. Racing his horse by hitting him with the whip, he shot the arrow and the queen watching from the loft clapped (made a sound). (19)

All heard the sound of the clap, It appeared as if he had shot the arrow and hit the cup with the arrow. Then the bamboo was taken down to verify it and a beautiful arrow was found stuck there. (20)

Bhujang Chhand :

The Raja, having lost his beautiful queen, was disheartened; it appeared as if the devil had hit him with his leg. So he sat down with downcast eyes (with bent head) but did not utter a word. He fell on the ground reeling down and did not open his eyes. (21)

He regained consciousness after the lapse of four hours, but then fell down again at a distance, with his turban falling at one place and the necklaces scattered at another place. He was falling down like a warrior, who was about to die. (22)

"O my dear Raja ! What are you afraid of ? All your warriors are waiting here with their weapons. If you give orders, then either we shall kill him or bring him (tied) in chains. If you order, we shall cut off his nose and ask him to seek pardon (or to spite his nose to dishonour him). (24)

Swaiyya :

Himmat Singh, feeling enraged at heart, smiled and said, "This Raja Param Singh was wealthy and very young and thirdly he was a noble person in all respects and he had pierced the cup with eyes closed (bandaged) so it is futile to be angry/enraged with him. How could I kill him ; moreover he was very charming and a warrior prince ? (25)

Chopaiee :

Thus the Raja, saying this, shook his head. He had no control over that Raja. So he handed over his wife to him from his palace. Thus with this deceitful action, Param Singh had won over the queen. (26)

The Raja could not get at the secret of all this witchcraft and the woman thus deceived him with her tricks. He then, having lost his wife, with downcast eyes (head) kept quiet and accepted his fate (quietly). (28)(1)

(133-2652)(Contd)

Chopaiee :

There was a grand Raja by the name of Sabak Singh and he had a charming wife by the name Baj Mati. The Raja never felt shy of any woman and would have sexual relationships with all of them. (1)

If some woman was not willing to agree, then he would forcibly get her cot lifted and brought to his place. Then he would have cohabitation with her and was not bothered about the queen (not afraid of her). (2)

Baj Mati would feel annoyed and enraged at heart, but she had no control over Sabak Singh. Then the queen played a trick, and dissuaded the King from his evil designs (wrong path). (3)

If the queen would happen to see a beautiful woman, she would inform Sabak Singh about it. "O Rajan ! You send for that woman and enjoy sensuous pleasure with her." (4)

When the Raja would hear about it, he would send for that woman and the Raja would enjoy love affair with that woman, about whose beauty the queen would tell. (5)

Then the queen saw a sturdy and hafty person and in the first place she arranged a meeting of the Raja with that woman (his wife). When the person was fully enraged, then the queen talked to him like this. (7)

Couplet :

The queen had a sexual relationship with him and felt greatly elated. Then she told him like this. (8)

Chopaiee :

"O friend ! Tell me. What is your worth (honour) when the Raja was enamoured (interested in) by your wife ? The person, whose wife had relationship with another man, was looked down upon by the whole world." (9)

Couplet :

At first the queen had cohabitation with that man and then made him furious with rage. (10)

Chopaiee :

That man said, "O queen ! Whatever you will say, I will do accordingly. I am not afraid of Sabak Singh at all. He had spoiled and destroyed my family life. I will also have cohabitation with his wife." (13)

The queen told him, "You should use first hair remover and assume the form of a woman. When the Raja would see you in a woman's form, then he would be under the spell of passionate love soon." (14)

The paramour then got his hair removed and embellished the body with ornaments and gave a glance to the Raja and enamoured the Raja to himself (allured the Raja to her love). (15)

When the Raja saw her, then he rushed to the queen's palace and said, "O beauty ! I have seen a woman here and it seems she was looking like Mahadev's wife, Parbati." (16)

"If you could arrange her meeting with me, then I will grant you whatever you would ask for." The queen was greatly delighted, as whatever she had wished for, was happening now. (17)

On hearing these words, the queen came home and arranged her paramour's meeting with him (Raja). When the Raja made some advances towards her, she caught hold of him and crushed him. (18)

He caught hold of the Raja from his arms and had a cohabitation through his anus and blood started oozing out of his bo'y (Raja's). The Raja felt greatly ashamed in his heart. (19)

Couplet :

With his anus-cohabitation, the Raja felt greatly distressed. From that day onwards, the Raja never called another woman to his side. (20)(1)

Here the hundred thirty-fourth episode of Kings & Minister's dialogue regarding woman characterization from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well.

Couplet :

From her beautiful form, the Creator had created many other forms (of beauty). I am fully allured with her by my mind, action and thoughts." (6)

Chopaiee :

Her beauty was beyond description, as if it was the flower of malti. Which poet could describe the glory of her beauty ? It appears as if millions of suns had risen with full brilliance. (7)

When the Mulla heard this with his own ears, then he was mad with separation and shook his head. Then he sent a demon to her and brought her by lifting her cot. (8)

The beautiful woman could not do anything and had cohabitation with the Mulla. When the night was over and the day dawned, then she was sent back to her house. (9)

Thus, the Mulla would call her daily and with the dawn of day she was sent back to the Shah (Firang). He would enjoy sensuous pleasure with her to his satisfaction and would satiate himself with cohabitation with her. (10)

Couplet :

O leader (Master) of the Kazis! Listen. "I have not seen so far the palace of the King of Delhi. This desire has been pestering my mind (for sometime)." (13)

So the Kazi told the devil, "Go and show the palace of the King to her and then bring her back on the cot." (14)

Chopaiee :

The fairy was taken there by the devil and the whole palace was shown to her. The King and his son were shown to her. On seeing him the Kamdev (god of love) had hit her with an arrow (she developed love for him). (15)

She was watching Chitar Deo (King's son) and threw a letter in his hand and came back to the Kazi. On the other side, he got the letter opened and read. (16)

Chopaiee :

Then the King's son performed many magic spells, which resulted in burning the devil. Then the Kazi was brought in chains and he was tied and thrown in the river. (19)

Then he married that woman and enjoyed various types of sensuous pleasures with her. First he burnt the devil with magic spells (witchcraft) and then killed the Kazi. (20)

That clever woman finally adopted a (magic) trick or deceitful action and got a spouse of her choice. First she got the devil burnt (in fire) and then got the Kazi killed. (21)

Couplet :

Thus with this witchcraft the clever woman got the King's son as her spouse and having obtained a husband of her choice, she got both the devil and Kazi killed. (22)(1)

There was a Raja by the name of Bachittar Rath in the holy city of Kurukshetra. He had won great battles along with horses, Rajas and wealth. (1)

Chopaiee :

He had a beautiful queen by the name of Bharmar Mati, as if she had been brought out from the moon by piercing through it (moon-like beauty). Her youthful exuberance and glamour was known all over, which had enamoured all the gods, human beings, snakes and bhujangs (serpents). (2)

There was an ascetic called Bhadar Bhavani. It appeared that the Lord (indestructible) had created him (moulded) with his own hands. When the queen saw him (proud man) then she was mad after him seeing his charm. (3)

Couplet :

Bharmar Mati then sent her girl attendant (friend) to Bhadar Bhavani's house and called him at her house resulting in great delight and satisfaction to Bharmar Mati. (4)

Aril :

Bhadar Bhavani, on hearing her message, came there and was very happy to see the charm of Bharmar Kala. The woman said, "O Master ! I am always interested in your welfare, so that you lead a happy life. Having seen your body all my sufferings have been alleviated (removed). (5)

Wearing a blue colour Sari (curtain), her eyes were waiting for his arrival without even a wink. Being allured in his love, the eyes were fixed in his wait, as the eyes were showing her distress of separation. (7)

Chhand :

The Sanyasi said, "First we got wedded to separation (from world) and got the head shaved off ; then getting wedded to love-sickness and kept a tuft of matted hair and putting ash in the head became great Jogisar (Yogi). Since I went to the jungle, I never came to the town." (8)

"First there was Attre Rishi, who got married to Ansua; then came Ram Chander who got married to Sita; then the Vishnu's incarnation, Krishna got married to 1600 women. Thus the system of man and woman had been spread out in the world by the Lord-Creator. (9)

The smart Sanyasi, on hearing the words of the clever woman, was delighted and with great fun, he related this episode. "O beautiful woman ! Your charming beauty had been created by the Lord Himself. So on seeing you my mind is allured by your charm." (10)

Here the one hundred and thirty-sixth episode of the King's & Minister's dialogue regarding woman's characterization from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well. (136-2716)(Contd)

Couplet :

There was a noble Raja called Drupad Dev at the port of Machhli. All the warriors were at his feet. (at his service). (1)

Chopaiee :

He planned to have a Yagna and called all the Brahmins at home. He served them with good foodstuff and thus won their hearts. (2)

Couplet

From that Yagna, a beautiful girl child appeared and the Brahmins with due deliberations named her Dropadi. (3)

After that, the Lord gave him (Raja) a son, named Drisht Daman for killing Dronacharya and winning many battles. (4)

Chopaiee :

When Dropati became young of age, she thought to herself of a plan, that she should organize a Swambar (marriage ceremony) in such a manner as to attain a great warrior as her spouse. (5)

Aril :

One big fish was tied on top (of a pole) and down below a pot of oil was kept boiling and the condition (of marriage) was that anyone, who would shoot an arrow at the right eye of the fish, while seeing (looking) through the shade in the oil, would be her spouse (to marry her). (6)

All Kings from various lands were invited there and they were told to stretch the bow thoroughly and shoot an arrow in the eye of the fish. Many (Rajas) looking glamorous tried to shoot their arrows, which did not strike the fish and would fall down. (7)

Bhujang Chhand :.

Many mighty Rajas came with great glamour and tried with great ego but would feel dejected and ashamed after the arrow did not strike the fish. They would walk back with downcast eyes like the women, just as a modest woman even would not look down with shyness. (8)

Couplet :

Many Rajas were going with tilted movements to shoot arrows, but the arrow would not hit the fish and they were left dejected (with downcast eyes). (9)

Many were shooting arrows with great arrogance (getting enraged) but could not aim at the fish to hit it; they would slip into the oil and get charred. (10)

Bhujang Chhand :

They would get charred in the oil just as the old women cook dal cakes (round cake of ground pulse). No warrior could hit the fish. Thus, they went back to their capitals, feeling ashamed. (11)

Couplet :

Many Rajas by shooting arrows (unsuccessfully) felt greatly belittled (ashamed) and would sit back dejected. (12)

The arrow would not hit the fish, so they could not gain the hand of dear (Daropati). Many would go back to their homes, while some others had gone to the jungle. (13)

Chopaiee :

This episode was narrated there and the news reached Pandvas, who were roaming around the jungles in great distress, who were passing time by eating fruit and leaves or by killing deer. (14)

Couplet :

The sons of Kunti, on hearing this news said that they would go to the land of Matas, where there were great forests. (15)

Chopaiee :

When Pandvas heard this news, they left for the Matas land and reached the place where Daropad had organized this Swambar and the Rajas were invited. (16)

Couplet :

Where Daropati had arranged the Swambar with the oil boiling in the pot and there Raja Arjun, an expert in archery, stood up there. (17)

He stood alert with both feet on top of the pot (with burning oil) and seeing the shade of the fish therein, he stretched his bow. (18)

With great fury, stretching his bow, he looked at the right eye of the fish and shouted a challenge loudly with egoism saying where the Rajas, winners of unconquerable battles, had failed with their prowess. Saying this with increased fury and stretching the bow to his ears, Arjun shot an arrow at the aim (of the fish). (19)

Couplet :

When Arjun stretched his bow, there was a shower of flowers and all the gods were pleased, but none of the other proud and obstinate Rajas felt delighted. (20)

Chopaiee :

On seeing this position, all the warriors were furious with rage and came (advanced) with their weapons, thinking that this Yogi should be dispatched to hell and make Daropati their queen (by pulling her aside). (21)

Couplet :

Bhujang Chhand :

Many canopies overhead were pierced with holes and somewhere young warriors were let off and many canopies of the kings were cut into pieces. Some were killed by challenging them while some were killed otherwise. The Maru drums (drums of death) were sounded on all four sides. (23)

Couplet :

By eliminating the most unconquerable ones, Arjun lifted the woman and killing many more warriors, made her sit in his chariot. (24)

Bhujang Chhand :

Many had their arms cut off, many lost their feet, and the canopies of many mighty warriors were blown off. Many got their stomach opened up, while some died there itself. They had fallen down as if they were pillars. (25)

Chopaiee :

Ten thousand horses were killed alongwith twenty thousand elephants. About one lakh Rajas and chariots were destroyed, sending many infantry troops to hell. (26)

Then Daronacharya, with his son (Astho-thama) and Kirpacharya, Bhurshava and Darjodhan reached there along with huge armies. (27)

Swaiyya :

They said, "O despot ! We will win over this Daropati in the Swambar and send you to heel by killing you with spears, tridents and bayonets. "Where are you running away with the woman in that beautiful chariot ? O fool ! We will not allow you to escape. We will decide this issue right now; either Arjun or Daryodhan will be left alive." We will not let you go alive. Your white robes will look beautiful with blood stains. To-day this will be decided in the battle, (whether) Pandavas or Koravas will remain alive. (29)

Aril :

Arjun first shot an arrow at Karan and then stretching the bow with an arrow fixed therein, shot at Daryodhana. Bhim also became furious and shot an arrow at Bhisham (Pitama), which killed the horses of Daronacharya and his son (Ashthothama). (30)

Then by shooting an arrow at Bhursharva, brought him under control; and then Kirpacharya was rendered unconscious. Then stubborn Karan, getting furious with rage, advanced forward and fought a fierce battle from the front. (31)

Then he shot an arrow in Arjuna's chest. He could not balance himself and fell down unconscious on the ground. Then Dharopati took the bow and arrow and in no time killed many warriors. (32)

Couplet :

Having fought the battle, all the warriors were very happy and there was no coward among them. It was a fierce battle raging there and many warriors got engrossed in warfare. (34)

Aril :

Many royal horses or Arabic horses were killed and fallen down. The horses along with their ornamental belongings were thrown into the sky. (were killed and thrown on the ground). By taking hold of weapons, the horses with saddles were done away with. With the shooting of arrows, the infantrymen and those on chariots were destroyed. (35)

Chopaiee :

They were held on for three hours (one pehar) and the battle was fought in many ways. Taking the bow in hand, then Arjuna roared, and the Koravas army fled away. (36)

Couplet :

Arjun was delighted to see the way; the woman had fought and said, "O Daropati! You deserve all the praises and salutations on this Earth." (37)

Daropati then said, "The Lord had made you as man and myself as your spouse. You are taking me away without fulfilling the promise. Do you not feel ashamed of yourself." (39)

Chopaiee :

Then Arjuna shot a shower of arrows and made the whole army unconscious. Then he showed his love (by kissing her) for Daropati but no one could see them. (40)

Couplet :

With many kisses and in different styles (Arjuna) the spouse of Daropati continued with his love affair. No one could attack Arjuna and all the Rajas were wonder-struck and shocked (trembled). (41)

He had gained victory over Koravas army and had won over (snatched) Daropati from them. All the other Rajas were defeated and mauled. "Truly Arjuna deserves all approbation and salutation." (42)

Chopaiee :

First he dispersed all the warriors at a distance, those of them who tried to fight were killed and those who fled away were saved. Arjuna felt greatly relieved having won over Daropati and then left for his home. (43)(1)

Chopaiee :

The queen of Orissa, called Abhawati, was famous throughout the world (fourteen lands) for her beauty. The women of the gods and demons were feeling belittled (ashamed) on seeing her charming beauty. (1)

Once she saw Roopman with her own eyes and made him her friend, having given her heart to him (having developed love for him). She called him at home and had love affair with him in various styles. (2)

She applied hair remover to his face, removed all his hair, and made him a female from male. Taking him and her spouse she went for the visit to all holy places of pilgrimage. (3)

She told her spouse that her sister had come there, "So we will go for visiting holy places and having bath there, thus washing off (giving up) all our sins." (4)

Aril :

So she proceeded on the visit to holy places along with her husband and the friend. She made such an arrangement to be in company with her paramour. When the husband will go for his bath in the Ganga she will meet him (the friend) calling her sister. (5)

Couplet :

So she proceeded for the holy places along with her husband and paramour. After many days they had a dip in Ganga. (6)

"I would consider your love as genuine in case you show your love in the presence of your husband." Then the woman enacted this witchcraft, which I am going to relate right now. (3)

Couplet :

She got a place made for the pir (religious leader) in the house and finding a suitable chance, broke it down. (4)

Chopaiee :

After demolishing the construction, she showed it to the husband and frightened him by mentioning about the pir. Now (she said) the pir (Sultan, Sakhi, Sarovar) being enraged would throw you down from the cot. (5)

First he will throw you down from the cot and then bury you under the cot and catching hold of me will throw me down there only and hit both of us with his knees. (6)

"He will tie you with ropes and then turn you upside down and will throw a cot upturned on you and then kill you." (7)

Firstly, she related this episode and then spreading the cot, she slept with the husband. When she saw him asleep, she tied him with ropes. (8)

That demon performed penance for a longtime and got a boon from Rudra. "Whichever person was touched by him on his head, would be burnt and reduced to ashes" (2)

He saw the beauty of Gori (Shiva's wife) and thought to himself. "I shall place my hand on Shiva's head and in no time shall reduce him to ashes." (3)

Pondering on this thought, he started off, and came for the killing of Rudra. When Maha Rudra saw with his eyes, then he took his wife along and fled from there. (4)

On seeing Rudra running away, the demon also followed and made Shiva run from the South to the East. Then Shiva went towards the West and the demon followed him. (5)

When Rudra went to the North, Bhasmangad followed him there. He said, "I will bum him and reduce him to ash right now and then taking away Parbati, make her my wife." (7)

Parbati then said,

Couplet

"O fool ! What sort of boon you have taken from this mad person ? It was all false and you could try it out now itself." (8)

Chopaiee :

"First place your hand on your head and when one or two hair gets burnit, then remove your hand. Then keep your hand on Shiva's head, and then make me your wife." (9)

When the demon heard these words, then he placed his hand on his head. In a moment the fool was burnt. Thus, Parbati saved Shiva from the predicament. (10)

(141-2799)(Contd)

Couplet :

There was a Raja of Bushehar town, called Banasur. All the Rajas of the land bowed to him thinking him to be another Kuber. (1)

Chopaiee :

He had a queen consort named Jogmati, who was known to be most beautiful in the three worlds. Her youthful exuberance and charm were well known and normal. All the gods, men, demi-gods and snakes were allured by her charm. (2)

Couplet :

They were blessed by a beautiful daughter, called Ukha. It seemed die Lord had created this woman with modesty, cool headedness and great shyness. (3)

Aril :

On seeing her in her glorious set up with a charming beauty, the gods, humans, demi-gods and snakes were feeling belittled in their hearts (ashamed of themselves). They were all praise for her tilted glances (without paying any compensation they had sold themselves off to her glance). (4)

Her eyes were black like the deer's and as pointed as an arrow. They were looking glamorous with collyrium inside and were simply beautiful. The lotus flower was feeling shy before the charming beauty of her personality, while lightning was feeling jealous of it. In the various jungles, the birds were chirruping around, but even they were unable to gauge her beauty so far. (5)

It appeared, they were like horses fitted with saddles or were looking glorious like the dagger. They were piercing like the sword and were akin to the Narcissus (flower). It seemed the fire seeing the red eyes of an awakened person throughout the night, was feeling its own glitter as nominal. "O belle ! Both your eyes were allming. (6)

"The black bees, on seeing your charm, were madly in love with you, the deer were still roaming around the jungle, without going back to their hide-outs. The ascetics had on seeing your beauty, loosened their tufts of hair. The birds were flying in the skies but were unable to assess the extent of your beauty." (7)

The charming beauty, bestowed on her by the Lord Creator, was enough to engulf the beauty of the whole world (fourteen worlds). If any god or demon would go to see her beauty, he would fall down unconscious on the ground. (8)

Sehsarbah was her father, who was very powerful. He was armed with thousands of weapons within his arms, as if he were a second God Almighty. (9)

He had killed all the Kashatriya Rajas on Earth and then given offerings to the Brahmins, along with many hundreds of cows in alms. (10)

Chopaiee :

The person, whom all the Rajas were willing to pay second fiddle, was worshipping Shiva daily. One day he propitiated Shiva, making him extremely pleased with him he got the blessing of fighting out a ferocious battle. (11)

Shiva then said

Couplet :

"O wise man ! When the flag on top of your house falls down on the ground, then you should consider it as a symbol of the coming fierce battle." (12)

Chopaiee :

His daughter had a dream while lying asleep, that someone had come to her house in the form of god of love. Leaving that god of love, she had got wedded to his son and pondered over the town of Dwarka (as Anrudh was living there). (13)

"Then the passionate love of the belle erupted for her beloved. Her whole body became engrossed in romance and due to her separation, she became almost mad." (14)

Chopaiee :

The belle got up shouting, "O dear, O dear". She fell down on the ground and her teeth got gnashed (clattering of teeth), Her attendants lofted her up, and Chitar Rekha, her attendant, heard her full story. (15)

Swaiyya

Her lustful eyes were searching around as if they were revealing a deep secret. She was suffering from the fever of separation. "O friend ! I do not like this embellishment of ornaments. I would take all your ailments on myself and hearing these words let us move fast, as I cannot afford to see your predicament. She was pining for her beloved, or some other affliction. Let us go quickly to examine her, whether she will survive or succumb to her pain (die)." (16)

That egoistic woman spoke like intoxicated persons, with tears in her eyes. She had consumed some poisonous liquid or she had got herself sawed into two with the saw at Kashi. "O friend ! I feel she will become a Yogan (ascetic woman) leaving her home with tattered clothes. So try to visit her and see her face, or else Ukh kala would die while pining (for you)." (17)

Couplet :

Chitar Rekha, on hearing these words, felt greatly aggrieved for her friend and proceeed with the speed of wind to the place (where Ukh kala was present). (18)

Chopaiee :

Chitarkala then erected a big palace there (painted) and painted all the paintings of the world (of fourteen worlds). She painted all types of gods, demons, musicians of Shiva, demi-gods and snakes, which looked glorious there. (20)

Couplet :

All the masters of various lands were painted, including Rohini's spouse (Balbhadar), son of Parduman, Anrodh and Krishna etc. Yadvas were all shown there. (21)

The fourteen worlds were also painted and then told her to see what she had prepared as a means of her keeping alive. (22)

Chopaiee :

Then she saw Parduman and bent her head with shyness (modesty) and on seeing his son, she got relieved of all her body pains. (26)

Couplet :

By bowing to him, she started praising and saluting him and said, "O friend ! Whatever I had seen in my dream, you have shown me now (in this painting). (27)

By painting the fourteen worlds you have shown me my dear beloved also. Whatever you have shown here, you arrange my meeting with him. (28)

Chopaiee :

"So O dear prince ! Please proceed to the land, which I am going to describe to you. Come with me on a spacecraft and make our home sanctified by going there." (31)

Couplet :

Anuradh left for the place, on hearing these words, and reached the town of Besehar. (32)

"If a dear friend lives in the heart and then someone arranges a meeting with him, then one should serve such a friend like a perfect slave." (33)

Aril :

Couplet :

On saying these words, the friend was called in and then embracing him in many ways, she enjoyed sensuous pleasure with him. (36)

Chopaiee:

As per eighty-four poses, she enjoyed sexual companionship while embracing him lovingly. By enjoying sexual pleasure, the night was spent and the dawn had approached. (37)

On the advent of day the friend remained in the house and did not disclose it to Banasur frankly. In the meantime, the tied flag had fallen down as a result of which Banasur was greatly in anguish. (38)

While in the act of sexual companionship, the king of kings had seen her daughter and became furious with rage. He thought to himself that he would catch hold of both of them and after killing them, shall dispatch them to hell (valley of death). (41)

Couplet :

Ukha, on seeing her father, had cast her eyes downwards and was thinking of some means so as to save her paramour. (42)

Anuradh also got up ready with his bow and arrow. He straightaway with great valour, killed many warriors in no time. (43)

Bhujang Chhand :

Many weapons were struck and a fierce battle raged there. Shiva along with Parbati started dancing. All the warriors rushed with their tridents and swords. Being enraged greatly they started trotting their fast steeds. (44)

Millions of elephants were killed and many charioteers were crushed. Many horse riders were killed with their horses let loose. Many canopies were tom and many canopies were broken. Many warriors were taken prisoners, while many were let off. (46)

Many cowards had fled away, all many warriors getting furious with rage, joined the (battle) fray. From all sides cries of 'Kill them', were heard, Sehsarbahu had armed himself with many weapons and proceeded getting enraged, while the royal drums were beating loudly. (47)

Couplet :

The type of fierce battle fought there is beyond description and the wounded Anuradh was tied doen (in chains). (48)

Chopaiee :

When Ukha heard that her beloved was bound in chains, then she sent for Rekha and then dispatched her to Dwarka. (49)

She told her, "You go to the place where Sri Krishna was seated. Giving my letter, you bow at his feet, and explain my position thoroughly." (50)

Then Sri Krishna became furious with rage and shattered the enemy weapons and arms (fully) to pieces and shot many arrows at Banasur, which pierced through the shield, bow and protective cover. (61)

Aril :

Then Krishna, getting enraged, shot many arrows which pierced through the shield, coat of mail and other weapons of Banasur and his four charioteers were killed and thrown away and many other charioteers were also killed. (62)

Steadying himself, he got up holding his weapons and stood up on the ground and he shot many arrows at the blue jay and (Sri Krishna) his master. Seven arrows were shot at Satik and eight arrows at Arjuna. Being furious with rage, he killed millions of elephants and Kaurvas. (63)

Krishna then became furious with rage and tore away his flag and threw his canopy on the ground. He cut off the enemy's shields, protective covers and bodies even (flesh) with fury and then scattered the chariots and charioteers on the battlefield by cutting them into pieces. (64)

Krishna then killed with great fury all those fighting with both arms, all those on chariots were reduced to pieces; thousand arms of Sehsarbahu and other warriors were cut off and thrown by Sri Krishna. Then Shiva came to the help of Sehsarbahu being his devotee. (65)

Bajarpati Sri Krishna then shot twenty arrows on Shiva by calling him Vishwapati and then Shiva shot thirty-two arrows on Krishna. Even demi-gods got interested in watching the battle and both gods and demons were confused by watching the battle. (66)

Rudra, then getting enraged, shot heated arrows, which were turned back with Krishna's cold arrows. Thus, Krishna fought with great steadfastness the battle of skies with arrows against Shiva and then won the battle. (67)

Couplet :

Thus winning the battle, Krishna got his grandson out of bondage ; great music was played on hearing which the gods and Vyas Rishi got delighted. (68)

Aril :

Anuradh was then married to Ukha; by crushing great forts with warriors and elephants, it was made possible. The stubborn warriors having defeated the enemyjwent away with great satisfaction and then the battle started again with Dand Baktar. (69)

Bhujang Chhand :

On one side was Dand Baktar while on the other side was the warrior Krishna. The stubborn men do not falter and both were experts in battle. They were having spears and bayonets in hands and the warriors were looking glorious. On seeing them, the gods and demons got rid of their pride. (70)

Then Sri Krishna let go the revolving wheel and its edge struck the demon's neck and he fell down on the ground with fury reeling around. It appeared as if the seventh cliff of sumer mountain had fallen down. (71)

Chopaiee :

Sri Krishna went away to Dwarka after killing the enemy. Many types of music was played with beat of drums. The fairies had sent horses with great pleasure for their passage to heavens and all the gods showered flowers on them. (72)

"O beloved Raja ! Listen and do something for me. Leaving some money, you take away all my wealth. By digging the Earth, make a mandap (hermitage) but it should not be visible from top and only normal ground should be seen." (7)

Then he took lot of money leaving aside some material. By digging the Earth a math (hermitage) was built underground. No clever person could see his hermitage, as it appeared from top like any normal ground. (8)

Chopaiee :

That Raja was called by the queen daily and she would enjoy fun and frolic in many ways. She had developed great love for him, as if she had gained him after proper marriage ceremony (with seven circumambulations). (9)

When the Raja would go away after having sexual companionship with her, she would send for the Yogi and would embrace him tightly, enjoying love affair with him. But the foolish Raja could not see through this secret. (10)

Aril :

On this side even the queen saw him (Raja) while having cohabitation. So she tied him with ropes and burnt him. Then she told Kirpanath Yogi, "Whatever deceitful action I would suggest, you please do accordingly." (12)

Chopaiee :

"I will keep some food material before you, while closing the doors of hermitage (openings). Then I would dig out the Earth and show you another witchcraft and would bring Raja Bikram Singh at your feet (in your obeisance)." (13)

After saying these words, she closed the door and kept a heap of ashes before him. Then she went to the Raja and told him that she (the cursed woman) had dreamt (had) a dream. (14)

"In the dream, I had seen a Yogi, who had told me like this, "By digging out the Earth, please take me out and this would result in great glory for you." (15)

The Raja Bhudar was also engaged in this job of digging. "Having seen this (in dream) I have come to inform you. So you come with me and see for yourself what was happening there." (16)

After saying this, she brought the Raja along with her and engaged the (women) attendants on digging Earth. When the Raja saw a Math (hermitage) there, then he praised the queen greatly. (17)

Then the queen said, " O dearest Raja ! First let me go there and then you follow me." (19)

Saying this, the queen went there and had sexual relationship with the Yogi. Then she brought the Raja there and showed him the image (shade) of the Yogi. (20)

Then the Yogi said, "The Ganga was flowing next to you, show me the water from Ganga, thus relieving me of my suffering." (21)

When the Raja heard this, he brought a pitcher full of water from Ganga. When the Yogi saw him bringing Ganga water, he said these words. (22)

The Yogi showed the milk in his flake, as Ganga's water and then added, "I do not know, what had happened to Ganga, first it was milk and now it has turned (changed) into water. (23)

When the yogi heard the name of Kal-Yuga,-he exclaimed ! "Alas ! Alas ! Please do not let the air of Kalyug come and touch me and closed the door again." (26)

The queen then said,

"O Master ! I will serve you and fetch water for you standing on one foot. But why are you closing the door ? O Nath (Master) Be kind to us." (27)

"Then the Raja said," O Master ! Have mercy ! I would be your slave. Accept my queen at your service. So please show your benign glance to me! (show your benevolence !)." (28)

Couplet :

The Raja handed over the queen at his service with great relief. Without allowing him to close the door, he embraced his feet tightly. (29)

The foolish Raja was greatly elated, but could not see through the deceitful action. Considering him a great Yogi, he handed over his queen even at his service. (30)

Having killed Raja Bhudhar Singh, the woman deceived Raja Bikram Dev and had sensuous pleasure with the Yogi. "The women show strange behaviour and no one could gauge their depth." (31)(1)

Chopaiee :

There was a mighty Raja in Bikaner. Whose fame was spread throughout the three worlds. He had a queen, named Shingar Vati, who was known for her beauty throughout the whole world, (all the fourteen regions). (1)

Aril :

A merchant called Mehtab Rai came there once. Seeing his beautiful and charming personality, the queen got enamoured by him. The queen sent an attendant and called him at her place. Then she enjoyed sexual relationship with him to her heart's satisfaction. (2)

Chopaiee :

The queen would call him daily and would have different types of cohabitation with him. When she would feel, the night was about to finish, she would send him back to his place. (3)

Aril :

That merchant was bringing various materials of his selection and on getting them the queen was excited. The queen would also throw open her treasure to him, that beloved was always in her heart. (4)

When the Raja came to know about this affair, then the queen got frightened in many ways. The Raja was thinking of killing the queen immediately and burying her under the ground. (5)

When the queen leamt about it, she sent for the paramour. She told him to take her away along with himself to his country. (6)

They got a house erected in the wilderness and kept two doors in it. "If the Raja happened to come through one door, we will escape through the second door." She said. (7)

Aril :

They got (sent for) a he-bull of the Raja and they rode it with great joy and came to that place (building) and started enjoying all sorts of fun and frolic. (8)

When the Raja heard the news of his wife (running away) eloping (with that merchant) he got greatly enraged and started for their pursuit, without taking any aides with him. Following their foot-steps he reached there and entered the palace muttering (something against her). (9)

Getting down from the bull, the Raja was very furious and (thought to himself) that he would catch hold of both and kill them straightaway. (11)

Chopaiee :

When the Raja came up from one door, they got out from the other passage (and disappeared). They rode on the untiring bull (of the Raja) and both the queen and paramour rode away on it. (12)

Aril :

Riding on the untiring bull, they raced it and with the speed of wind it went away. Who could catch up with it ? The Raja came down from that building (palace) with eyes aghast and found that they had made a fool of him and taken away his bull also. (13)

When the paramour reached his house along with the queen, he offered lot of money to the Brahmins in alms. If someone could gain such a woman with deceit, then one feels all praise for such a person. (16)

The witchcraft of clever women cannot be fully grasped and how could one explain such an inexplicable (position) situation ? But if at all one comes to know about it, then one should keep quiet about this weakness without telling anyone. (17)(1)

It was having a beautiful white coloured body, which would put even the moon to shame. When it would trot majestically, it seemed as if lightning was flashing (shining) through the clouds. (3)

That woman went to sell that horse and came to the Raja's town. She had assumed the form of a male (which was having) with a glory like that of millions of suns. (4)

When the Raja had his assembly the woman brought the horse and showed to him. The Raja was delighted to see the horse and thought of buying it on payment. (5)

First, the Raja ordered the parade of the horse and then sending his attendants, he evaluated the horse, through the brokers at Rupees Ten lakhs. (6)

Aril :

Then the woman laughed and said, "O King ! You listen to my words. Give me five thousand gold coins and take this horse away to your stable." (7)

The Shah sent for five thousand gold coins and handing them over to her hand he rode on the horse and she said, "I wil' go home to keep the coins away (at home) and then after that I shall tie the horse in the stable." (8)

After saying these words, the woman raced the horse away and the Raja getting enraged, sent some horse riders to chase her. After about hundred fifty kilometers, they got tired and stopped. The woman could not be caught and they were left (beating their heads) desperate. (9)

After keeping the coins at home, the woman came to the King's assembly, where the King was seated (on throne). After getting down from the horse, the woman saluted him (Raja) thrice and said, "I had taken my price so now you take your horse." (10)

Couplet :

After keeping the gold coins at home and showing him her witchcraft, she handed over the horse to the King with pleasure. (11)(1)

The queen called Bishan Singh. She developed love for him and had a sexual affair with him. "Then she talked to him with great love and affection, asking him to do something for her, considering her as his well- wisher." (3)

"First give lot of money to this prostitute and then in the presence of the Raja, show your love for her. When she would lose her affection for the Raja, then inviting her to your house, kill her." (4)

So first lot of money was given to the pros and then developing love for her, he had sexual relationship with her. When the Raja called her (pros) to his assembly, then that Bishan Singh also came to attend that assembly. (5)

Bishan Singh laughed and said something to her and then making it quite obvious (apparent) to the Raja, he made some signs to her saying that "She should not care for the Raja any more and not to develop greater love for him." (6)

Thus the queen explaining like this, made the Raja understand (the truth) and on the other side by sending her paramour, she sent for the prostitute through her man. (13)

Chopaiee :

When the pros went to the friend's house, then the attendant told the queen and the queen showed her (pros) character to the husband and the Raja cursed himself for this. (14)

Couplet :

The Raja thought to himself that the woman, who had been made a friend by giving her so much money had deserted him for the sake of money and had developed love for another person. (15)

Aril :

When the pros came out after having sexual affair with the paramour, the Raja sent many boys to chase her. Then by having sexual relationship with them by force, she felt miserable and died. The queen had adopted a strange method (deceitful action) to get rid of the prostitute. (16)(1)

There was a drug-addict by the name of Parbat Singh and he had five wives. He was never satisfied with his dose of poppy husk. Who would give him poppy husk by paying money for it. ? (1)

One day, he lost (missed) his dose of drug and he became very restless. Then the five women learnt about it (that his addiction was disrupted). But they could not lay their hands on anything (drug) in the house, in spite of their efforts. (2)

Then all the five worked out a programme (decided on something) and made that wailing person lie down on a cot. They thought in their mind to take him out for burying him somewhere. (3)

Aril :

When these women reached some wilderness, they saw a deep pit somewhere on the way. Then nearby they saw some wayfarers with lot of money there. They thought that they would strike a good bargain now. (4)

Taking him for a dead person, they lifted his cot and could not get at the secret behind it. When they all stood near the pit, then the woman spread a noose around their necks and threw them in the pit. (7)

One woman went quickly to the village and brought some opium; one of them went one kilometer away shouting aloud and brought many people after killing the travellers and showed them that their husbands had been killed with the help of a noose. (8)

They (women) said, "that four camels were loaded with gold coins and eight camels with rupees. Now the husbands have died like this and we have been rendered helpless." (12)

Chopaiee :

Then the Kazi said, "O Women ! You need not feel any anguish. You give us a letter of relinquishment and take away your twelve camels." (13)

Couplet :

The women then said, "You have helped us being helpless without taking a single penny in reward and have handed over all the wealth. O Lord of the Kazis! You are worthy of all honour." (14)

Thus getting rid of all enemies and sufferings, they saved their husband and then being overjoyed they served him by all means. (15) (1)

Aril :

Then she got two of her own sons through God's Grace. They were very beautiful, clever and celibate with a cool mind. Then these two sons gave poison to the other (brought-up) child and the queen started thinking of giving the kingdom to her sons. (3)

She started crying, wailing loudly in various ways and splitting her hair, she was looking at him (third son). The saviour Raja came and said, "Do not feel the pangs (of separation). This should be taken as God's Will and then have patience to bear this loss." (4)

One day the Raja had to go to the battlefield suddenly, then he rode on the elephant along with his queen and went. On his arrival, there was a fierce battle fought and the proud warriors danced around. (5)

Aril :

The Raja, getting enraged killed many warriors in the battlefield. With shooting many arrows, he killed many horses and cut off chariots. The warriors seeing the fury of battle, attacked by beating drums, toor and mirdang-muchang. (6)

Many horse riders with great wrathfulness advanced in the battlefield and the army armed with weapons and coats of mail advanced from both the sides. The war drums were beating and the warriors attacked by challenging the enemy and while fighting, were cut into pieces. (7)

Shortly many frightful warriors, being cut into pieces, were falling down on the ground. Many invincible warriors, being struck by swords, were cut down into pieces. Though they fell down cut into pieces, but they never relented at heart. It appeared as if dooms-day had come with God's Will. (8)

When the Raja, along with the queen became furious with rage then both of them took up their strong bows and arrows in hand. The woman shot an arrow in the south direction and with one arrow crushed the enemy. (9)

It appeared as if in the month of Jeth (May-June) the sun had shone forth at noon, or due to flooding (high tide) the ocean (waters) was shirking away from the shores. The troops were killed by challenging them with Brij arrows and swords, just as Vishnu along with Lachhmi had become enraged. (10)

When the queen shot an arrow with fury at anybody, the warrior would fall down on the ground instantly. The gods showered flowers from the heavens and praised the queen for her fighting ability. (11)

The Raja along with the wife, being enraged fought bitterly. Then a bullet hit him on the heart and he fell down unconscious in the elephant's cradle. Then the queen took him in both her arms. (12)

She tied the Raja with the cradle and with raised hands, she started leading the army. Seeing the Raja still alive, the warriors launched a fierce attack and started fighting the battle in a wonderful manner. (13)

Being furious with rage, the warriors were gnashing their teeth. They would not relent even if they were being cut into pieces. Having killed the enemy Raja and his army, the warriors felt greatly elated and sounded the drums of victory. (14)

Then the queen having defeated (killed) the enemy with her own hands and seeing an auspicious occasion, gave the reins of kingdom to her son. When she proceeded for her immolation with great pomp and show she heard a heavenly voice (verdict). (15)

"The benevolent Lord had been very kind to you, as you had fought well for your Master. So you may get back your spouse alive and go back with (your spouse) great joy and rule the country happily." (16)

Dohra

By fighting the battle bravely, she had killed the Raja's enemy and then made (got) her spouse alive back and ruled the country along with the Raja with great eclat. (17)(1)

Here the hundred fifty one episode of the King's & Minister's dialogue regarding woman characterization from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well.

Even Indra was frightened of that demon (Jambasur) and he had won over all the fourteen worlds (the whole world). That demon had launched an attack against Vishnu and a fierce battle raged there. (3)

Aril :

Indra had fought against him many times, even the sun and moon (gods) were tired of fighting against him, but no one could beat him (compete with him). In that battle, the gods and demons had died so badly, as if in the garden of Kuber wealthy persons were seated. (4)

From both sides many musical instruments were being played and with glorious robes the warriors from both sides were roaring. A fierce battle then raged there and there were heavy casualties. The arrows, swords and daggers were in use. (6)

The demon's warriors getting enraged launched a bitter attack. The stubborn warriors used their arms and ammunition with great fury. When Jambasur armed with coats of mail and sword thundered in the battlefield, Indra fled away from the battlefield. (7)

Chopaiee :

Indra, fleeing from there, went to the place where Vishnu was sitting with Lachhmi. Indra, with great anguish cried aloud (and said), "O Master! We have been defeated in your lifetime even !" (8)

Then Vishnu on hearing Indra's story with anguish felt greatly excited and left the place along with Lachhmi and armed with weapons came to the place where Jambhasur was thundering in the battlefield. (9)

Aril:

Vishnu, getting furious with rage, shot about twenty arrows, which wounded Jambhasur on striking him. The great arrows, stained with blood, were looking glorious and seeing their glamour even the offspring of the snake tachhak was feeling ashamed (belittled). (10)

After writing their names on the arrows, the warriors, with great fury, proceeded to the battlefield. Whosoever will be killed by an arrow, will be known as to who killed whom ? (and the warrior recognized). (18)

When the battle was raging fiercely, then finding an opportunity the woman took the bow of the Raja and killed the other Raja with great wrathfulness. (19)

Chopaiee :

Being struck with the arrow (with the name of friendly Raja) the Raja became furious with rage, and seeing that the Raja had shot this arrow, so he killed him and then went to heaven himself (faced death). (20)

Couplet :

Naaj Mati thus managed to kill both the Rajas and then came to meet Raja Bahu Singh with great joy. (21)

Chopaiee :

On reaching there, she said, "O dear Raja ! I had killed both your enemies and had done your job according to your wish. So now you call me to your place and then have sexual relationship with me." (22)

One Raja was killed by her with her own hands, while the other one was killed by him (the Raja), Naaj Mati then carried out her sexual affairs with this Raja with great joy. (24)

Chopaiee :

The Raja then took Naaj Mati to his palace and kept her (with him). With the sun and moon as witnesses, the Raja wedded her. She was penniless and now she was made a queen. It is rather difficult to gauge the depth of character of a woman. (25)(1)

Here the hundred and fifty-third episode of the King's & Minister's dialogue regarding woman characterization from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well. (153-3051)(Contd)

Couplet :

There was a woman by the name of Darap Kala in the town of Sialkot. She was very young and due to this she was very passionate (and was pestered by sexual desires). (1)

There was a Businessman's (Shah's) son named Dani Rai and he was created by the Lord as an obedient son by his figure and nature. (2)

The daughter of the King, Darap Kala was very beautiful. So, she thought to herself to have a good love affair with the Shah's son. (3)

There was so much love between the two, that she completely forgot about worldly shyness (modesty). It appeared as if they were married, though she was a stranger woman. (5)

Aril :

It has been stated that the seven functions (thing) like love, playing of fun, cough, itch, bloodshed (Murder), alms giving, (goodness or giving presents) and wine cannot be kept secret (hidden not with standing all the efforts). These are always known to the whole world in the end. (6)

Couplet :

Darap Kala had sold herself off to Shah's son (was almost madly in love) and was having a love affair with him during day and night and all had heard about it. (7)

When Darap Kala sent for the Shah's son, then the infantrymen caught hold of him and there was no possibility of saving him. (8)

They took him to the Raja after tying him in bondage and he said the same thing (before the Raja). "If I were to show you something, then what would you give me in reward ?" (10)

The place from where you had caught me and brought me here, she had told me like this. "If I were to show you how to sow gold, then what present could I get from you in return." (as reward). (11)

When the Raja heard these words, then he sent for Darap Kala as well. That man was kept in a palace and he asked him to sow the gold. (12)

"You keep me and this woman in a house without saying any good or bad things. After the elapse of eleven months, I will come personally and tell you (inform you)." (13)

When both of them were kept in a house, then the woman told her paramour, "O friend ! Now you have sensuous pleasure with me without having any fear in mind ?" (14)

Aril :

They carried on with their love affair and sexual relationship for ten months and embracing each other carried out cohabitation in various styles. When the eleventh month started then Darap Kala went to the Raja and said. (17)

"The time for sowing gold had come and she called all the queens along with the Raja. The whole lot of residents of the town also came for watching the fun and reached the place where the woman was seated." (18)

Now call the woman or man who had not been degraded from his moral values (religions duties). He should sow this gold. If any degraded man or woman were to touch the gold, then the gold will not grow and I will be held guilty (responsible)."(19)

Then the Raja said, addressing them all, "If someone had not lost his moral values (had not been degraded) he should go to sow the gold." On hearing these words all the men and women kept quiet, being shocked (surprised) and no one came forward for rowing the gold." (20)

Aril :

When I shall see the sun rise half way through with my eyes, then I will push you in the river by holding your hand. Then you should try hard (to save yourself) by flapping your hands and then shout loudly, "I am drowning." (6)

Then she pushed him into the river, then the paramour made many efforts to save himself and shouted loudly. Then many people came rushing on seeing him drowning and giving him their hands saved him (from drowning). (7)(1)

(155-3086)(Contd)

Chopaiee :

"There was a Choudhary (landlord) of Madhya Pradesh, whose name was Roshan Singh according to people. His wife was Kandrap Kala, who had allured (with her beauty) all, including birds, deer, (wild animals), demi-gods and snakes. (1)

He had plenty of money and food material and the master would guard them every day. If any Yogi would come for alms, he was given lot of alms and sent away with full satisfaction. (2)

Aril :

Then a Yogi came there, on seeing whose charm, even Kamdev (god of love) would get allured. The Lord had bestowed him with great charm and none like him would be there even in the past, present or future. (3)

Kandrap Kala got enamoured by seeing his charming beauty and was suffering from the pangs of separation. By sending her lady attendant she called him at home and then enjoyed sensuous pleasure with him in many ways. (4)

When the landlord, leaving the citadel of elders, came home then the wife hid the Yogi in a store room. Then, getting enraged, she told the foolish landlord that you deserve to be beaten with shoes on the head hundred times. (5)

"In your rein of riches, I have never worn beautiful clothes nor had palatial house to live in or you had not given me enough money. Neither I have enjoyed the fun and frolic in this world, nor I have been able to give alms (presents) to Brahmins by inviting them at home." (6)

Chopaiee :

Then the fool replied that he had never kept any money hidden away from her. "You could give away any amount to anyone you like without asking me (without caring for me)." (7)

Aril :

The wife then said, "Instead of giving copper coins in alms, the alms given in silver have double the effect (reward), while the alms (presents) given in the form of gold was four times more effective (rewarding). Instead of giving alms in terms of money, it is always more rewarding to give alms in the form of food materials. This thing had been stated in the four Vedas, six Shastras or eighteen Puranas. (8)

Couplet :

This store-room full of food material, should be given away in alms to the Brahmins by inviting them sometimes. O great Landlord ! So you better agree to my demand, which I would like most ? (9)

Then she called the Brahmin lady attendant, who was arranging her meetings (with the Yogi) and gave away food material in the store, along with the (Yogi) paramour. (10)

Chopaiee :

The foolish landlord could not see through the secret (behind this move), as to how his wife had deceived him. He thought that the woman had given away alms that day, but could not gauge the depth of her secret move, (11)

When the lady attendant, who was arranging meetings-was given presents, the foolish landlord did not realize the secret. They took away the food material from the storeroom and the woman managed to send away the paramour safely home.(12)(1)

Even Kamdev (god of love) was keen to acquire her and Indra or moon (gods) were wishing to marry her. Even Kartikya, on seeing her, wanted to wed her. Maha Rudra, on seeing her, decided to stay in the jungle and then never returned home. (3)

She was having beautiful eyes of the deer, (as if stolen from the deer) and her speech was sweet like the Koel (black Cuckoo). She had borrowed (snatched) the brilliance from lightning and her teeth were like the pomegranate beads (grains). She had taken away the nose of the parrot and her legs would put the banana tree to shame. On seeing her (beautiful) eyes, the lotus flowers, feeling ashamed of themselves had hidden themselves in water. (4)

Couplet :

Her beauty was known all over the (four corners of the) world. Sheshnag, Indra and Kuber all were keen to marry her. (5)

The Swans on hearing about her beauty from the birds, had come over to this place, leaving Mansarovar. (6)

Couplet :

"People consider him to be full of glory and is charming and very wealthy. You call him and wed him as he was most suitable for you." (9)

Chopaiee :

We are having our abode in Mansarovar, and God Almighty had given us the life of a swan. We watch the wonderful sights of various lands and see the glory of the rich or poor people. (10)

Aril :

We have seen a very rich person, called Kuber and another ascetic Rudra and another King (god) Indra, who was considered to be the Master (Lord) of the world. We have seen only one beautiful woman, like you."O dear ! Nal is also very charming, so you should marry him." (11)

The gods and demons both had reached there, along with musicians (Shiva's) demi-gods and snakes. The gods, sun, moon and Indra also came there. Kuber and Varuna also came with the playing of musical bands. (17)

All came there posing in the form of Nal. Indra had sent Nal as his emissary. Hearing the words of Indra, the mighty Raja came rushing there. No one stopped him and he reached there (18)

On seeing his charm Damvanti felt greatly elated. Whatever the swan had stated came out to be true. "The day I will attain him as my spouse, then from that moment of that day I will be all sacrifice to him along with my lady attendant" (19)

Damvanti had thought to herself in her mind) and in front of all said like this. "O People ! Listen to me. The daughter of Bhim Sain takes this vow that I will wed only Raja Nal amongst you." (20)

All the Rajas became pale and dejected and they went back home. All those, including Kalyug etc, felt greatly pained at heart. Then Nal got married to the daughter of Bhim Sain with great eclat and playing of music, as per normal rites. (21)

Kalyug (Nal's brother) in the form of Pohkar had gone there, when Nal brought Damvanti along with him after marriage. By (playing chess), gambling he defeated Nal and after winning his kingdom and glamour, he sent Nal to the jungle. (22)

When Nal, having left his glory and kingdom came to the jungle and felt aggrieved, and then came to Ayudhya. Due to the separation of her spouse, Damvanti became a recluse and started on the path where her spouse had gone. (23)

Without her spouse, Damvanti also was in great suffering and her pangs of suffering cannot be described by me, as they are beyond description. That woman, in the form of a recluse in the separation of her spouse, came to the town of Chanderi. (24)

Bhim Sain sent many people to locate her and after tracing her they brought her home. Those Brahmins, who had trace ' Damvanti, were sent again to locate Nal and while on his search, they reached Ayudhya. (25)

After watching out many people they came across Nal and uttered the name of Damvanti (with their tongue). Then with tears in eyes, he asked about the welfare of Damvanti. Then the Brahmins were assured that this was Raja Nal only. (26)

When they conveyed the news of Raja Nal, having been found, then a second Swambar for Damvanti was organized. Hearing the words of Raja Bhim Sain all the Rajas came again and Raja Nal also came there riding a chariot. (27)

Couplet :

Seeing Raja Nal riding a chariot, all the people recognized him and Damvanti with this deceitful action married him again. (28)

With the use of clubs striking them they were trembling and many shoes were being hurled at each other. Their bodies were bleeding with scratches and no one was left unwounded/unhurt. (4)

Chopaiee :

The necklaces of many necks were broken and the tufts of matted hair had got loosened with the striking of clubs (sticks) some faces had wounds with the nails, as if moon had risen. (5)

Many persons, originally with tufts of hair had lost their tufts, many had been killed, and many had run away and many had died, some were biting others with their teeth, just as a type of battle had never been fought before. (6)

Mostly people were beaten with shoes, leaving no tufts of hair on heads, no one was left with any necklaces, then Balak Ram took up a shoe in hid hand. (7)

He struck a sanyasi's head (ascetic) with his shoe and struck another sanyasi on his face (with shoe), resulting in blood oozing out of the (defaced) face just like a drain flowing during the month of Savan (July). (8)

Then all the ascetics launched a combined attack and came rushing holding their shoes in hand. Chour Bharath and Randigir also rushed and came collecting many followers with them. (9)

They surrounded Balak Ram and beat him with shoes, making him unconscious. He fell down reeling on the ground, as if a pillar had fallen with the strike of lightning. (10)

All the bairagis (recluses) became furious with rage and none fled away. They struck Chour Bharth and Randigir with sticks. (11)

Having been beaten with clubs and being wounded, the sanyasis were enraged greatly and (beating) fighting with fists, legs and shoes, they laid(threw) down the bairagis on the ground. (12)

Aril

Holding clubs in hands, the bairagis became very furious with rage and stood up with their spades and clubs. They started cutting off the limbs of sanyasis (ascetics) and eating them and were throwing them down by naming some ten organizations. (13)

The sanyasis were also biting them with teeth, while attacking them and throwing their necklace (broken) from the necks and throwing them on the ground by pulling their legs and striking them with their maces with both hands. (14)

Then the bairagis came to the (queen) Tambar Kala and said, "The sanyasis had pestered them too much. Then on hearing this, the queen called Dautantrai." (15)

The sanyasis were listening to Dautantra while Bairagis were worshipping Ramanand. The queen told them, "You do as directed by them and listen to my words, keeping it in mind. (16)

After saying these words, she went to the Raja's palace. She did not utter anything but both the spouses learnt about it. (5)

The Raja asked the queen what had she talked about, then he kept quiet after hearing the reply. The husband asked the queen what she had said, the queen kept quiet after listening to him. (6)

The husband thought that the wife had kept something hidden from him, while the queen thought that the Raja had kept something secret from her. Both got enraged within and there was no love lost between them. (7)

The Raja developed greater love for the queen, who had played this trick. Thus, the Raja increased his love for her, completely forgetting Bir kala from his mind. (8)(1)

He had sexual companionship with her and the passionate woman continued holding him in her embrace. She would not leave the Raja even for a moment and would embrace him to her bosom by pulling him all the time. (8)

Couplet

She had many poses of her cohabitation along with kissing him. By embracing him tightly she had relations (sexual) with him, which cannot be described. (9)

Swaiyya :

The Raja had eaten some pills of stopping the flow of semen, then munched some hemp and poppy husk and then taking wine he showed his love of passions with greater zeal. Then he continued with many poses of cohabitation, embracing and kissing and then continued enjoying sensuous pleasure till morning by pressing and distorting her breasts. (10)

Aril :

The Raja had carried out sexual relationship with great joy with her and the woman was also clasping him with embraces and/had cohabitation with her in various styles till morning to his satisfaction. (11)

Chopaiee :

When the night was over and day had dawned then the Raja sent away the lady attendant and she forgot about everything else and wrapped the Raja's robe on herself. (12)

Swaiyya :

The queen said, "Why are you heaving with difficult sighs (breathing with difficulty). The girl friend said, "I had gone running to him for your sake in great-haste." The queen said, "Why your hair are dishevelled and the tresses of your hair are hanging loose ? The girl attendant said, "I had requested him on your behalf by bowing to him." The queen said, "Where is your redness of lips gone ?" The attendant said, "By praising you in many ways my redness is gone." The queen said, "O friend ! Whose is this robe you are wearing ?" The attendant said, "I have brought for you a symbol of confidence from there with love." (14)

Couplet :

The queen with her charming beauty on hearing her words kept quiet and could not gauge the depth of this secret. Thus, the woman (queen) was deceived. (15)(1)

Then many years had elapsed, both the children had grown up now. When Dhola took charge of the reins of his kingdom, then he was reminded of his early marriage. (13)

When his childhood age was over, his form (appearance) changed by and by, and became different. There was change in adolescence and Kamdev (god of love) was ruling each of his limbs and he became very passionate. (14)

Swaiyya

One day he killed a deer in his hunting spree, he thought to himself that his life was being spent being in the chase (control) of women only and he had never thought of spiritual knowledge. "The marriage, which I had solemnised in childhood, I have never bothered about her. He was coming on his way, without thinking about it, but then he went to his in-laws place on route." (15)

With full preparation and glamour and calling some warriors, he made up a marriage party. Beautiful ornaments were glorifying his body, and he was besides himself in joy. His body was glorifying with beauty while the charm of his eyes was beyond description. All the animate and inanimate world (things) gods and demons were allured with his charm. (16)

Then the queen Shamas heard about the arrival of Dhola in their territory. Then she felt elated in her mind and weakened by the separation of her spouse, got herself strengthened in mind (with the arrival of Dhola). (18)

She met her dear beloved and felt great joy. She was pulling him and embracing her beloved and could not get away from the charming prince. (19)

Couplet :

The lover was lean and the beloved also was very slim. With increased love she was pulling him towards the cot and was offering herself in sacrifice to him. (20)

Chopaiee :

He was not having any forced love affair with Shamas. He was thinking in his mind so he was not using any force to pull, lest her (weak) soft waist may not crack. (21)

The attendant after hearing the Raja's words, told him that the Raja had sent him away on exile from his county, and had orde. ed him not to meet him." (36)

Then Dholan felt greatly pained and cried out loudly, "O Narwarkot I salute thee. If I am alive, then we will meet again." (37)

The beautiful queen also accompanied him on hearing these words. Her heart was broken and she was feeling the pangs and tears were rolling down her eyes. (38)

Aril :

Dholan hearing the father's verdict remained in exile for twelve years. He was moving about in the jungles or surroundings, eating fruit only. By hunting the deer, he remained there along with his wife. (39)

In the thirteenth year Bir Sain had died and leaving this world (of death) proceeded to heavens. Then Dholan came back to acquire the reins of his kingdom and then spent many years in happiness along with his wife Shamas. (40)(1)

Here the hundred and sixty-one episode of the dialogue of Minister and the King regarding woman characterization from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well.

Couplet :

There were eight women thieves in the land of Tapisa. They were stealing day and night but no one could catch them doing so (or understand their behaviour). (1)

Chitar Mati and Taskar Koer were their leaders. They were always waiting on the route (to towns) and would loot people on the way. (2)

First, they would utter the words Naryan and Damodar, followed by die word Bindraban and with this phraseology, they would understand each other. (3)

'Narayan' would mean that a man was coming and damodar would mean that he had money tied with his waist and Bindraban would mean to kill him by taking him to the jungle without any hesitation. (4)

Chopaiee :

When the other women would hear these words, they would take him to the jungle, and kill him by using a noose and then steal all his wealth (money). (5)

Then a woman came there. They threw a noose around her neck. That woman then told them something, "O Rajan ! I am saying those words to you now." (6)

Couplet :

The thieves then thought to themselves that "by taking her money we will get only this much, but whatever she had at home, will not be available to us." (9)

So it would be better to get a paper and get a certificate in Writing from her and then get all the money along with her house from the town. (10)

Chopaiee :

This news reached the queen that his enemies had killed him. Then the queen thought in her mind. The poet has said that this has been explained in the Chopaiee. (4)

"My son is very young at this juncture, while the spouse had gone to heavens. So such a deceitful action should be taken so that the enemy could be killed with a trick." (5)

She wrote a letter and sent to the enemy saying that the Raja had been rewarded in his own coin. "So now take my daughter Suraj Kala (in marriage) and look after all of us." (6)

On reading the letter, all the fools felt puffed up and came there with a marriage party. When they reached the town of Bhadar Sain, then the queen said, (like this). (7)

"Please come one by one to me, so that I could worship his (everyone's) (wash) feet. Finally the Raja should come himself and take away Suraj Kala to his place. (8)

"This was the custom in our family, so this formal function could not be avoided. First each warrior should come one by one and then the Raja should follow in the end. (9)

So the young men came one by one, and the woman killed them all by using a noose. The first one would be killed followed by the next and each one was killed thus, with the help of the noose. (10)

(She told her) "You need not worry about Shahjahan as I will give you all the wealth I have got. I will tear off all my clothes and with no clothes on, removing the paste of Chandan (sandal wood) I will rub ash on the body. Whom shall I talk to as no one belongs to me, whom I could relate my pining and hearts desires. If I had wings on, I would havd gone to my beloved before your very eyes." (4)

"What is the use of a friend, if a friend could not come to the rescue of one's friend. She explained to her, her state of mind, and said that the friend considering it her own suffering, should wipe it off with her own tears. I am allured by the beloved of my choice. So let anyone say anything to me. O friend! I will be his slave of slaves, if someone would arrange my meeting with my beloved." (5)

O friend ! If you were to do this job for me, I will give you all ornaments to satiate your desires. All the robes of mine at my place will belong to you and you may take thousands of them. O beautiful lady! On seeing my predicament, he would also lament. So make some arrangement for meeting my beloved or give me poison as without him I shall die. (I will be no more). (6)

When Joban Koer heard these words of Udaipuri begum, then considering all aspects, she thought to herself. She placed her in a big kettle, she moved towards that side, telling the gardeners that food was lying inside. Within no time, she arranged for her dear friend to meet her beloved. (7)

"The wife of this man had known that the Udaipuri begum had called her spouse and had undergone cohabitation with him in many ways, but I cannot tolerate this thing any more." (13)

She thought to herself that a complaint should be lodged with Shahjahan soon and dishonour them both. After saying these words, she went straight to the place where Shahjahan was resting in his pleasure palace. (14)

Udaipuri also came there along with her paramour and by that time the woman had already related her complaint. Then the King said, "Who was making all this noise at my gates ?" (15)

Couplet :

Udaipuri begum then thought in her mind and said, "This woman wanted to perform immolation (Sati) but this (man would not allow her to do this act." (16)

Chopaiee :

The King then said, "Do not stop her, let her he burnt. The begum then sent many attendants with that woman and they forcibly pushed her into (the burning pyre) the fire and burnt her." (17)

Couplet :

By enjoying lot of fun with him, she brought her beloved safely. The King was thus deceived by her witchcraft and the rival wife was also burnt. (18)(1)

There was a temple of the goddess in Hinglaj, which was being worshipped by all the people of the world. (1)

Chopaiee :

Bachittar Singh was the mighty Raja of that place and he had all sorts of worldly wealth; while his wife was known by the name of Bhan Kala and there was no other woman on par with her (in beauty). (2)

He had a Brahmin called Dijbar Singh, who had a wife called Bhisat Kala. That Brahmin had seven beautiful sons, who were adept in every art. (3)

Couplet :

There was a world famous temple of (goddess) Bhawani, where Kings from all over (various lands) would come to pay their obeisance. (4)

Aril :

This was a very beautiful hermitage, with a high banner (flag) fluttering there on top. Its beauty (brilliance) would put even lightning to shame. The Kings from various lands would visit there and would bow to it, considering it as the temple of Shiva (Bhawani). (5)

Couplet :

Whatever one would wish or desire there would get it fulfilled. This fact was famous all over the world and everyone knew about it." (6)

Chopaiee :

One day it so happened, that the sun had set and the moon had shone forth. Then suddenly there was a heavenly voice heard, (revelation of an oracle), which was heard by the Brahmin with his own ears. (7)

"That with the dawn of day, the Raja would die and he could not be saved with a million means. If someone could give the sacrificial offering of his seven sons, then only he could save this Raja." (8)

After hearing this revelation, the Brahmin came home and told his wife everything about it Then the woman took her seven sons and sacrificed them all at the altar of the goddess (Mangla). (9)

When the father saw all his sons were dead, then he took a sword and struck it at his head. When that man was proceeding to heavens (died), that woman saw all this, while standing there. (10)

She also took up a sword in her hand without having any fear of her life. She thought to herself that somehow the Raja could be saved. So she struck the sword on her head. (11)

First she gave the lives of seven sons, then killed her husband and then cut off her own head. When the Raja saw all this, he was nonplussed (shocked). He also took that sword in his hand. (12)

He placed the sword on his head and thought of slaying himself. Then (goddess) Bhawani bestowed her benevolence on him and uttered these words. (14)

Aril :

"O Raja ! You may make all these people alive and do not kill yourself. May you live long and rule over this land for long! Then Durga, seeing the Raja's devotion, made all these (dead) people alive with great pleasure." (15)

Chopaiee :

That woman was so stubborn as to stick to this promise (action) with great courage, having killed her spouse and sons and finally gave up her own life, but saved the life of the Raja. (16)

Couplet :

Having seen the truthfulness (uprightness) of all, the world creator (goddess) with great pleasure, gave back to that woman her spouse and seven sons (making them alive). (17)

When I ran like a she-wolf, then the people ran away. I had put you in my armpit and went to another town. " (17)

"Then the other followers brought some food material and they gave it to their master to eat and made him happy. Then they kept some other material to eat and then left me, thinking me as a Raja's son." (18)

Couplet :

On hearing this, the queen dropped some tears from the eyes, and before the Raja himself, addressing the paramour as her son, she embraced him to her bosom. (19)

Chopaice :

When the son was a child, he had been kidnapped but due to my good luck he was saved to be alive now. He had come to this land for some purpose and I have got him through lot of effort and traced him. (20)

She was embracing him tightly by holding him closely and before the Raja she was kissing him. She made a bed spread for him in her house and then during the night she slept with him. (21)

She would keep him all the time in her house, calling him as her son and was having sensuous pleasure with him all the time (day and night). But the foolish Raja could not see through the secret of this affair. (22)(1)

Here the hundred and sixty-sixth episode of the King's & Minister's dialogue regarding woman characterization from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well.

There was a great warrior in Bans Bareilley called Dhan Rai. He had a wife named Shah pari, who would look after all with great regard. (1)

Chopaiee :

A prostitute came to the Raja, who was looking glorious with beautiful clothes and ornaments. The Raja was enamoured by her and completely forgot about the queen. (2)

Couplet :

The Raja had a brother, who was looking very smart and charming. Shah Pari, having no fear of the Raja, got entangled in the love of that man. (3)

Chopaiee :

The queen would call him daily (at home) and was enjoying sensuous pleasure with him and forgot about the Raja from her mind totally and decided in her mind to get the kingdom for this person. (4)

(She said), "I would give you this kingdom, and you make me your wife. Whatever I shall tell you, you do accordingly without having any fear of this Raja." (5)

The Raja along with his men had that food and died in no time and those who escaped death were also killed. Not a single person was left alive among them. (9)

After killing them all, he usurped the kingdom and made her his queen. Whosoever tried to resist was killed instantly. Whosoever bowed to him was allowed to join his baud (of men). (10)

This is how the woman played a trick and arranged to kill her spouse and all other warriors were also killed and the kingdom was given to her paramour. (11)

Couplet :

With this deceitful action the woman killed her husband and gave the reins of kingdom to her lover, such a trick was played by her. (12)(1)

There was a Raja in the Western lands (area) by the name of Ram Mandan Singh, who was being worshipped by the Rajas of various lands all the time (twenty-four hours). (1)

The Raja had a noble and virtuous wife, by the name of Jot Mati. There was no other princess like her in the three worlds. (2)

Chopaiee :

Once a prostitute came to the Raja. She was extremely beautiful, as if the Lord Creator had moulded her with his own hands. He was lured into her love and forgot about his queen from the mind. (3)

Couplet :

The queen felt it too much, and got annoyed, when she heard about the Raja being enamoured by her. (4)

Chopaiee :

The news had spread all over the lands that the Raja was in love with the prostitute. Then women came from all over the various lands to make the Raja's land more glorified. (5)

Couplet :

The queen got furious with rage and started observing silence (no words being uttered). She thought to herself that the Raja was having love affair with prostitutes. "So who would look after our interests ?" (6)

Chopaiee :

(She thought to herself) "that some plan should be made to kill all these prostitutes. Outwardly I will show my love for these prostitutes in the presence of the Raja, but with some magic spell (deception) I should finish the curse of prostitutes some how." (7)

She showed great love for the prostitutes and gave lot of money to them. She was openly saying (with the tongue) that whomsoever our King would be showing respect and regard, would be dearer to us also more than our life even. " (8)

Hearing these words, the Raja got puffed up and did not realize the secret behind it, and thought to himself that whomsoever he was in love with, was being looked after by the queen nicely. (9)

Couplet :

The Raja called all the queens along with the prostitutes in his presence and enjoyed through the songs sung by them. (10)

Chopaiee :

This practice was followed by the Raja daily, having no hesitation from the queens even. The Raja was squandering his wealth on these prostitutes. Jot Mati was feeling very bad about it and was penitent. (11)

Then the queen told the Raja, "O Raja ! Listen to me. Let us take one boat for ourselves and enjoy therein, with the prostitutes in the other boat. (12)

"In one boat let us be seated both of us and enjoy the fun, while the prostitutes will sing songs for us. Out of them, whosoever you prefer as most beautiful, "O Rajan! You may have cohabitation with her." (13)

On hearing this, the Raja felt overjoyed and took all the queens along with prostitutes to the place, where river Amu was flowing, it appeared as if this was created by the Lord as the eighth ocean. (14)

The perfect boat was taken by the queen, while the defective one was given to the prostitutes. She made the Raja to be seated along with her, but the fool did not see through the (secret) game. (15)

Then the queen gave lot of money to the boatmen and got them under her control and told them, "Wherever the flyer Amu was flowing in spate (with high waves) the prostitutes should be drowned there." (16)

When the boat reached the middle of the river, the boatmen broke it. Then all the prostitutes were drowning and the attendants were trying to run hither and thither. (17)

All the prostitutes were sinking and there was no place nearby to take shelter. 'The queen was lamenting raising sighs of sorrow and said that with these prostitutes the Raja would also die. (18)

She sounded to the Raja to save them somehow, while telling the attendants to let them drown. At places the small drums were sinking while at places the prostitutes were immersing downwards. (19)

Flutes, muraj and tambooras were being washed away and many procurers (living on earnings of pros) were drowning, which cannot be detailed and somewhere their womenfolk (of procurers) were shouting while the prostitutes had lost all consciousness. (20)

Somewhere these procurers were drowning and elsewhere their wives were having water filled in their stomachs. Not even a single prostitute. was left alive. There was such a death toll as Bhim had perpetrated on Krichaks. (21)

If by chance any pros was saved, she was made to drown by pulling her legs downwards. Raja was standing there in great sorrow. He said, "Someone should reach out to them and save them." (22)

Whosoever went into the stream for saving them, got drowned himself. The wives of these procurers also were flowing with the river and died by drowning therein. (23)

All the prostitutes were shouting aloud for help and got tired of crying and no man tried to pull them out. Even the procurers along with their women were drowned. Finally one hundred sixty prostitutes were washed away (died). (24)

Couplet :

With the immersion in water, their clothes were heavy (ten maunds each) with their trousers weighing six maunds (filled with water) each, So all the prostitues were drowned and no one could save them. (25)

Chopaiee :

Then the queen went up to the Raja to console him by all means. "O dear spouse ! You need have no sorrow and manage with these queens only." (26)

"I will get you some more prostitutes, with whom you could enjoy sensuous pleasure. Since the Lord had saved you, then beautiful women in great numbers will come to you." (27)

Couplet :

The foolish Raja kept quiet, but could not see through the game (trick). The queen had arranged to kill 160 prostitutes during the light of the day, finishing them wholesale. (28)(1)

(168-3336)(Contd)

Chopaiee :

There was a milkmaid in Brij desh, who was called Shah Pari by all. Her body was very beautiful and even the moon felt shy of her beauty (felt belittled). (1)

There was a milkman by the name Rangi Ram living there and he got involved in love with that woman. When she would see her husband was asleep, she would enjoy sensuous pleasure with him. (2)

One day her husband was asleep and after lot of love affair they had got rid of their worries. Rangi Ram also happened to come there, but not getting a chance , went back home. (3)

The woman was awake and she also saw him. So with a sign of the eyes (she stopped him). She arranged to get a basket of reeds and placed it near her cot. (4)

She embraced the body of the lover and placed her pelvis on the basket and had cohabitation with him to her satisfaction. The foolish husband did not get at the secret. (5)

Thus the paramour would come daily and would have cohabitation with the queen daily. Then a lady attendant happened .o come there and seeing her the paramour got enamoured by her. (4)

When the paramour came after having love affair, then seeing the beauty of the lady attendant he got allured by her. Then forgetting the queen from his heart, he started having relationship with the attendant. (5)

The queen without having sexual companionship, became mad (in his separation) and came to watch his coming (path). "She was wondering in her mind why the lover had not come. Where had be gone ? Probably he may be involved with any rival of mine." (6)

"Either he had forgotten about it or someone else had made him forget me or he was searching for me, having lost his way. May be someone had frightened him (with serious consequences) or had he got some more beautiful woman ?" (7)

"Had he been on his way or had he gone back (after visiting someone) will he come or was he annoyed with me ? "I hope the pleasant looking paramour would surely come (she was thinking like this). She was watching her entrance for sometime." (8)

Thus thinking in mind, she went a little further and saw him having fun and love affair with the attendant. She became furious with rage and informed the Raja about it. (9)

Couplet :

She said, "O Raja ! Where were you waiting when your house was being burgled. Having a sword in hand, you come with open eyes to watch this." (10)

Thus the woman deceived the Raja with her deceitful move and sent the paramour along with the attendant to the valley of death. (12)(1)

Here the hundred and seventieth episode of the King's and Minister's episode regarding woman characterization from Charitar Pakhan is completed. All is well. (170-3355)(Contd)

Couplet :

There lived a Rangar in the locality of Rangars, who was called Kanchan Singh. His wife, sahib Devi was much pestered by her sexual desire. (1)

Chopaiee:

One day, the spouse of this ill-famed woman, said thoughtfully, "I am leaving this land and going somewhere else so as to earn lot of money for you." (2)

Saying this, he went away but (actually) he hid himself at the comer of his house. Then Sahib Dei called her paramour and had a sexual affair with him. (3)

When the woman saw the husband standing in one comer of the house, then the woman played this trick. She was having sexual affair with the paramour by embracing him tightly but was crying aloud to make it heard by the husband. (4)

"I have called a Vaid (physician) at home for your treatment. So you better get treated by him soon." (4)

Chopaiee ;

Aidai Rai then did accordingly and called Biram Dev at home, "O Vaid! What should be the treatment of this malady ? So that this disease could be cured." (5)

The Vaid then replied, "You are suffering from a great malady. There was no remedy for this through witchcraft. But there was a magic spell, which might help." (6)

"First you take lot of wine and give it to your wife also. You keep yourself tied down under the cot and continue reciting a Kabit. (serman). (7)

When Behlol saw the woman, called Sangeet Kala, then he forgot all about other Pathan women (and was all praise for her). (3)

There was another woman, named Banij Kala, and he called her and giving her lot of money he sent her to that woman (Sangeet Kala). (4)

Chopaiee :

Banij Kala then came to the place, where Sangeet Kala was sitting in glorious form. When she praised the Khan before her, she also got interested in him on hearing all this. (5)

With her talk she had got the woman interested (in Khan). Then she described the same thing in a befitting manner to her beloved spouse, that she had built a beautiful garden. (Then the wife told the husband) "Please take me to that place." (6)

"So far I had not gone anywhere (outside). I had not put my foot on any outside area. Even the sun and moon had not seen my face so far and without the beloved, I had not liked anything else." (7)

Then the husband told her to go there and after seeing the garden, she should come back. When the night was over, and the day dawned then the woman went to the Khan's house. (8)

Niranjan Rai went to the garden, but did not find his wife there. After lot of searching, he found the wife where the Khan had built a palatial haveli (building). (9)

The woman came out of the haveli after having cohabitation with the Khan to her satisfaction. She met her husband coming from the opposite side. The woman, due to hesitation had her eyes downcast. (10)

Chopaiee :

When Niranjan looked at his wife, then Sangeet Kala said some disparaging remarks about Banij Kala. "She did not accompany me after all that talk and I lost my way and went to somebody else's house." (11)

"I was caught hold by the Pathans and they had sexual relationships with me. Now whatever you decide and if you have the courage to beat them or make a complaint to the Kazi." (12)

The spouse said, "There is no mistake on your part as you had lost your way and had gone to someone else's house. Then the Pathans caught hold of you and had assaulted you sexually." (13)

"It is good that you have come back home. Thank God that they never converted you to become a Turkan (muslim) forcibly. If someone comes to the house of malechhas (muslims) then he cannot go back safely without losing his religion." (14)

Then Sangeet Kala said, " O dear husband ! You do not worry too much (do not scratch your brain) and listen to my whole story. I am going to relate the whole episode to you and thus dispel your doubts." (15)

When I went to their house by mistake, the Turks caught hold of me. Then I told them, "You do not know (the strength) of my husband !" (16)

"Then I played this trick with them. I scratched my private parts with my nails, so that blood came out. Then I embraced the Khan with a laughter and then I addressed him like this." (18)

"I am having my menses, so I am going home. O Behlol ! I cannot have cohabitation with you. So send someone with me to take me to my house. But you may call me again on the third day." (19)

"On hearing these words, the Khan let me off. So I had no sexual relationship with him. After that I came back and met you here. Now you may rescue me as it suits you. (20)

Couplet :

Thus that fool got puffed up and laughed. He could not follow the secret that she had come back after having sexual affair. (21)(1)

There was a great Raja, called Mokal in Mokal garh and his parents (mother and father) were very famous in the West. He had a daughter named Surta Dei, and there was no other woman comparable to her in beauty. (1)

She organized a Swambar (for her marriage) and all the Rajas were invited there. The Raja, who would come there riding a wooden horse, would get the hand of this princess in marriage (was the condition laid down). (2)

Aril :

The person, who would be armed with a spear with hundred joints, in hand, and riding a wooden horse, would follow that path (rout); who could draw a longer line without touching with hand, that particular Raja could wed her. (3)

This news reached the place, where Pero Shah was residing. Hearing the whole strange news, the whole assembly was silent (dumb founded). Then the King's wife said these words, which dispelled all the doubts of the King. (4)

So he obtained the roots of spear Grass and made a spear out of it. He got a canal dug up upto that place and asked the boatman to make a wooden boat in the shape of a horse. On the banks, with a wooden stick, two lines, one long and one short, line were drawn. So after winning the hand of the princess, this woman was given to the King (by her). (5)(1)

Lot of bullets were fired and many warriors were killed (with heads crushed). The warriors had fallen down in the battlefield and there was no life left in them. (7)

Bhujang Chhand :

Somewhere horses had fallen down and at some places, the Rajas were lying killed. At some places, the crowns and horses fittings were lying scattered. Somewhere the warriors had been pierced through and left there and somewhere smart young men had been crushed and at places canopies of Kings were lying broken. (8)

Many warriors had been killed with the shooting of bullets in the battlefield and many had run away (from the battlefield), which cannot be counted. Many had come there being enraged due to their prestige and there were shouts of 'kill them, kill the enemy,' all around. (9)

From all the four sides, the fort had been surrounded fully and stubborn Khans had launched an attack with greater zeal and ruthlessness with their troops. On one, side the warriors were looking glamorous while on the other side they were striking with greater fury and were not retracing their steps at all. (10)

Couplet :

Leaving the battlefield, not a single warrior was retracting even one step and all were fighting with full vigour. The warriors had surrounded the fort from all the ten sides. (11)

The prince agreed for the marriage with that woman and sent a similar letter with the arrow. The arrow fell inside the strong fort. On seeing the contents of the letter the woman hugged it with her bosom. (18)

Couplet :

The letter of the friend along with the arrow reached there. While seeing the words of the letter, the eyes of the woman became very wet (purified). (19)

When the prince had agreed for the marriage with Chapal Kala with gaiety, then writing those words in the letter she shot an arrow (with the letter) similarly. (20)

Chopaiee :

She wrote in the letter, that "O Prince ! Listen to me. First close the entry of water to the fort. Then you could take control of the fort." (21)

Aril :

"From all the ten directions the fort should be surrounded and any one who comes out, should be killed and anyone who comes closer, should be caught in (chains) captivity and then you could take control of the fort in a moment. (22)

When they (robber and companions) left after looting her, then the woman cried aloud and said, "O Brothers ! Listen and do this act. Do not stay here and go far away." (5)

Chopaiee :

"If my husband came to know about it, he would not leave anyone of you alive; he would snatch away even your horse you are riding, j It seems to me that your life span is almost finished." (6)

They did not bother about it and thought it to be the outbursts of a foolish woman. What could her husband do to us ? Would he kill a thousand horse riders all alone ? (7)

When the robbers had gone after looting the money, the woman dressed herself as a man, and tied a sword with her waist, along with a sturdy bow also. (8)

She rode on a red horse and with the speed of wind moved ahead. She went and challenged the thousand riders, saying, "either you give back the money or take up your arms to fight." (9)

On hearing these words, they felt greatly enraged and abused him badly.O fool! Should we be afraid of you, and should we, one thousand strong, run away from you. (10)

Taking her bow in hand, the woman got furious and by racing the horse,she launched an attack.She shot an arrow getting enraged which pierced through twenty men.(11)

Then she stretched her bow and shot another arrow and killed twenty horses and in one go they were all dead. It seemed as if pillars hadfallen. (12)

Then she shot the arrow third time, without any fear and killed thirty men in one go. It seemed as if the wind had thrown down some leaves. (13)

Whenever the woman was shooting an arrow, about twenty or thirty men were killed and thrown on the ground. The clever woman was racing her clever horse in such a manner, that she did not get wounded at all. (14)

It seemed as if Gangeri was moving in water with a high speed, or lightning was flashing among the clouds. Twenty warriors were falling with the striking of one arrow only. There were no coats of mail nor their grandeur. (15)

Aril

Then the woman, getting enraged, shot another arrow, which pierced through twenty horses. The warriors, throbbing in agony had fallen unconscious on the ground. It seemed, as if they had never been born on the Earth or their mothers had never given birth to them. (16)

When the woman had killed one thousand warriors, then Chander Bhan became furious with rage. He raced his horse with speed, by whipping him. But the woman did not kill him, rather she killed his horse with the arrow. (17)

Main Lata brought a huge ship and placed food materials in it for manydays(to last). Leaving the house of her Master,she moved towards that side,taking along with herself about fifty girl friends. (2)

Aril

When she went into the ocean, then she did like this. She got a sixty feet long pole, and tied a big flag with it and set fire to the cloth tied therein. (3)

On seeing this fire, the set creatures got surprised, as if a second moon had shone forth in the sea. As the ship was moved ahead by the oarsman, all the fish etc. were moving along with it. (4)

When the ship had moved away about 40 kilometers, then the fish etc. felt greatly relieved at heart. They were thinking that they would munch this fruit after catching it soon and then go back home. (5)

With the movement of fish and tortoise or other creatures along with the ship, many jewels had come up with its force (on the sides). Then Main Lata got the fire extinguished and the fish etc. felt greatly pained being shocked. (6)

With their sudden stopping due to shock, the water flowed further. They all were all alive, but in great pain. The woman then picked up all the jewels and manis(rubies) Thus (showing) with her game trick to the water creatures, the woman had obtained jewels. (7)

Couplet

She then built a township and on the gates of the fort, the eyes of the fish were engraved (made). Since then the place was known as 'Machhli Bander' (fish port). (8)

Thus she extracted many jewels from the Earth with great research. All the penniless people became Rajas and there was no poor man left there. (9)(1)

My sons are too young and are staying with my parents. There was nobody in the house and I am sick of my loneliness in the house. O (beloved) Vaid! Arrange for some treatment for me. My mother- in-law is blind and there was none else in the house." (2)

"My clothes are always dirty since then and my hair have become like matted hair. I am living in this house in separation (from the beloved) and have forgotten about my beautification. The sun had set in the west and in the east the troublesome moon had risen. "O Vaid! (O physician)! Come and make some arrangement for my treatment. My beloved has gone to foreign lands." (3)

The morning appears to me like a spear, the robes are like a sword, and I have become pale with the touch of my sustainers. Love is like a noose, the words (drama's language) are like a vicious magic-spell and the betel nut was like an evil-spirit in the form a neighbour. The lady neighbours were like a hunter, the rich foods were like an Imp and all the dear ones were like a suffering (painful). Since the day the beloved had gone, even the blowing wind seemed like a sin (painful). (4)

"My beloved had gone to foreign lands, and with great hesitation, I am always trying with some witchcraft to attain him. I do not get even sleep while lying on my cot and waiting for my spouse, I am feeling penitent. Every morning I take a bath and for cooking rich foods, I go to the kitchen, but feel tired. The separation of the spouse's love penetrates my body and without burning fire, the food gets cooked in the fire of separation. (5)

Bhan Kala had spent many years like this. One day she thought about the words of Nisis Prabha in her mind. She saw the Raja sleeping with her and she killed both of them and came back to her home. (2)

Chopaiee

With great fury, she struck her sword, and cut both of them into four pieces and thought to herself. I had told the fool a secret, but he thought me a liar instead. " (3)

So she killed the rival-wife along with the Raja, and wiping the sword came back home. Having felt relieved in mind, she came and went to sleep and in the morning started shouting and crying aloud. (4)

In the morning she said weeping, " What are you people waiting for here, while the Raja had been killed. The Lord had taken away all our comforts. On hearing this all the attendants and courtiers started weeping. (5)

They saw the Raja dead along with the queen. Then the queen said, "Please bum me also along with the Raja (on the pyre) and make my son as the king with canopy over his head. (6)

Then all the ministers came there and said crying and wailing, "The son could be made a king, but it was not proper for you to immolate yourself." (7)

When the woman talked like this the Khan let her go and started thinking of day after to-morrow in his mind. Then Ritu Raj Prabha came back and set up her bed near the Khan's daughter. (14)

When all the people had gone to sleep, she came back to her home, while the Khan spent about an hour in remembering (waiting) for her.He was kept awake throughout the night,and then searching for her.He came to the daughter. (15)

He thought the daughter to be Ratis Prabha and had cohabitation with her by catching her legs strongly. That Pathan woman was wailing and crying but the fool due to consumption of wine could not realize the truth. (16)

Couplet

Taking her (daughter) for Rutis Prabha, he carried out the sexual assault with embraces closely and with the drunkenness being over, he left her knowing that she was his daughter. (17)

"Princess Ritu Raj! Salutations to your Kashatriya religion, that you managed to save your chastity (faithfulness) by making me sleep with my daughter instead!" (18)

Firstly drunkard, secondly youthful and thirdly very wealthy, how could such a person escape from sinful action? He could escape only if Lord wished (Wills) it. (19)(1)

Couplet :

There was a trader's wife living in Akbarabad. Seeing this Sri Ran Rang Kumari, the gods and demons both would get pleased. (1)

Chopaiee :

One day Akbar went on a hunting spree, and seeing her beauty, he got enamoured by her. One lady attendant was sent to her to call her for a meeting with him. (2)

Then the attendant went to her house and told her everything clearly. Instead of going to the King's house herself, she called the king at her place. (3)

When the king went to her house and sat on her bed, then the woman (Rani) said to him, "O dear King. Listen to me." (4)

If you permit me, then I would go for urination and then make your bed (company) more alluring. Having said this, she went away, locking the door from outside. (5)

She told her husband everything, and brought him along with her. The trader became enraged and took out his shoe in hands. (6)

He started beating the King's head with his shoes, but the king was feeling ashamed and could not say (speak) anything. Having beaten him with shoes, he threw him in the storeroom and locked the room from outside. (7)

Couplet:

In the morning itself he lodged a complaint with the Kotwal (Inspector). She came along with the Kazi and the Inspector to the place. She said, "Whether he was a thief, a paramour, a sadhu (mendicant) or a king was not known to her. O great Kazi! You come and examine for yourself." (8)

Chopaiee:

After saying this both the husband and wife ran away and were watching Akbar. The king being ashamed of himself, could not utter a word. With his head bent down he would not open his eyes even. (9)

Chopaiee

If anyone goes to someone else's house for such a wicked purpose, then why should he not be treated with such a reward? If someone was allured by another's wife, then he deserved to be beaten with shoes here and would be thrown into hell (in the next world). (10)

When the king underwent such a situation, then he never went again to someone's house. As he had sowed, so had he reaped the reward for his action and completely forgot about such evil deeds from his thoughts. (11)

When this sort of happening haffled the king , then he did not go to anyone's house. Whatever action he had undertaken,he had to face its consequences and completely forgot about the (in his mind) malicious act of his own. (12)(1)

There was a Jat's daughter, named Kanchan Prabha. The world knew her as most beautiful. She married a person at first, but she did not like him, so she killed him with a noose. (1)

After sometime she married a second time but did not like the spouse, so she killed him also by striking him with her dagger. After a month, she got another husband and the woman killed him also by poisoning him. (2)

That heroine then married a fourth husband. She killed him and got the fifth husband* After killing the sixth one, she married seventh time and killed him also. She then started her love affair with an eighth one. (3)

But look at the effect of time and she did not approve of him and stabbed him to death with her dagger. The world knew all this and cursed her and the whole lot of them raised a hue and cry. (4)

When the woman came to hear about it, she felt greatly aggrieved and ashamed (she died without facing death). She thought to herself that she would now immolate herself with the husband only and show the world my witchcraft. (5)

While going along, night had fallen. The sun had set and the moonlight had surfaced. By pulling him with her hand, she m de him ride on the cart and had cohabitation with him. (4)

As the bullock cart was moving with thuds, they had their love affair without any jumping up making creaking noises, but no one could think of the secret behind it. (5)

She made the cart move faster with a shout and had her sexual affair, with great enjoyment and love. He also had his love affair to his satisfaction and no one in the bazar could know about it. (6)

Couplet

While having cohabitation with him she reached the place of the assembly of Shahjahan. (7)

Chopaiee

She took the sugar candy jewel in hand and offered it to the king. Shahjahan could not make out the (origin of) jewel and gave her thirty thousand rupees. (8)

With this game play, the woman had deceived the king and came out of the assembly. She kept fifteen thousand rupees with her and offered fifteen thousand rupees to her paramour. (9)

Couplet

Having deceived Shahjahan and having enjoyed sensuous pleasure with her paramour she came back home. No one could decipher (know) this secret. (10)(1)

One day some women went to a garden and were talking merrily with laughter. There was a woman, named Nis Raj Prabha among them. She said there like this. (1)

O women! If I were to make the king fetch water for me and get my hair shaved off by him, then you will all lose the bet. You better watch this magic spell of mine with your own eyes.v (2)

After saying this, she dressed up beautifully and allured both the gods and demons with her charm. When Raja Charitar Singh came there, then the women heard about this (his coming there). (3)

She sat in a loft and made her face shown to the Raja in a glance, and the Raja got enamoured with her charm. The Raja thought to himself, "If I were to (get) obtain this woman, then I shall sacrifice my thousand lives on her. (I shall be rewarded fully). (4)

He sent his lady attendant and called her and with great affection he offered her his passionate love. The woman became unconscious and was asking for water (every moment). (5)

Then the Raja got up himself and went to fetch water and gave her water.She came to senses after having water and the Raja kissed her . (6)

The Raja would come to her house all the time (day and night) and was enjoying sensuous pleasure with her during day and night. Then suddenly the lady attendant got allured by an attendant (male) and forgot about her love for the husband (Raja). (3)

Thus Gan Kala got enamoured by the male attendant called 'Til Chugna'. She totally forgot about her love for the Raja from the heart. If some person develops love for an attendant (lady), then all the people curse her. (4)

The (male) attendant told the lady attendant, "You come with me showing love for me, we do not want anything else, and will live by having sensuous pleasure alone. O Gan Kala! You accept my proposal." (5)

Being under the spell of love, the lady attendant got up to accompany him and never even looked at the Raja due to her feeling ashamed. The person, who develops love with a lady attendant, finally repents and dies the death of a dog." (6)

During the next twelve hours (four pehars) they walked about four kilometers and the pride of sexual pleasure had been crushed. After moving through all the four sides again and again, they returned to their town again. Then Gan Kala and Til Chugan could not find their way. (7)

Being too tired, they finally fell down as if they had died of their own, without being wounded. When both of them felt hungry, then the male attendant told her like this. (8)

O Gan Kala! You keep away your Vagina and give me something to eat in my hand. When he could not get anything to eat, he felt greatly annoyed in mind. (9)

The male attendant had thrown the lady attendant in the river and her stomach was filled with water, so the woman had died. But the Raja could not realize all this.(16)

The lion had swallowed (destroyed) the male attendant, while having fruit in the jungle."So O thoughtless people! Never try to befriend the slaves (servants)." (17)(1)

There was a great woman by the name of Tirdas Kala, who was friendly with the thieves. 'Wherever she saw someone's wealth, she would come there by rubbing hing (asafoetida) (1)

Wherever the thieves would get the smell of hing, they would come there and break into the house for stealing. There was a big merchant living there and Tirdas Kala was having a love affair with him. (2)

So she rubbed hing on the body, she directed the thieves to the merchant's house (for breaking into his house) and while having sexual companionship, she thought of the merchant (about his theft). So she informed him quickly that 'O friend! Your house was being burgled." (3)

The merchant then started shouting for thieves and thus mentioned about saving half of his wealth. Both of them (Shah and thieves) thought about the woman as their well-wisher (friend) and none of the fools understood the real facts (truth). (4)

So the thieves gave half of the (looted) money to her (as her share) and half money she took from the merchant. Both had taken her as their well-wisher. None of the fools realized (followed) the secret. (5)

First, she sent the thieves to the merchant's house and then awakened the guards. With this magic spell, she had deceived both of them. The thieves thought that the woman was on their side, while the merchant thought her to be his well-wisher. (6)

When the queen reached Delhi, the King got this news, then he told the warriors to hand over the queens to him and take charge of Jaswant Singh's role. (10)

The warriors did not hand over the queens, then the King sent his forces to attack them. Ranchhor said, "You all dress up like men." (11)

When Pulad Khan launched an attack on them,the queens said like this. "You hand us over to the hilly forces, so that we could preserve our Hindu religion. (12)

They made way for their own land along with children, under the pretext of having a bath. Then the Rajput women waved their handkerchiefs showing their willingness to meet the King. (13)

Then no one attacked them, feeling that this queen was coming to meet the king. When they came away from the area of their guns5"striking distance they unsheathed their swords and attacked (the enemy). (14)

Whichever warrior was stmck with their swords, then their protective cover (coats of mail) or iron cuffs were not safe, as for each rider one arrow was enough and for each grand elephant one strike of the sword with wound was considered enough to silence them. (15)

Somewhere beautiful swords were flashing, while elsewhere the arrows were being shot, and somewhere the coats of mail of the warriors were lying broken. Somewhere horses were lying dead and somewhere huge elephants were lying dead. Countless warriors were lying cut into pieces* which could not be accounted for (counted).(18)

Aril:

All the Rajas, after consuming (some) four mashas (few grams) of opium, became enraged and with the consuming of poppy husk, hemp and wine, the warriors fought fiercely. Ranchhor, showing his valour under the loft of the King, went away to heavens (was killed) with peace. (19)

On seeing Ranchhor (being dead) Raghunath also got enraged and racing his horse, reached the battle front. Whosoever was struck with his sword could not remain alive (could not rest on the horse any more). He wouldTall on the ground being unconscious. (20)

Aurangzeb, seeing all this, was all praise for (their valour) them. He ordered his army to surround them. If there were few more warriors like this, they would win even the beautiful fort of Lanka. (21)

Chopaiee

There was known a town of Chanderpuri. The queen, Apritam Kala from there was very virtuous. Since when she had seen Aujan Rai, she was pierced with the arrow of passionate love (with the arrow of Shiva's enemy, Kamdev). (1)

She called him at her home and enjoyed sexual pleasure with him fully. Then the paramour said, "I am afraid, your spouse may not kill me by seeing me here." (2)

Triyo then said,

The woman said,"You need not worry about it at all (in your mind) and have sensuous pleasure with me nicely. I will show you my magic spell, which would dispel all your suffering." (3)

Chopaiee :

"You listen to my words carefully, and dress up fully like a Yogi and teach some secret (sermon) magic spell to the Raja, so that you may be called his Guru." (5)

The paramour then did accordingly and gave a secret sermon to the Raja and he was called Raja's Guru. The Raja could not follow the secret behind it. (6)

When the Raja came to the harem, the queen told him like this, "O dear Raja! "If the Guru wanted to distract you, you should not be led astray. If the Guru indulges in any good or bad (untoward) practice, then you should pardon him." (7)

"If the Guru were to steal our wealth, or indulges in some fun and frolic (love affair) with your wife, or strikes the sword in anger. Then if the follower gets distracted, then he is lost totally." (8)

The Guru had given a sermon to the follower so that he had owned him by payment (he controls him fully). If the Guru were to indulge in cohabitation with some homely woman (mother or sister), then one should not get enraged but keep one's eyes downcast. (9)

The (god of death) Yama went to the house of a Rishi, and had cohabitation with his mother, sister and wife (of the Rishi) with great joy. (11)

Chopaiee :

When the Rishi came home and saw another man having cohabitation with his wife, he did not say anything to him as per religious norms (in the service of a guest), and wanted to bow to his feet instead. (12)

He kept his (Yama's) feet at his heads and the Yama praised him. "O Rishi! I am the god of death, who coulcf kill the whole world. I had come to sustain your religious duties." (13)

"Whatever I had heard about you, I have found you exactly like that. I have understood your religious principles and you have no malafide intentions at heart. I have accepted this thing as perfect truth." (14)

Couplet :

on seeing the Brahmin's (Rishi's) truthfulness and feeling elated at heart, the (god of death) Kaal bestowed on him the favour of 'salvation in life' itself. (15)

The queen, having explained everything to the Raja, called her paramour at home and before the watchful eyes of everyone, by setting up a cot, had cohabitation with her paramour, with great satisfaction. (16)

Chopaiee :

By that time the Raja also came there and saw his wife having a sexual affair with her paramour. On remembering the episode (of Mahabharta) he kept quiet and did not say anything full of anger, to him. (17)

He wanted to touch his feet, while the paramour continued having cohabitation with Raja's Wife. Then the paramour forced him to go out and the fool went away after bowing his head. (18)

The fool thought that the Guru had misguided him, but did not see through the secret of the move. With this witchcraft the woman (wife) had deceived the Raja and after having sexual (enjoyment) affair, made him (Raja) bow to the paramour. (19)

Couplet :

In the very presence of the husband.she had a sexual relationship with her paramour and then made the Raja bow to him. With this witchcraft enactment, the queen gave lot of money to the beloved. (20)(1)

First they got her painting made, and even the daughter of a god or demon could not be compared with her. On her leg they made a small mole and the ministers did this wonderful job. (6)

At that time the Raja saw this wonderful painting, when he was seated in the royal assembly and was busy in some work. When he saw the mole then his curiosity (doubt) increased. (7)

The Raja got those ministers killed on the basis of doubt because they must have done something wrong to the queen (some evil doing), else how could they have foreseen this mole. Without having enjoyed sensuous pleasure with her, how could they notice this mole? (8)

When the Raja got the ministers killed, their sons complained to the King that in Chitor there was an extremely beautiful woman and no one had either seen or heard about such a charming beauty. (9)

Aril :

When the king got a small hint about this Padmini (beauty), he organized a huge army and launched an attack on that (Raja) land. He fought a fierce battle, having surrounded the fort. Allaudin was then furious with rage. (10)

Chopaiee :

The king kept the siege for a long time (having planted mango trees there and then eaten its fruits) but could not gain the control of the fort. Then the king played a fraud and sent a letter. (11)

In the letter he wrote, "O Raja! Listen. I am tired of this siege of the fort for so long and now I would vacate this siege. I shall come with one horse rider and after visiting (seeing) the fort, I will go back home." (12)

The Rana then agreed to this request and could not see through the motive of this move. He went with a rider and kept him along with himself. (13)

On visiting each gate of the fort, he was offered a robe of honour. When he got down at the seventh gate, he caught hold of the Raja. (14)

Thus the king played a fraud with the Raja, while the Raja did not follow the secret behind it. When he had visited all the gates of the fort, he took the Raja along with him as a prisoner. (15)

Couplet :

When the Rana was caught by deceit, then he told him, "I shall kill you or else give away your Padmini to me." (16)

Chopaiee :

Then Padmini played a witchcraft (trick) and sent for two warriors called Gora and Badal. She told them, "You do as I am telling you and give this reply to the king.'(17)

She said, "Get ready eight thousand planquins and place eight warriors in each of them. Keep them waiting near the fort and then go and tell the king. (18)

You take my dress and keep it in the first planquin and black bees would be hovering around it. People will not follow the secret behind it. (19)

Then Gora and Badal arranged like that as directed by Padmini. Near the fort, the planquins were kept down and the (false) planquin of Padmini was kept in front. (20)

Couplet :

The black bees were hovering around the robes of Padmini in large numbers. All the people thought it to be Padmini's planquin and could not think about her robes even. (21)

Chopaiee :

In that planquin a blacksmith was seated, who was wearing the robes (clothes) of Padmini. He was given a hammer and chisel in his hand. (22)

The king of Delhi (Allaudin) was then told that Padmini had come to his palace. She had said, "that first I would like to meet the Rana and then I would come and give you company, making your bed enjoyable." (23)

After saying this the blacksmith went to meet Raja Ratan Sain and cut off his shackles and made him sit in the first planquin from where he was shifted to the second planquin. (24)

The Rana, shifting from one to the next planquin gave a slip from there. With this deceitful action, he reached his fort and the drums of victory and joy were sounded in the fort. (25)

When the drums of felicitations were sounded in the fort, the warriors unsheathed their swords, and killed everyone with one stroke only, whosoever came. (26)

With thuds great warriors were falling on the ground, as if trees were being cut with saws and thrown down. They were fighting with great fury and were dying fighting and they were not seen riding the horses again (being killed). (27)

Couplet :

The king Allaudin was made to flee and with this deceitful action, Rana Ratan Sain had reached the fort safely. (28)

Gora and Badal were given lot of money in reward (by opening the treasury) since that day the Rana had developed a greater love for Padmini. (29)(1)

The Raja had great love for Bisunath, while Udginder was only waiting for him to talk to her slightly. But the Raja was spending his days and nights with Bisunath and would not visit Udginder at all. (3)

Chopaiee :

The Raja was attacked by the enemy once and Durgat singh also confronted him with a huge army and a fierce battle ensued and war drums were sounded. All the gods and demons were watching the battle. (4)

The fighting warriors were roaring like lions and from both sides songs of death (Maru) were being played and various drums including gemukh, conch shells, large drums, mirdang and muchang were sounded. (5)

Many musical instruments like clarionets, naad, nafiri, mandal, tur, utang, flute, Jhanjh and bher etc were being played and with the hearing of their music the warriors were challenging one another loudly. (6)

The evil spirits and demons were very thrilled. The vultures and jackals were making loud noises with great pride. The ghosts and evil spirits were singing and dancing around. Somewhere Rudra was also beating his small drum. (7)

The evil spirits were sipping blood and belching, while the crows were eating the flesh and meat and crowing around. The jackals and vultures were also picking meat and (lying)moving around and at places the betals were also heard singing. (8)

At places the swords edges were flashing, while the dreadful heads and trunks were seen making faint (breathing) noises, while mighty warriors were falling on the ground with thuds. Many horse riders were being killed by bending slightly. (9)

Holding his sword in hand and racing his horse, he reached the place, where the wife was burning and the husband also entered the pyre. The Raja, holding the wife by hand, pulled her out and then stepped on his throne. (26)

Couplet

Seeing the Raja, all the warriors started praising and saluting him. Such warriors proceed to heavens on their death and while alive, they stick to their words, fulfilling their promise. (27)

Chopaiee

When the other queens heard that the Raja had himself saved the burning queen (Udginder Prabha)? Look at the wonders of the Lord, the wife who was going to die, had been saved alive, while the other queen who was living earlier, was almost dead. (28)

The second queen thought to herself that "the Raja would not love her anymore and he would be under the control of the other queen. So I should make some arrangement to dissuade him from her attachment. Thus finishing his love for her." (29)

"So what should be told to the Raja? She was thinking, so it would be better to keep quiet at present. She was burning herself with the photo of the paramour though the Raja had done so much for her." (30)

The paramour for whose sake, she was going to immolate, but was half burnt only. If the Raja were to glance her, then he would himself bum her alive. (31)

When the Raja heard this, he came to see the pyre. He took the half burnt photo and the increased love for that queen was negated (lost). (32)

Then a heavenly voice was heard that "there was no flaw (no defect) in Udginder Prabha, instead Bisunath Prabha had played this trick (witchcraft), which had created a doubt in your mind." (33)

The wife, who could not give up her life for your sake was making this deceitful effort, lest the Raja may not desert her and develop love for the other queen. (34)

Then the Raja, hearing this revelation, thought it to be true and showed his great love for Udag Prabha, leaving (discarding) his love for the other queen. (35)

Couplet

Then the Raja continued to rule along with Udginder Prabha with great joy and bliss. Finally he gave up his love and friendship for Bisun Prabha. (36)(1)

Then they took him for hunting spree and were killing many deer (wild animals). When Yusaf was feeling very thirsty, (pestered by thirst), the brothers showed him (Yusaf) a well. (7)

They said, "We all will go there for drinking water and feel happy (relieved) (from the suffering) caused by thirst. Yusaf did not grasp their meaning (secret) and went to the well. (8)

When they saw the well in the jungle, the brothers caught hold of him and threw him into the well. They told on coming back home that a lion had devoured Yusaf to-day. (9)

All the people got tired of searching for Yusaf and felt greatly pained and their happiness had given way. One merchant came there and saw Yusaf in the well. (10)

He took him out of the well and brought him along with himself. Then he took him to the king of Rome for selling him (as slave). The merchant was asking for too much money in exchange of Yusaf (as price) so no one could buy him, even if someone were to give all the money he had (it was not enough to buy him). (11)

She took him to a picture gallery and showed him all the paintings. When he was greatly enamoured by her, she talked to him like this. (14)

She said, "Let us both have cohabitation to-day, as there was nobody to be seen there (standing). Who will see us or inform others. No one will catch us having sensuous pleasure here." (15)

Couplet :

"I am young and you are also equally young and both are very beautiful. O Prince! Have a sexual companionship with me without any y hesitation. Why are you dilly dallying?" (16)

Chopaiee :

Then Yusaf replied, "You are saying that no one was watching us, this was saying something like a blind person. We have seven witnesses (water, fire, air, sky, earth, sun and moon) or companions with us and they will report to the (Dharam Raj) god of justice right now." (17)

Aril :

When both of us will go to the assembly of the god of justice (Dharm Raj) then with what face shall we reply him? O woman! Do not think about these things. Do not throw me into the abyss of hell. (18)

Due to this thing only, God was called Salig Ram. For this reason only Ravana lost his ten heads. For this very reason Indra got implanted on his body thousand signs of Vaginas. For these very things, Kamdev (god of love) wets called "without limbs", (Ang-heen). (19)

"For these reasons, the moon's face got defaced, and demons Shumbh and Ashumbh were sent to the Yama's house for such things. For this reason one Karichak got all other Karichaks killed. Even Dharam Raj became the son of an attendant (lady), called Bidar (for this reason only)." (20)

"O beautiful lady! Listen. I cannot have cohabitation with you, even if all the gods like Shiva, or Sanak etc. were to ask me all together, it was not possible for me. Having said this, he tried to run away. The woman saw him standing and pulled him by holding his clothes with hand." (21)

Couplet :

Zulekha was left with holding only his clothes and Yusaf ran away. So she could not enjoy a sexual affair with him, and felt ashamed of herself. (22)

Aril

Whatever happened after that, how far could I explain? It is better to keep it in mind, instead of extending this episode further. Yusaf became young and the woman (Zulekha) became old, but she always had the passionate love within heart(for him). (23)

One day Yusaf came there while hunting for deer. Zulekha wanted to ask him and touched his horse with hand. Due to the fire of (pangs of) separation, the horse along with other fittings and the crown got burnt. However, Yusaf (who was living in her heart) was saved. (24)

Seeing the woman's face, Yusaf got surprised. Whatever she had desired, he gave her (by having a sexual companionship). By burning his clothes and the horse, Julekha had deceived him. So she got married to a person of her son's age. (25)

So what, if someone had became very powerful (mighty). If one could not have cohabitation for a long time, then neither he gets satisfied nor the woman gets full enjoyment. (7)

Chopaiee :

The person, who could continue the process of cohabitation for a long time, could alone give full satisfaction to the woman. By embracing her, he enjoys himself and then passes on his pleasure to the woman also. (8)

Even if someone were a mighty person, no woman gets enamoured by him. It is the person, who continues cohabitation by embracing her for long, that the woman gets attracted towards him (he alone could win the heart of the woman). (9)

Couplet

She was embracing the paramour closely and was pressing him to her bosom. Hearing the sound of some noises of kissing etc. the husband of the woman lost his sleep and got up (woke up) (10)

They had enjoyed sensuous pleasure for a long time by embracing each other, which normally no one else does then both the paramour and the woman got tired and went to sleep there only. (l 1)

The spouse then saw both of them sleeping together there, when the woman along with the paramour had gone to sleep. He caught hold of the other man from his dishevelled (scattered) hair, just as a snake charmer (with his magic spell) catches a snake. (12)

Couplet

The husband kept a sharp knife, which cuts limbs, on his neck. He pressed it from one side and it pierced through (the body) to the other side. (13)

Chopaiee

So he killed the woman's paramour with the knife, but did not tell his wife anything about it. When the warm blood touched her (body) she got enraged greatly. (14)

She took up the same knife and struck her spouse with the same knife at his neck and killed him just like cutting (killing) a goat. She burnt both of them (cremated) and then raised such a hue and cry. (15)

Couplet

"my husband, becoming a recluse, had gone to the jungle for his abode there. leaving no trace of any doubt in his mind, he had burnt the house and gone away." (16)

The seventh fort was built of gold and the magnificent fort of Lanka had no comparison to it. (would feel ashamed of itself) and the Raja was himself residing there. Whosoever would not accept his superiority, was arrested by him. (5)

If he were to get hold of one more Raja, then he could perform a Yagna by killing all the Rajas. Then he would marry sixteen thousand queens and perform Narmedh Yagna. (6)

One queen told him that there was a mighty Raja Ugarsain in Dwara Wati. If he were to win him over also, then only Nrip-yagna would be complete. (7)

Couplet :

After saying this, she wrote him a letter from the Raja and sent it to the place, where Krishna was seated. (8)

Chopaiee :

She wrote in the letter, "O great fortunate Krishna! Where were you relaxing (waiting), as our eyes are waiting anxiously for your arrival. After killing this Raja, get the other Rajas released and after marrying us take us all along with you." (9)

When Krishna heard the contents of the letter, then the Lord (of riding Garuda) riding on a Garuda, came there. First he broke the fort of iron and whosoever confronted him was also killed (with crushed head). (10)

Then he won over the copper fort, then the fort of eight metals was occupied, then the fort of lead and then plundered (ploughed) the fort of quartz. (11)

When the silver fort was attacked, the Raja woke up and armed himself with all the weapons. He came with the whole army and sounded the war drums with great fury. (12)

Aril

With unsheathing of swords, the warriors started rushing around and the Kashatriyas started trotting their horses in the great battle. With the striking of arrows by Krishna, the warriors were falling down, being cut into pieces. With great wrathfulness, they were leaving the battlefield soon. (13)

Bhujang Chhand

Great many proud warriors being furious, stood up in their positions. Many had tied their swords (along waists). Somewhere someone was asking for water, while elsewhere someone was shouting, 'kill them, kill them', as the enemy was attacking from all the four sides. (14)

Many had arrived with arms and weapons, some were wielding swords, and many were shooting arrows. Many were shrieking and many were laying down their lives, and many were tearing off the canopies of Kashatriyas. (15)

Many warriors, getting furious with rage, were sounding heavy drums and many were killing (others) with their swords. Krishna getting enraged had killed many warriors after wounding then. With the fall of the silver fort, all the warriors had fled away. (16)

When Sri Krishna arrived there a fie-ce battle ensued. The great Kashatriyas got furious with rage. Many were caught in the noose, and many were killed. Somewhere drunken elephants were roaming around, while at places horses were moving around without their riders. (18)

Chopaiee

The warriors were facing the enemy and were fighting to death. Many of them were being wedded to the fairies (being killed). Whosoever saw those, wedded to the fairies, were fighting and facing death, but were not retracing back to their homes. (19)

Couplet

After gaining victory Krishna, arranged for the release of all the Rajas. Killing Narkasur all his wives were taken away by him. (20)

By doing this witchcraft the woman got all the Rajas released and after killing Narkasur, Krishna became the spouse of all tne women. (21)

Chopaiee

Krishna then got married to 16000 women and then enjoyed sensuous pleasure with them in many ways. After the fort of gold was got demolished, he came to Dwarka and built a fort there. (22)

"Till such time the Raja comes, I shall fight it out and I shall wield my sword against these enemies (she said). After killing all the enemies, then only I shall come home and then salute my spouse with great joy (laughter)." (9)

Hearing these words, all the warriors felt greatly elated. All of them armed themselves with various weapons. Some warriors showed to the queen the army of the enemy. She made thrust into the enemy ranks and killed all of them. (10)

The queen sent for ten thousand bullocks in the night and tied two lit torches each to the horns of the bullocks. From one side she showed the presence of the bullocks to the enemy and herself attacked from the other side. She killed many mighty Rajas like the Karichaks. (11)

When the second day dawned, she sent few bags filled with shoes. The enemy took it to be her treasure (wealth) so they attacked it with vengeance. From the other side the woman looted the Rajas with all their wealth. (12)

When the second day had passed and the third day had dawned, the queen sounded the drums at one place. So people ran away along with their wealth and she attacked them on that route. She looted all the wealthy people without leaving anyone to escape. (13)

On the fourth day, she lit a fire (set fire) and hid herself along with the army on one side. The Rajas then started extinguishing the fire, the remaining Rajas were then killed by the queen. (14)

On the fifth day, organizing her army and with torches lit, she attacked the enemy forces. Killing the Raja's army, she managed to escape.This created such a chaos in the enemy camp that the son attacked the father and the father hit the head of the son with sword (15)

Couplet

In the night, a fierce battle was fought and the warriors died fighting. The father killed the son, while the son killed the father. (16)

There was a ferocious battle fought among the troops in the night. Many people, including the Raja and subjects were wounded. (17)

Chopaiee

The father, with his sword, killed the son and the son hit the father with his sword. The battle was raging fiercely and all the Rajas, being wounded were killed. (18)

Aril

When the sixth day dawned then she got trenches dug up to a depth of twice the height of a man (12 feet) and iron rods were fixed in them and then water was made to flow on top of them. Then she organized a battle with the enemy and the horses were made restive knowingly. (19)

The queen organized her army in two columns and arrows, guns and swords were being used for a long time against the enemy. Then the queen fled with the army following her, and the enemy troops chased them. Trotting their horses, the horse riders fell into the trenches and were pierced by the iron rods fixed therein. (20)

Couplet

In one action only, sixteen thousand warriors died fighting, while the queen also launched an attack and with guns or arrows, she killed the remaining troops. (21)

Aril

When the seventh day dawned, she mixed poison in the food. For some time she engaged the enemy in fighting and after crushing them completely, she sounded the drums of victory and proceeded to the other direction herself. (22)

When the fighting stopped, then the enemy troops did like this, that by crawling slowly, with spears in hands, all the fort gates were attacked. They snatched all the sweets and packed it in bundles. (23)

Couplet

Whosoever would eat those sweets by relaxing there, was affected with the effect of poison and then face death by throbbing in agony. (24)

After four or five hours had passed, the queen launched another attack by holding her sword and killed all those affected by the poison and reeling around in the battlefield. (25)

Aril

Then the woman by sending an emissary offered the proposal of peace and herself moved ahead by organizing a huge army. When the troops had crossed away from the range of guns, her troops launched a fresh attack on the enemy with swords by racing their horses. (26)

Couplet

After killing all the Rajas and destroying their troops, she sounded the drums of victory and after winning the battle, she returned to her palace. (27)

From her the Rajas of the world learnt many witchcrafts. She had killed each warrior of Shahjahan by picking them out one by one. (28)(1)

As the night fell, the woman called th ıt person and carried out a sexual affair with him to her satisfaction for quite some time. She was embracing him by closely pulling him to her bosom and would not like to leave him. She was looking gracious (glamorous) in her various poses of love affair. (2)

Couplet

The queen, along with her paramour then went to the garden and with full enjoyment at heart had cohabitation with him. (3)

In the garden, where the queen was enjoying sensuous pleasure with her paramour, the Raja also happened to pass that way under the spell of fun/love. (4)

Chopaiee

On seeing the Raja, the queen got frightened and told her paramour, "Listen andaccept my proposal and do not fear the foolish Raja at all." (5)

Aril

She threw the paramour in one pit, she covered him with a plank and spread a lion's skin on top of that. She assumed the form of a Yogi and sat on it. She did not look at the Raja and allowed him to pass. (6)

The Raja got surprised on seeing her beautiful form in his heart and said, "Who was this Raja, turned into a Yogi? One should bow to this individual at his feet and by placating his mind, one should seek his blessings." (By paying obeisance to him). (7)

Chopaiee

When the Raja came near her, the Yogi neither got up nor spoke anything. The Raja crossed from one side to the other side and (when the Yogi did not speak) the Raja bowed to him with folded hands. (8)

When the Raja paid his obeisance to the Yogi, the Yogi turned his face away. Whichever direction the Raja was moving the Yogi (woman) , would face the other way (direction). (9)

On seeing this position, the Raja was rather wondering and was all praise for the Yogi in his heart. He thought, this Yogi was not caring for him, as such he was not saying anything. (10)

The Raja, after all efforts, got tired but could not recognize the queen. After all this (the queen) finally said one word but the Raja could not make out the queen's speech. (11)

She thought that the Raja should be told only that thing, which was haunting his mind. "We have no distinction between a rich or poor person and only seek the True Name of Hari (God)." (12)

While talking, the night had fallen. The Raja had sent away his troops, and he was left alone there and it was almost mid night in these musings (thoughts). (13)

When the queen saw the Raja asleep, she called out her paramour, and shook him up with her hand, and woke him up and carried out cohabitation with him in many ways. Both of them moved away from there by writing over the pit, "We are going to the nether lands, having seen both the heaven and the Earth." (14)

Chopaiee

With the dawn of the day, the Raja woke up and did not see the Yogi there, but saw something written on the pit and then had consultations with his ministers. (15)

Couplet

"This Yogi after seeing the heaven, had come to this world and now had gone to Netherlands, without having any other longing." (16)

Chopaiee

All were calling him a Sidha. No fool could realize the actual position. With this witchcrft the woman had saved her paramour and got the pit worshipped by the Raja. (17)

The Raja started worshipping the pit and did not think at all of her sayings. He said, "My salutations to the Yogi, who had gone to Netherlands forgetting even the paradise." (18)(1)

She showed many loving and affectionate attachment to him, thus bringing him under her spell, in no time. The woman was embracing him with lot of passion, so that Navjoban Rai was fully enamoured by her love. (5)

Couplet

That Navjoban Rai was having sexual relationship with Ishakmati throughout day and night. Having enjoyed sensuous pleasure with her, he was fully feeling the bliss of life. (6)

Swaiyya

The woman was lying down on her cot along with her beloved and singing songs of love and was enjoying his company with embraces, kisses and other love affairs and enjoying sensuous pleasure. If the woman was very youthful and charming then he was equally young. So in the affairs of love and sexual enjoyment both were equally passionate and lovable. The people of the three worlds forgetful of their worries were all praise for their beauty and charm. (7)

They were following the rules of Kok Shastra in their love affairs and were enjoying their sexual companionship in many ways. Both were having sensuous pleasure time and again to their satisfaction. People were all praise for their glorious charm. They were meeting each other by chewing betel nuts, with full embellishments and with the tilted eyes of passion and laughter. It appeared as if two warriors were engrossed (in fighting) in the battlefield, while shooting sharpened arrows from stretched bows (of love). (8)

Chopaice

They were so much enveloped in their love affair, that they forgot all about modesty or worldly restraint. They were so much engrossed in passionate love that they lost their sleep and hunger as well. (9)

One day the woman called her paramour and the rival wives saw her sleeping withhim. They told this secret to the guards who were greatly enraged. (10)

The guards became furious with rage and went to the place, where the queen was seated. They caught hold of her along with the paramour and hatched a plan to kill both of them. (11)

The queen then said, "O guards! Listen to me. With the death of the beloved, the queen would also die and with the death of the queen the Raja would also lay down his life (would die). (12)

She arranged two cocks and two hens to be brought there and through the lady attendants gave them poison and then sent for them but the foolish guards could not follow the secret of this (move) trick. (13)

First, she killed the Cock and then the hen died of its own. Then the second hen died and in no time, the cock also died. (14)

Rani Said

The queen said,"O men! Listen to me what I am telling you. With the death of my paramour,I will also give up my life. After my death, the Raja would also die. So tell me, what would you gain? (Out of it)." (15)

If the Raja continued to live, then he would continue to sustain you all. If the Raja, along with his queen, were to die, then you will lose all the benefits of money etc. in your lifetime. (16)

"So why do you not accept more money and spare the lives of all three (of us). Those fools first saw the witchcraft of the hens and cocks and then did not kill the queen and her paramour. (17)

Couplet

By killing the hens and cocks, Ishakmati had displayed her witchcraft and then with the thought of the fear of Raja's death, she managed to save her and the paramour's life. (18)

Chopaiee

The guards had thought like this, "that with the paramour's death, the queen will die, and with the queen's death the Raja will die, and we will not gain any money even." (19)

The guards were very greedy, and did not disclose this secret to the Raja. They did not kill the queen along with her paramour and with the greed of money; they did not proceed further (and closed the chapter). (20)(1)

Akbar, the king emperor, got furious with rage, and launched an attack with a huge army. All the warriors joined together in the attack armed with weapons and protective cover and sounded the war-drums. (4)

Couplet

When they reached near Cooch-Behar, they sounded the war drums and they sent a letter to the Raja. (5)

They wrote in the letter clearly, "Either you accept our superiority and bow to us, or go to some other place or get ready with weapons to fight." (6)

Chopaiee

When the Raja heard this thing, then he wanted to run away, without having any patience or perseverance. When Musakmati learnt about it, then she bound him (in chains) and sounded the war drums. (7)

She organized her army in many ways and killed all the proud (stubborn) warriors. She bound (tied) many Rajas and gave their sacrifice to (goddess) Bhavani. (8)

When the emissary found that the whole army was caught in the swampy land, he came back and informed the queen about it. She had closed both the routes to the mountain and then cutting off their noses, sent tl.em back to their homes. (13)

Many warriors, getting fed up with their suffering, were about to flee from the battlefield. This included some Sayyads, Mughals, Pathans, Sheikhs or such warriors. They were surrendering their weapons and dressed as women they were requesting for their safety only. (14)

These warriors, after running away were resting at a place and the queen Musakmati noticed them. She dug up the river route and allowed the water to flow that side and the Rajas with their crowns and horses were washed away (by the river). (15)

She killed the troops and sent an emissary saying, "O Jain Khan! Come and get married to my daughter. We have no intention to fight against the king. This is the only feeling of mine and my ministers, which we would cherish." (16)

The foolish Jain Khan, on hearing this news, got puffed up and with some mighty warriors proceeded towards that side. He was thinking in mind, "After marrying the Raja's daughter I will come back soon and arrange for a compromise between the king and this Raja. (17)

The Raja made all sorts of efforts, but he was not blessed by the Lord with a son. His youth was almost finished and finally he grew old. (2)

When the Raja's youth was over, the queen became young. The Raja could not have cohabitation with her, so she was always feeling frustrated at heart and sorrowful.(3)

Couplet

The queen developed friendship with another man. She would call him at home and would enjoy sensuous pleasure with him daily. (4)

Chopaiee

He was known all over the world as her foster brother and would always call him as her brother, and would carry out sexual companionship with him to her satisfaction. (5)

She was thinking that if a son was bom to her, everyone would think him to be the Raja's son. So that the land would continue flourishing and people would live in peace and comfort and her heart's pangs would be alleviated. (6)

She would have sexual relationship with him in many ways. She completely forgot about the Raja from her mind. She would embrace him by glancing at him with love, just as a male-deer gets allured by a female deer. (7)

In the meantime, the Raja died and the people became madly disturbed in seeing the kingdom going to dogs. Then the queen called her paramour and crowned him as the king with a canopy-fluttering overhead. (8)

Chopaiee

"We did not beget a son, while the Raja had proceeded to heavens. Now this brother of mine will rule over the country and the canopy of kingdom will furl over his head." (She would say). (9)

"Now my brother will take charge of the kingdom with a canopy overhead and rule the country. All the warriors will carry out his orders and act according to his dictates." (She said). (10)

Couplet

By saying these words, the queen handed over the kingdom to her paramour. By handing over the kingdom along with pomp and show to him, he was declared the king of land. (11)

All the warriors were made to pay their obeisance to him and all the elders from villages were also called and giving them robes of honour, they were sent back (home) and herself started having sexual relationship with him. (12)

"Now my kingdom had become successful, thus she gave all the wealth along with the kingdom to her paramour. She would say, "There was no distinction between me and the paramour. Everyone knew about it including young and old people." (13)

"All the subjects were saying this and the assembly of noblemen were also thinking that the queen had realized the kingdom being destroyed, as such the rule of the land was handed over to her brother." (14)

Couplet

The queen was enjoying sensuous pleasure with the paramour, seeing his youthful exuberance and was greatly elated. With this witchcraft she had handed over the kingdom to him. (15)

The foolish people were also saying that she had handed over the kingdom to the brother on seeing that it was being destroyed. But they could not follow the secret behind it. (16)(1)

There lived a Raja Bharthri in the town of Dhara, who was very wise. He was a scholar of all the fourteen sciences along with being a great warrior and powerful. (1)

Chopaiee

He had a charming wife called Bhan Mati and Pingal Devi was also very dear to him. The glorious charm of the queens was known all over. Before them, the daughters of the gods and demons had no comparison with them. (2)

Couplet

The beauty of Bhan Mati was famous all over the oceans and lands, seeing which the gods were getting mad while the demons were equally enamoured. (3)

While the charm of Pingalmati was equally famous, being full of glory. After creating her, Brahma also could not create another woman so beautiftil. (4)

Chopaiee

One day the Raja went out on hunting spree and thought in his mind. He drenched his clothes (robes) in blood and then sent then back (home) and the message was conveyed at home, that a lion had devoured Bharthar Hari. (5)

The attendant went back to the palace, and going there said, "A lion had killed the Raja to-day." The queen Bhan Mati got ready for immolating herself and Pingal Mai, heaving a sigh had died. (6)

Swaiyya

Now I do not consider the beauty of spiritual bird, lotus flower or deer even worth anything, even the partridge has no value to me in my heart, and the swarm of fish even have not been considered by me as of any importance. The god of love (Kamdev) had become unconscious by seeing his beauty, and all the cranes had become their slaves. O beloved! Your craving glances would finish (alleviate) all my worries and spoil my peace of mind " (25)

Aril

The girl friend after listening to her words, went to that place. She taught her many tricks also. She dressed him with nice clothes, replacing his dirty clothes. By beautifying him she brought him in a smart position. (26)

When the woman got her beloved she embraced him closely by pressing him to her bosom. Then she kissed him and enjoyed his company with great elation. The queen then (alleviated) removed her poverty (by giving lot of money). (27)

One Brahmin had propitiated goddess Durga by worshipping her, so he gained an eternal fruit from her as a reward. He gave that fruit to Raja Bharthari, so that he may remain alive so long this Earth and sky existed. (28)

When the Raja got that fruit in his hand, he gave it to Bhanmati, thinking that she would serve him for a long time by living for long. The woman thought of giving that fruit to her paramour, so that he should remain young always and continue his sexual relationship with her for a long time. (29)

"O friend! Once you get a friend of your own choice, then one should sacrifice everything including body, mind and wealth on him and shower praises on him. "My beloved had allured my heart by all means. So he should remain young and continue living for a long time. So on getting this fruit, she gave it to him." (30)

Chopaiee

The Raja's heart had been won over by the queen, while the queen had given her heart to that devil, while he was attached to a prostitute, so he passed on that fruit to the pros. (31)

Aril

That woman (pros) on seeing the Raja's beauty was enamoured by him. Her beautiful eyes were watching his charming beauty, so she handed over the fruit to the Raja with great joy and satisfaction, so that he should remain alive so long the Earth and sky exist. (32)

So the prostitute gave the fruit to the Raja. She became under his spell, on seeing the Raja's charming personality. Then the Raja, taking the fruit in hand, realized that this was the same fruit which he had given to the queen. (33)

So he tried to check it up in many ways, and asked the prostitute by calling her. "Tell me the truth as from whom you had got this fruit. She told the Raja with folded hands." (34)

"O Raja! Whichever fruit you had given to the queen with love, but the queen was enamoured by a devilish person and that devil was in love with me. Your wife had given him and he gave it to me." (35)

Because of your beauty, I am attached to you and due to the arrows of Shiva's enemy (kamdev) I am enamoured by you. So take this fruit, which would keep you young always, from me and then have sexual relations with me with great satisfaction."(36)

"You had given the fruit to your wife with great joy, while she had developed love for the (evil-minded) devil, and gave it to him. That devil gave the fruit to me and due to the pangs of your separation I gave it to you. On seeing your charm, I am madly in love with you." (37)

"Having seen your glory, I have been allured by you, and have completely lost all sense of my home, so this eternal fruit has been offered to you. So "O Rajan! Please satisfy my passionate love for you." (38)

The Raja then thanked her and praising her, enjoyed sensuous pleasure with her in many ways. The pros was also embracing him closely and seeing his glorious figure was enchanted by him. (39)

Once you get a friend of your choice, you should be proud of that moment and every second and then enjoy his/her company fully, thus removing the pride of kamdev (god of love) fully. (40)

The Raja then ate half the fruit himself a: d passed the other half to Roopmati (pros). Her paramour was cut into thousand pieces, and the queen along with the lady attendant (who arranged her meeting with the devil) were also killed. Having given up all his wealth, palaces and other material goods, the Raja attained the True Name in his heart, Bharthari, then removing his royal robes, dressed himself as a Yogi, and went to the jungle (for penance). (45)

Couplet

Then the Raja met Gorakh Nath in the jungle and having left the glory of kingdom, the prince Bharthri attained the elixir of life (True Name). (46)

Swaiyya

The people of the town were crying and wailing and were moving around in madnes, somewhere the warriors had torn off their robes and lying down on the ground as if they were dying fighting in the battlefield. Somewhere countless women were crying and were unconscious saying, " O friend! The Raja had abdicated from the kingdom and gone to the jungle. (47)

On seeing the (Bharthri) prince, all the wives were feeling the anguish being unconscious, somewhere their necklaces were lying and their dishevelled hair were shining somewhere and their bodies had no charm left. Some were feeling his separation due to their passionate love (pierced by the arrows of kamdev) as their mind was thinking of the beloved Raja. It appeared the secret of the lamp was known to the moths, or the female deer hearing the sound of the special drum, were completely overtaken by the surrender (to the hunter). (48)

When the Raja Bharthri Hari had a discussion with Gorakh Nath, then his mal-sense (evil-thoughts) was gone and the true knowledge had enlightened him thus merging with Gorakh Nath as water mingles with water. (61)

Aril

One day while begging for alms Bharthari saw the support (of spinning wheel) from which oil was dripping (due to heat), then Bharthri, with a laughter, made these remarks to the person who was spinning, "Whosoever gets attracted towards a woman, loses his kingdom. "O support of the spinning wheel! Since you have been touched by a woman so how could you avoid wailing? (62)

Chopaiee

After the lapse of many years, Bharthri went to his own country (land) and a woman recognized Bharthari (Raja) and went (to inform) to the queens. (63)

Couplet

On hearing this news, the queens called Bharthari and after crying and wailing they clasped his (Raja's) feet. (64)

Kaujmati, on hearing the princess's words (of request) went to call at Chhail Kumar's house after leaving her home. (5)

Aril

So she brought Chhail Kumar immediately, and the princess had a sexual companionship with him with great joy. Both Chhail and Chailini were satiated, and would not part company for a moment even (from their embrace). It appeared as if these poor people had gained the world's nine treasures. (6)

He had embraced her by holding her closely to his bosom and had many types of poses along with kisses. The cot also gave way, but she would not part with (leave) the paramour and lifted him (beloved) in her hands. (7)

Chopaiee

While engaged in sensuous pleasure the woman was so much absorbed in it as if she was caught by the noose of love."She thought to herself that she would either marry him or kill herself with a dagger." (8)

After saying all this, she fell down unconscious. It seemed as if without the strike of a sword she had been killed. The father took her in his embrace and the mother also came rushing, shouting dear 'Koer', (what is the matter). (17)

The father said, "The person, whom you got married to in your dream, please fell us all about him. We will arrange that marriage with great joy and peace. She was looking at her father with longing eyes for a long time. She wanted to say something but could not mention it. (18)

"After quite some time she uttered something giving his name as Chhail Koer. In my dream, my parents had handed me over to him and I had accepted him as my Master." (19)

The Essence of Sri Guru Granth Sahib

This work involved me completely in the translation of Sri Guru Granth Sahib in English Prose and took me, to complete it, 10 years from 1990 to 2000. In fact this is the best part of my life, as the whole day was spent in studying and understanding each hymn and then writing its meaning first in Punjabi and then translating that Punjabi version into English Prose. The hymns of each page took two days to complete the job in English version, giving not the literal meanings, but the essence of each hymn, as understood by me. Of course, even a life time is not enough to deal with this subject, as Gurbani is too deep in its philosophy for any individual to really understandand then express it in a foreign language.

In fact, the Guru has clarified it by giving the final verdict by saying:

as such human being has his limitations, but the effort is always rewarded.

II. a) Philosophy of Sikh Gurus

i) This deals with the banis of Nitname, namely Jap Ji, Jaap Sahib, Sukhmani Sahib and Swaiyyais etc.

ii) This book is in two parts, the first part dealing with the meaning of the Gurbani and the second one giving its philosophy under ten headings.

b) The Four Pillars of Sikhism

There are four main pillars of Sikhism, namely Guru, Lord's will (Hukam) Sadh Sangat and Naam.

True Name is to be attained through the help and benevolence of the Guru. The Guru helps us to understand the meaning and purpose of human life, and then understanding Gurbani with its simple version and guidance through four main-supports.

c) The Eternal Bliss - It deals with the philoshphy of Anand Sahib by Guru Amar Das Ji. It helps us to understand the purpose and meaning of human life and understanding Sikh Philosophy with simple version of Gurbani and its guidance.

d) The Universal Message of Guru Granth Sahib. It deals with a simple explanation of the the philosophy of Sikhism and explained briefly with its meaning and objectives . All the hymns are listed. It is meant for those, who feel they have no time to read the full version or scope of the philosophy of Guru Granth Sahib. So in simple language, in few words it deals with the central idea of each hymn. in four volumes.

e) Zafarnama - Letter of Victory written by Guru Gobind Singh Ji to Aurangzeh at the end of hostilities. It poems a part of the present work (5 volumes).

All the hymns of Guru Granth Sahib, with Rehaou (ਰਹਾਉ) are listed and explained fully in Punjabi language.

g) I am proud to be a Sikh - briefly explains the beauty of Sikh tenets and Sikh philosophy

Acknowledgement

The job of translating Dasam Granth Sahib in English prose, with the original in Gurmukhi (Punjabi) alongwith the roman script for non-punjabi readers is not appreciated in some circles for certain reasons. But this job was entrusted to me by Baba Virsa Singh Ji of Gobind Sadan in 2002, and completed by me in 2005. Some how the work remained unpublished due to the sudden death of Baba Virsa Singh Ji. So I am totally indebted to Gobind Sadan for the work.

2. Since the work was lying incomplete for almost ten years, I thought of publishing this work based on an English version of the Punjabi version by Dr. Rattan Singh Jaggi & Mrs. Gursharan Kaur Jaggi with their blessings. Of course the Roman Script of the original was not in the original concept, which has been added now for obvious reasons.

3. Some people have reservations about the portions of the Granth dealing with "Pakhiyan Charitar", but Baba Vira Singh Ji always believed that this portion is completely dealt with by Guru Gobind Singh Ji and I am equally convinced with it. Different views have been expressed by different people. So I owe my gratitude to Dr. Rattan Singh Jaggi & Mrs. Gursharan Kaur Jaggi for this publication.

4. I am also indebted to Major Karnail Singh of Sector 34, Chandigarh who has been of great help to me and had always given me moral support in my efforts, as President of Gurdwara Sri Guru Tegh Bahadur, Sector 34, Chandigarh.

Introduction

The original granth, called Vidya Sagar, weighing about nine maunds, including the poetry of Guru Gobind Singh Ji and other learned poets, seems to have been destroyed in the devastating currents of Sarsa Reviulet while the Guru abandoned the Fort of Anandpur Sahib in 1704 and headed for Chamkaur Sahib alongwith 40 Sikhs only.

Then the first attempt to collect and combine the various remnants of different poetic versions of the Guru remaining safe with certain Sikh followers was made by Bhai Mani Singh, the first Sikh Granthi of Darbar Sahib, Amritsar in the form of a Pothi. About 50 years later on Bhai Deep Singh, Bhai Sukha Singh and some others made similar attempts to publish a version of Dasam Granth. Out of all these versions the most important are Bhai Mani Singh Beer, Topkhana Patiala Wali Beer (Moti Bagh Gurdwara) and Sri Patna Sahib Wali Beer. All these versions differ briefy in their contents due to various reasons. In 1897 Gurmat Pracharak Sabha Amritsar collected about 32 versions of this Granth. The various Banis (Poetic versions) constitute the Dasam Granth as follows :-

i) Jaap, ii) Akal Ustat, iii) Bachittar Natak, iv) Chandi Charitar-I, v) Chandi Charitar-II, vi) Vaar Sri Bhagouti Ji Ki (Vaar Durga), vii) Gyan Prabodh, viii) Choubis Avtar, ix) Other Avtars (Brahma, Rudar), x) Shabad Hazarai, xi) Swaiyyas, xii) Khalsa Mehma, xiii) Shastra Naam Mala, xiv) Charitar Pakhiyan and xv) Zafar Nama & (Haqaitan). In this report Giani Sardul Singh had clarified all the doubts about its authenticity. Then in 1902 Bhai Bishan Singh (of Sangrur) confirmed its author as Guru Gobind Singh based on certain facts and reasoning. Then in 1950 Dr. Trilochan Singh also confirmed 'Dasam Granth' as authored by the Guru himself.

Now in 1999 on the inauguration of 300th Birth Anniversary of Khalsa, Dr. Rattan Singh Jaggi and Dr. Gursharan Kaur Jaggi, under the patronage of Baba Virsa Singh Ji (Gobind Sadan) have published a Punjabi version of the Granth in five volumes.

The present publication of 'Dasam Granth' including the roman version of the Original Text' is an attempt to present it in English for the beneft of English Readers. This version is based on an English version of the text given by Dr. R.S. Jaggi (with his blessings and goodwill).

No individual is capable of commenting on the greatness and life of Guru Gobind Singh Ji, (Sahib-e-Kamal) and personally I feel, this effort and attempt to publish a part of his literacy poetic writings in the form of Dasam Granth in English prose is to understand his greatness and mission in life. I have no ability or capacity to mention even about his various facets of life, like war-fare, creation of Khalsa, challenging the mighty Emperor Aurangzeb and fighting against Mughal oppression, sacrifce of the whole family (father, four sons and mother), what to talk of his literary achievements.

I could only give my opinion that the style of poetic versions in Dasam Granth in the form of various Chhands in 'Brij' alongwith Arabic and Persian vocabulary proves the point that the author of this Granth could be none other than Guru Gobind Singh himself.

Though Sri Guru Granth Sahib was annointed (appointed) as the living Guru of the Sikhs by Guru Gobind Singh Ji, after him, Dasam Granth deserves the same respect as a literary achievement of the great Guru.

Preface

This volume deals in the Episodes from 212 to 404 from Pakhiyan Charitar, depicting woman's characterisation as detailed by the ministers to the Raja. This is followed by "Zafarnama", a letter of victory written by Guru Gobind Singh ji to Aurangzeb in Persion poetry alongwith some Haquaitan (episodes). These episodes also bring out the women's character, through which Aurangzeb has been explained that his character is akin to these women, which is not trustworthy. Zafarnama brings out the hollowness of Aurangzeb's vows based on holy koran and the bravery of the forty famished Sikhs, who faced the onslaughts of 10 lakhs of his army. They attained martyrdom while upholding the prestige of the khalsa against such hordes and defeating the mughal oppression Further more it brings out in beautiful Persian poetry the empty claims of Aurangzeb's holy and pious life style. The Guru had asked the king (Aurangzeb) to come and meet him personally at Kangar and he would guarantee his safety, but the Guru would not take the risk of coming and meeting him as he could not be trusted.

An overall view of the Dasam Granth and its poetic beauty reveals the perfection of Guru Gobind Singh's life and excellence of the Guru's attitude towards leading this life with such calmness against such odds and extreme atrocities while obeying the dictates of the Lord Almighty. This resulted in displaying the sacrifices of the highest order by the Guru's Khalsa including his family members, while upholding the spirit and high ideals of the Khalsa Panth(nation) against oppresion, injustice

ਨਾ ਡਰੋ ਅਹ ਸੋ ਜਬ ਜਾਇ ਲਰੋਂ ਨਿਸ਼ਚੇ ਕਰਿ ਅਪਨੀ ਜੀਤ ਕਰੋਂ।

Which means O Lord! Give me the strength so that I continue pursuing virtual deeds with full conviction of victory in my efforts and when the end of my life comes I may die fighting (against injustice & oppression) in the battle of life.

Foreword

Bhai Gurbachan Singh is a well known scholar who has written an exegesis of the entire Sri Guru Granth Sahib in Scholastic English with great dedication and devotion. He spent ten long years to accomplish this remarkable task. Besides, he has written a book in Punjabi. 'Amrit Boond Suhaavani' which contains meanings and explanation of all the 'Pause Verses' in the Sikh scripture (Rahao Cantos).

Three years ago, another idea came into his mind that he should prepare an English annotation of the 'Banis' of Sri Guru Gobind Singh Ji, which is not available in the market. In this series, the first volume prepared by him is in your hands. It contains the original text in Panjabi and Roman transliteration (on the left) page followed by their translation into English (on the right). It will prove to be very useful to the English knowing readers.

A Gursikh reads or recites five "Nitnem Banis' in the morning and two in the evening without fail. These include three 'Banis' (compositions) of the Tenth Guru Sahib: 1. Jaap Sahib, 2. Swaiyyas Patshahi Dasvin 3. Kabio Vach Benati Choupaiee (Patshahi Dasvin). In the present time, some misguided and mistaken scholars create misconceptions about these 'Banis' (compositions). While administering 'amrit', a sikh is instructed to read/recite these 'Banis' (compositions) regularly. The command of the 'Panj Piaras' (Five Beloved ones) is the Guru's command, which we must obey humbly; controversy about them is uncalled for. The entire 'Jaap Sahib' composition is uttersd in praise of the Timeless Lord. In the very first stanza Guru Sahib says:

That Lord is immovable or eternal Being. He has neither any mark nor sign, not form, nor complexion, nor caste, nor clan. He is self illumined and this glory is very intense and powerful. His name is indescribable.

Therefore, I am describing his attributive names.

'who can describe all thy Names? Only men of good sense mention Thy attributive Names.'

In 'Jaap Sahib', we find words exactly parallel and synonomous to those in the 'mool mantra' (fundamental chant) from 'Ek Onkar' to 'Gurprasaad' recorded at the beginning of Sri Guru Granth Sahib:

Similarity between Jap JI and Jaap Sahib is given below:-

Jap Ji	Jaap Sahib
Ek Onkar	ek hai anek hai
Satnaam	Sadavang saroopai
Karta Purkh	Kariang, Sarbung karta, Samstul, Nivarai
Nir Bhou	Nirbhai Abheet
Nir Vair	Namo rag roopai, Na Satrai, Namitrai
Akal Moorat	Namastang akalai Nirbhoot, Rooprung
Ajooni	Ajai, Ajanmai
Saibhung	Sarab bisar rachio Garan Bhanjanhar
Gur Prasad	Tav Prasad

It is therefore, clear that the tenth Guru's composition 'Jaap Sahib' conforms to the 'bani' (Guru's utterance) enshrined in Sri Guru Granth Sahib.

The 'Chaupai Patshahee Daswin' contains the following stanza : (Takoe kar pahan umnanat)

Rank fools contemplate the Lord by making His idol holy,

For they cannot fathom this mystery,
Shiva as Eternal Lord they call,
But recognize not his secret at all (16)

Guru Sahib openly rejects idol worship and the worshippers of Lord Shiva. People have no knowledge and understanding of the Transcendent Lord God. They worship stone idols. They worship Lord Shiva as if he were transcendent God Himself. Who else but the Tenth Guru could administer such a warning?

In the 'swaiyyas Patshahi Daswin' have been sung the laudations of the timeless one God. We have been cautioned about the so-called dera-heads, holy men and braham-gyanis. The hollowness of the various methods of practicing Divine Name (meditation) have been exposed. We have been for-bidden to do idol worship. Only the method of practicing God's loving devotion has been prescribed for meeting and attaining God.

In the light of the facts stated above, it is absolutely clear that any controversy about these 'Bani's (compositions) is uncalled for. By annotating these compositions in English, Bhai Sahib Gurbachan Singh Ji has made a commenable effort. English-knowing readers, who do not know Panjabi, will be immensely benefitted. Inspite of indifferent health and old age, with the Guru's grace, he is continuing to serve Gurmat literature even today. I pray to the Satguru to grant him good health and greater spiritual strength so that he may continue to render maximum service to Gurmat literature through his writings.

The Raja , on seeing her charm, got enamored by her and got wounded being struck by the arrows of love. He thought to himself (in his mind), "To-night I will call her and would enjoy sexual relationship with her to my satisfaction." (20)

When the day had gone by and the night fell, the prince called her and had cohabitation with her, but could not get at the secret. (21)

Couplet

The princess had love affair with him by embracing him closely to her satisfaction. The brother could not get at the secret of her sister. (22)

The was a town, called Sambhapur, where Raja Sambha was ruling. There was a great post, living with him, who had a fairy-like daughter. (2)

When Sambha saw her charm, he thought to himself. "I shall catch hold of her with great passion and carry out cohabitation with her (till I am tired) to my satisfaction. Even if my wife (Brahmin`s wife) were to come there, I shall not let her go." (3)

The Raja, then sent a lady-attendant and conveyed his heart`s desire, to that girl. The attendant explained to her that she should go to the Raja`s place and enjoy sensuous pleasure with him by embracing and clinging to him. (4)

The young belle thought to herself that :by so doing, her modesty (moral values) was being impaired (affected). By saying `Yes` to the proposal, my moral values will be lost but by saying `no` to the offer, she would be taken away in chains." (5)

So she thought of acting in such a manner as to protect her modesty (moral values) and then kill the foolish Raja. "When the sinful Raja would hear my negative reply then I would be taken away by lifting me along with the cot." (6)

Then she told the attendant, "Listen to me ! Tell the Raja that I shall be going for Shiva`s to-morrow, and there O Raja ! You also come there and then enjoy sexual pleasure pleasure with me there." (7)

She announced that rival wife had done a witchcraft on the Raja and that was why her husband had died in great agony. "So I will announce her doings to all around. First I will shave off her head and then kill her." (8)

She came there along with subject, and came to the site where two dolls were dolls were buried. By digging out the place, she brought out those dolls. Then she shaved off the rival wife`s head and cut off her nose. (9)

The she killed her after shaving her head and cutting off her nose. Thus with this method (deceitful action), having killed the hub and, she killed the rival wife also. No one has able to gauge the depth (secret) of a woman`s mind. This fact had been brought out in the Vedas, Shastra, Smrtitis and Puranas as well. (10)

Here the two hundred and thirty-third episode of the King`s & Minister`s dialogue regarding woman`s characterzaton from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well. (233-4384)

"By placing (seating) him on this seat, I would suspend him downwards and then tie four strong silken ropes even if, the Raja happened to see these, then considering it as a swing, he would keep quiet and thus will not get annoyed." (6)

Thus she would suspend the seat at midnight downwards and by pulling up the ropes, she would manage to pull the beloved up. The attendants would thus arrange (queen`s) her meeting with the paramour by pulling up, the ropes, and then (considering) at their time of sexual companionship, the attendants would get away (aside) from there. (7)

So she would call that bard daily and would not keep him at home and would send him back through that swing daily, by suspending him downward. She would embrace him clasping him close to her and would not leave him even for a moment. One day the Raja came and slept at the woman`s house. (8)

So the princess sent in advance a lady attendant to the Raja. She posed as a mad woman and taking off the Raja`s turban threw it away. The queen then rushed to the place and said, "O lady attendant ! Are you mad ? She started playing like a child and the second attendant (friend) threw the Turban away on picking it up. (14)

When the Raja would go to collect his turban from one side, then it was throw to the other side. Both were tossing the turban up and down like the children`s game of ball. They were throwing dust both in their heads and the Raja`s head . Having seen the friends coming in between, the queen made the paramour to flee away. (15)

So by the time, the Raja came to collect his turban, the queen had made the paramour run away to his home. Calling both of them as mad. The queen started beating them, thus removing worry from the Raja`s mind. (16)

On seeing the lion, the woman got terrified and clasped her beloved strongly. Then steadying himself the prince picked up his bow and stretching the bow, shot an arrow without any fear. The youthful prince thus killed the lion with one shot, at the spot. (7)

Then after killing the lion, he had sexual relationship with the queen and embracing the queen closely and kissing her, he enjoyed sensuous pleasure with her and sexual companionship with her in many styles, so that the woman was completely won over by him (she was sold without any payment). (8)

The woman thought to herself that she should now accompany him only and would not show her face again to her spouse. So she thought of doing such a witchcraft so that she should not lose her honour and maintain her decorum as a queen also. (9)

So she called an attendant and explained to her the whole secret, saying that she should go back to the king and tell him that the queen had been drowned, in chasing the deer. So the attendant went back and informed the Raja (about the death of the queen), as suggested by the queen. (10)

He had four virtuous sons, who were great warriors and egoistic. When the Raja got wedded to another queen, she also became pregnant and got acclaimed. (2)

Then he got another son, born from the queen Bir Mati and he was named Viagh Ket. The Brahmins were given enough money to ward off their poverty in offerings. (3)

The first four sons were deserving heirs to the Kingdom and that woman was having this as her biggest calamity (suffering in mind). If all the four sons were killed by someone, then only the fifth son could be considered as heir to the throne. (4)

So she sent a messenger to the eldest son, saying that he was sent for by the Raja. When the prince came there, he was killed and thrown into a dingy cell. (5)

Then she called the second son, and killed him with the same sword. Similarly she killed the other two sons by calling them and then threw them in the cell. (6)

Both the eyes of the beloved who is liked by anyone have pierced the heart, and they have pierced the heart like spears, which cannot be cast away. (12)

The beloved`s eyes are like the hunter which have pierced the mind and stuck up there. it seems they have taken out the liver (heart) of the beloved, which I am fully convinced of. The eyes of the beloved have been created by the Lords Creator like a (swinging) cradle, in which thousands of people like us go on swinging. (13)

The eyes of the beloved are really charming full of the essence of love, with a glitter of all the worldly pleasures. They could win over (steal) the hearts of the women with their lusture. (14)

"The whole body was feeling the pangs of separation, without caring for the dress or robes even. Due to this pining of love, the eyes are shedding blood instead of tears." (15)

The prince then told the woman, "No one should develop love for the foreigners (strangers), in fact one should not even talk to the strangers. How could one have any love for a stranger woman ? As it is likely to break off soon with a crackling noise and then one has to repent." (16)

O dear beloved ! The love with a stranger is really good. (So inculcate greater love fot the stranger and do not waste your youth without purpose)." (17)

Then the man replied, "We are sons of merchants (Shah) so we have to roam around various lands (countries) and thus watch everyone, high and low with our eyes. O princess ! What will you gain by having developed love for me (love affair with me) ? We will go away to some foreign lands and you will be pining in separation." (18)

The the queen said, "O dear ! I will not leave you, even if you were to make millions of efforts (excuses) or Even if you were to engage me in laughter and in jargon of all types. Hearing the words of the woman, the prince got enamored and went to the place, wherever the girl attendant (friend) took him, along with her i.e. where the Bireh Manjri was sitting on the bed of flowers, bedecked by herself, in a beautiful dress. (21)

The prince came there with a mace in hand and then enjoyed sexual pleasure with the queen in many ways. He enjoyed eighty-four poses of love affair and then performed the sexual companionship with great love and affection. (22)

In the meantime. the Raja (of the woman) also arrived there. The prince attacked him with great fury with his mace and killed him. When he killed the Raja with one strike, then the woman also played a witchcraft, which I am going to detail." (23)

Having thrown the body of Raja down from a dilapidated palace, the queen started crying loudly and with lot of wailing and crying she was falling on the ground and said, "O god ! My Raja has died. What have you done ?" (24)

On hearing about the death of the Raja people gathered there, Having dug up the place thay saw the Raja and took out the Raja from there. His head had been broken into pieces and not a single bone was intact. Just look at the woman`s deceitful action and see what she had done there." (25)

There was a town, called Subhtavati in the South. The Raja of that place, Chhatar ket, was very intelligent and knowledgeable. He had a queen by the name of Roof Manjri, who was considered by all the people as very beautiful. (1)

Aril

The charm of the Raja was also known all over the place, who was considered as a parallel of Indra, Moon, Sun and Kamdev (equal in beauty). Any woman, who would per chance look at his beauty would forget all about her modesty or other family considerations or pride. (2)

There was a Shah`s daughter, by the name of Chhab Man Manjri. She was looking so graceful as if the beauty of moon had appeared (on the horizon). When she saw the Raja Chhatar Ket, she was completely won over by his love (as if kamdev had shot an arrow of love with a stretched bow). (3)

On seeing the Raja`s charm, she became full of sexual desires (under the spell of Kamdev) and forgot all about social restrictions, her modesty or the moral obligations. She was completely overtaken by surprise due to her allurement with his love (being wounded with arrows of separation of the beloved). It seemed as if the black bee was totally mesmerized by the flowers. (4)

"First she would glance at the Raja and then she would gulp something. Having her eyes directed at his eyes, she would not cast them away and would remain standing for long like a lover and was thinking in her mind how to make the Raja have a sexual companionship with her." (5)

One day the Raja also saw the woman and thought to himself that she was enamored of his love. So he should satisfy all her (sexual desires, whatever she desired from him). If she wanted his company day and night, that even should be given. (6)

Choupaiee

The Raja had understood the whole thing clearly, but did not say it openly to the woman. But without the Raja`s presence, the woman was almost mad and sent her lady attendant to him. (7)

She said. "O Raja ! I am pining for your love and suffering the pangs of your separation. please listen to my prayers with full attention. Come and have sexual relationship with me by embracing me closely and O dear ! Satisfy my sexual hunger fully (extinguish my burning desires)." (8)

When the Raja heard about it, then he wrote a letter to her (in which it was mentioned). "If you could kill your spouse first, then only you may have sensuous pleasure with me." (9)

When the Raja explained it fully to the lady attendant, she came back and told to the queen like that, "First you kill the Shah (husband) then you could get wedded to the Raja." (10)

Here the two hundred and forty-second episode of the King`s & MInister`s regarding woman`s witchcraft from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is will. (242-4519)

Choupaiee

There was a town of Sughravati and its Raja was Sughar Sain, whose queen was known as Chitar Manjri. She was so beautiful, as if she was taken out by churning chheer ocean. (1)

Couplet

She had four other rival wives, who were equally beautiful like the moon. They had a son, called Indra Ket, who was as glamorous as the sun. (2)

But Chitar Manjri did not have a single son, she was always feeling jealous of the rival-wife`s son and was always feeling the anguish in her heart thinking about it. (3)

One seeing the co-wife along with the son, with her own eyes, she was always in a pensive mood, being engrossed in this worry, bout would not talk to anyone openly on this subject. (4)

The woman, with whom the Raja used to have greater love was seen without a son. So he showed greater affection for her and praised her considering himself as her well-wisher. (5)

When that prince came to the house, he was fed with a great feast (with poison) she killed that prince and then went to the Raja and said to him. (6)

Couplet

That prince was not a drug-addict, who could consume the drug and bear its effect. The woman said that he was tea-totlar, so he could not stand it and died in a moment. (7)

Choupaiee

The deceitful woman then told the Raja, feeling a great sorrow and grief on his death and rolling down she approached the spouse, saying, she was trembling (with shock) and could not even speak, so she was speaking with incoherent words. (8)

She told the Raja, "O dear Raja ! If you permit me, I will tell you something about one co-wife, as I am worried about the kingdom going to dogs. Bhan Chhata had given poison to your son as such I had come rushing to this place." (9)

Do not mention my name to her and try to save your son. If Bhan chhata would hear these words, then she would not have any regard (love) for me in her mind. (10)

On hearing the queen`s words, the Raja left the place and saw his dead son lying on the ground. He started crying, being in great sorrowful mood and was throwing his turban on th ground with a sound. (11)

Couplet

Neither he was a warrior, nor a drug-addict so that he could stand it and live longer. The noble son died immediately on having the food and could not bear the poison of the drug. (12)

Then the Raja sent for the queen by holding her (with) from her hair. Without realizing or knowing the actual facts, he dispatched her to the heavens (killed her). (13)

The queen thus killed the son along with the co-wife and developed love of the Raja. Even (gods) Brahma and Vishnu had not been able to gauge the depth of woman`s mind. (14)

Choupaiee

There was a great Raja Padam Singh of a virtuous nature, who was keen to finish all the devil minded persons, the friendly towards the subjects, with intention to help them removing their affections, and was (otherwise) terrible. His wife was called Bikram Koer. It seemed, the Lord-goldsmith had moulded her in a mould Himself. (1)

Shumbh Karan was a powerful son of the Raja, who had crushed many enemies and won them over with power. All the people had called him to be very charming. The women, on seeing him, would not get tired by watching him (for long hours). (2)

Whichever path the prince would follow, it would seem was having a shower of his benevolence. The people`s eyes were glued on the route, where he was to pass. It seemed as if the arrow (of his eyes) were licking nectar of his glance. (4)

Couplet

whichever route was followed by the prince, all eyes (glancing at him) would get refreshed and the land would become beautiful with greenery. (5)

Choupaiee

There lived a Shah by the name of Brikh Dhan in that town, who had a wife called Nagar Koer. His daughter, Nagar Mati was also looking glamorous there, who had enamoured all the residents (youths) of the town. (6)

That fool continued to say `No` to her requests. That foolish person did not think of any good or bad results out of his negation. So he did not go to her house and no sexual relationship with her that day. (19)

The poet has said,

Aril

If a woman were to meet a man with sexual desires, and she is not (satisfied) given her sensuous pleasure, then that is thrown into a dreadful hell. If he were to go to another man`s wife in her house and then enjoys cohabitation with her, then also he suffers through the pangs of sin (and thrown into hell). (20)

So first she had killed mother and father and then got the paramour also killed and then deceived the foolish Raja also , who did not reason out correctly. This sort of happening has not been heard of before, nor it will happen again in future. No one knows the mind of the woman in the whole world. (29) (1)

There was a world famous town called Kham Bhavat in the Eastern side. The Raja of the place was named Roop Sain, who would not spare the life of a despot. (1)

His wife was known as Madan Manjri, whose beauty was comparable to that of the moon. She had two beautiful eyes like the deer (as if borrowed from the deer). She had borrowed the nose of the parrot and the sweet tongue (speech) of a black cuckoo (koel). (2)

The Raja was taking many drugs and then would carry on cohabitation with many women. He was consuming hemp and opium and would drink about fifty tumblers full of these drugs (3)

Aril

He would enjoy various type of sensuous pleasure with the queens. The number of poses and kisses he used to have, were beyond any count. He would continue sexual relationship for (four pehars) twelve hours of the night with great joy. If the queen was also enjoying sexual companionship, she would also get engrossed fully with him. (4)

There was another woman by the name of Ras Tilak Manjri, who was considered to be very rich in the world. That Shah was not consuming Jalvatri of Japhal etc. And being a wiser person and teetotaler he would not take hemp even by mistake. (5)

The Shah thought (called) himself to be too clever and would not take bhang (hemp) by pounding it either by mistake or in the dream even. He would quarrel with the queen, who used to consume hemp and would not give a penny in alms to any poor or suffering person. (6)

The Shah said

The person who consumes drugs, is always dosing during day and night, if in case they fail to get the drugs for an hour, they start feeling feverish (out of sorts). The persons who are drug addicts, are worthless, as they are lying down like a dead person after taking drugs, in their house. (11)

The woman then said

The wise people continue thinking only, whereas the drug addicts are ruling as Rajas. This wiser person is always hoarding money whereas the warrior spends (squanders) money in one day only .By taking drugs one gets praised and by giving alms and picking up a row one does not get dishonored (does not feel belittled). The pious person loses his life in pain and without purpose. (12)

The drug (hemp) is consumed by those persons, who are engaged in business of the meditation of the Lord, and those persons, who take drug are great warriors, and are bestowed with the benevolence of the Lord, while the persons (with a weighing balance in hand) who are engaged in business (warehousing) can hardly consume drugs (how could a trader have drugs ?). To conquer unconquerable people are always those persons who dispel, the fear of the cowards, wielding a sword in their hands. Only those persons consume hemp, who expect praises in the world. At first they give away a sword in offerings (to the Brahmins) and then depart from the world. (15)

The drug addicts carry out cohabitation with the women and continue with their love affairs for two pehars (six hours) and amuse the clever women by jumping around like the deer, whereas the pious people, in the process of sexual relationship, get tired in the beginning only and fall down on the ground trembling (with exhaustion). They get their semen discharged soon, so they cannot carry on with sensuous pleasure for long. (24)

"Their semen gets discharged on the ground and they remain silent spectators and looking at the woman, they look down cast. She fell down reeling on the ground and the Shah embraced her to his bosom by feeling sorry, saying Alas ! "He said, I would have gained everything (millions) If you could be saved. Now tell me, what should I do ? The woman said, "You must feed everybody, including the Raja, with nice meals." (31)

The woman thus got her beloved and their eyes were fixed with each other, just as a black deer had been caught in bondage (noose). She got the Raja enamoured like this, as if he were her slave, purchased with money. Then the woman enjoyed sensuous pleasure with him to her satisfaction. (37)

The Shah was lying unconscious and could not think (understand) about anything. It seemed as if the Satan had beat him with legs. That fool could neither speak nor get up nor was he dozing, while the Raja was enjoying sexual relationship with his wife. (38)

Couplet

The Shah was tied down in the palanquin and whatever money was available in the house, was also put in the palanquin. (39)

There was a powerful king in Kashmir, who was very charming and wealthy also and was always keeping alert in battles. He was having a daughter, who was equipped with all the qualities. (3)

He called all the famous Brahmins and then fixed her marriage date and betrothed her with the son of Raja Bir Tilak. He sent him lot of money and then called him after thinking about the marriage date. (4)

The day he had planned to marry away his daughter, that day all the streets and markets (bazaars) were decorated with buntings. The women started singing songs in each and every house and many musical instruments were being played. (5)

They performed all the rites and customs of marriage and gave lot of things to the Brahmins in offering (alms). All the beggars became rich (like Rajas), who never went for begging again. (6)

Couplet

After performing various customs, the boy`s party came in the form of a Barat (marriage party). The prince was embellished with all ornamental robes, which are beyond description. (7)

There was a famous town called Ajitawati, where the Raja Ajit Singh was ruling. He had a wife named Ajit Manjri, who had cast her complete spell on the Raja (by mind, speech and action). (1)

He had a daughter named Bhujang Mati, who had studied Kok (sex) literature, grammar, and shastras. She was very beautiful, noble and god-fearing. No one had either seen or heard about such a charming beauty. (2)

There was a Shah`s son called Brikhabh Dhuj, who was very smart, cool-headed, and a pious person. He was very glamorous, powerful and intelligent. Seeing his great many qualities, even Rati was feeling jealous as to why her spouse Kamdev (god of love) was not bestowed with all the qualities ? (Why was superior to Kamdev?) (3)

The Raja`s daughter once happened to have a glance at him and thought in her mind that he was a great warrior with great strength. So she called a clever girl-attendant (handmaid) and sent her towards him, giving out her heart`s secret to her. (4)

With the first glance of the prince, the princess had been enamoured by him towards her sexual urges (the arrows of Kamdev had wounded her at the first sight only). She was madly in love with him (she was crushing her hands with her mouth) but nothing was under her control. If she were provided with wings by the Lord-Creator, then she would go flying to meet him (without any delay). (6)

So she wrote a written message to him and sent it to him. By saying many versions (of secret nature) she tried to allure him towards herself. He was taken in a palanquin (sukhpal) and no one saw the secret behind it. The friends (of princess)told the father (Raja) that some fairy had taken him away. (7)

Choupaiee

The father (of princess) had got tired of wailing and crying and no one gave him any news about her. His wife went to the Raja and complained to him, that some fairy had taken away her husband. (8)

The Raja then replied, "Let us rectify this person and do not allow him (Shah`s son) to go away anywhere. All the people got tired of searching for her everywhere and no one could get at the secret of this girl. (9)

For one year the girl kept that person at home and no one heard anything about it with his ears. She had cohabitation with him to her satisfaction (in many ways) and had enjoyed sexual relations with him (in many ways). (10)

Aril

First they carried out (Nat Asan) cohabitation on Nat style, then Lait style, and then against the common practice style, they had various poses of sexual relations to her great satisfaction. Having done Lalit style, they humbled the pride of Kamdev (god of love) even. She was enjoying sexual affairs with him day and night without any fear. (11)

Couplet

When the princess saw his charming beauty, though very proud of her own charm, she became rather depressed as she compared her beauty to his charm. So she threw her betel nut sputum on him, so that he may get allured by her (may get friendly to her). (4)

Nagar Kunwar turned back and looked at her and on seeing her beauty, got enamored by her (love). Both the eyes met each other`s glance and all their heart`s worries and afflictions were cast away. (They felt attracted towards each other). (5)

The princess tied a small cot (cradle) with a silken rope and hung it downwards. She pulled him up and took him to her palace, thus she had attained her lover, of her choice. (6)

Totak Chhand

When she managed to pull up the paramour is her palace she enjoyed sensuous pleasure is with him to her satisfaction she was so much allured by him on seeing his charm, as if a cheat had duped a woman with force. (By meeting his glance, she was attracted towards him). (7)

They were having sexual companionship by lying down sometime and then getting up also and they satisfied their sexual desires in many ways. The woman was clasping the beloved to her breasts in such a manner as if a penniless person had got hold of a treasure (8)

They were having sexual Madanochit Asan (pose) in sexual relationship, thus satisfying their sexual urge (the fire of Kamdev). Then they had Lalit Asan many times thus having sexual relationship as per Kok Shastra`s love affairs. (9)

When they were engaged in their companionship, they were laughing merrily and the lover was pulling the beloved every time. The princess was beyond herself with joy on seeing his beauty and she would not leave him from her grasp. (11)

In the meantime her father came there and the princess felt greatly aggrieved. "She was thinking in her mind as to what means should be adopted so as to gain this person as my spouse by making the father (to accept this proposal) to agree to my request." (12)

So she went herself to meet the father and said to him, "This Raja had taken too much hemp (bhang), so that he had lost all his senses." (13)

"When he saw my beauty, he could not control his sexual urge (being hit by Kamdev`s arrow) and he forcibly held me in his hands and placed me under his legs with force." (14)

My moral chastity was saved, as such I had a glance at you (you had reached in time). If you had not arrived in time, then this paramour would have done cohabitation with force. (15)

Now you may take a (moral) test so as to alleviate your doubts, if any. In case, a lamp is lit with my urine, then you may enjoy sensuous pleasure with me with full satisfaction and joy (with pleasure). (16)

She went to urinate in a vessel, and she put some oil in it, then she told the spouse, "o darling ! I am now frightened of you (at heart) as such I have urinated excessively." (17)

With urination, the whole vessel was filled up and the rest of urine had fallen on the ground. I am so much afraid of you that I feel like losing my life even. (I am scared of you)." (18)

So she lit the lamp with the oil whereas it was shown to the spouse as urine passed in his presence. The fool did not gauge the depth of her secret as urine passed in his presence and accepted the wife as a chaste woman (of pure character). (19)

That ignorant fool could not follow at all and arranged a grand feast and fed the Brahmins first to their satisfaction and then went to join the company of the wife (on the bed). (25)

Whatever the woman had said, he did accordingly. Thus the woman won the bet against her sister-in-low. Terming the urine as oil, she had lit the lamp (with it) and made the spouse to atone for sins in grand style (Brahm-punishment). (26)

The person, who called himself a great villain, never again went to sleep having taken hemp (bhang). Whit this witchcraft the woman had deceived the spouse by showing him everything with (before) his eyes. (27)

First she had cohabitation (with someone) in the presence of her spouse, then showed the lighting of a lamp with her urine, and then arranged for a feast by the husband instead and the spouse accepted the fact that he possessed a Chaste wife (faithful to her husband). (28) (1)

Here the two hundred and fifty third episode of the Kings & Minister`s dialogue regarding the witchcraft of woman from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well. (253-4770) (Contd.)

Couplet

Bishan Ket had come under the spell of the prostitute and was busy in having cohabitation with her (day and night) all the time, but would not go to Bishan Mati`s place even once,(or by mistake).(3)

Choupaiee

The queen then sent her handmaid (lady attendant) to the prostitute with lot of wealth and gave her the message that if she were to kill Raja Bishan Ket then Bishan Mati would help her to alleviate her poverty completely. (4)

When the attendant gave this message (to the pros). then the prostitute kept quiet hearing this message. "She replied that the money be kept with a jeweler and handed over to her when the job would be completed and inform me accordingly." (5)

When the sun had set and the night had fallen, then the Raja sent for the prostitute. She went there dressed up with glamour and tried to please him in many ways. (6)

The Raja was very fond of hunting and was not taking much interest in his royal functions (of the kingdom), While he was going in the jungle, a deer passed him suddenly. He raced his horse after that deer. (4)

The deer while running (like this) went always very far and the Raja followed him and there was a thick jungle, whose dreadful appearance cannot be described. (5)

There were many huge trees comprising saal Jamal, lemons, Kadums, the banyan tree with roots, and were full of juicy fruits. (6)

There were papal trees, along with date trees and there were fields of tow types or Jaman (black plum) trees apart from cocoanuts, pomegranate and Narangi. (7)

Couplet

There were narcissus (Nargis) and rose flowers blooming, there, it was looking like the Nandan jungle, which had no other comparison (parallel). (8)

There were many rivulets flowing in that forest: There were many fountains there, which were giving joy and pleasure to the mind. It is rather impossible to describe the glamour of all these, as it is worth perceiving and enjoying all this grandeur. (9)

The Raja also happened to come there and its grandeur was beyond description. By taking the deer, there he killed it which was being watched by the gods and demons. (10)

Couplet

The daughters of the gods and demons were going to that forest always and were always considering him in their hearts as their friend. (11)

Choupaiee

The woman of demi-gods and celestial singers (mythological), being greatly intoxicated (excited) were always visiting this forest, and were keeping an eye on him. He would always allure the hearts of the women and snake girls, whereas the dancing girls were beyond count (who were interested). (12)

They were all offering their hearts as a sacrifice to him, but then offered their ornaments, robes and silken head covers as a sacrifice. Someone was offering flowers or betel nuts and were singing songs in various tunes. (17)

Couplet

All the women were getting enamored on seeing the grandeur of the prince and had offered their ornaments, dresses and silken head covers as a sacrifice. (18)

It appeared as if the female deer, on hearing the music with the ears, was getting enchanted. In the same manner all the women were completely spell bound in the love and separation of the dear beloved (being wounded by the arrows of separation). (19)

On seeing the glory and charm of the Raja all the women of gods, demons were spell bound. The daughters of Kinars (mythological horse with human head), demi-gods and snakes were all allured by him. (20)

There was another Raja by the name of Kanwar Tilak Man and he was truly deserving of having the rule of a kingdom. His charming beauty is rather indescribable. Even the sun, on seeing his glamour was feeling belittled. (3)

Bijai Chhand

Alingunj Mati, along with a troupe of her girl friends (bedecked with many colorful designs) came there for a sojourn. On seeing the charming beauty of the Raja, she got enamored by hem, thus alleviating her heart`s pining. She was feeling shy within herself on perceiving his smart bearing but was joining (meeting) his glances with her eyes being very obstinate (she was looking at him unabashed, meeting his glance). She went back home, but her heart was still thinking of that place, just as a losing gambler leaves his mind, body and wealth at the gambling den. (4)

Then with a sign of the eye, the beautiful princess going back home called maid and gave her lot of money and explained to her in many ways (by placing her hands on her arms) and requested her earnestly, to arrange her meeting with the beloved (friend) else she would not be found alive. "I have told you all about my heart`s desires. "(she said to her). (5)

"O girl-friend (handmaid)! "I will become a jogan (ascetic) and go to the jungles, changing my robes with saffron coloured clothes, removing all my ornaments I will rub ashes on the body and will hold a mendicant`s pot in hand, making my eye pupil as a begging bowl and his glances would be my alms, thus getting attained with it only. Even if I have to give up my life with my age dwindling, but I will not let go this chance, (of getting him). (6)

Couplet

Listening to the words of the princess, the clever handmaid reached the place, where the Raja Tilak Man had gone on a hunting spree. (10)

Choupaiee

The handmaid reached the spot, where the Raja was known to come there. The limbs of the handmaid was bedecked with ornaments, and it appeared as if she was looking glamorous like a moon among the stars. (11)

The woman (handmaid) had fixed an head-ornament (chouk), along with two ear rings like flowers (Karan-phool) and was wearing a necklace of pearls. The head tresses were covered with pearls (parting of her hair were having pearls attached). (12)

All her ornaments consisted of pearls, along with red coloured jewels attached in between them. Then beads of green and blue colour were also interwoven therein as if they were proceeding towards the stars with a smile. (They were looking beautiful). (13)

When the Raja saw the woman, he was wonder struck (in his mind) and was thinking whether she was a daughter of the gods, demons, demigods or celestial musicians, or born of a beautiful woman, she snake, fairy or godly woman. (14)

The Raja thought to himself that "She should be asked the reason for her coming in this land. Was she the daughter of sun or moon or kuber ?" (15)

Choupaiee

The Raja walked up to her and got enamoured by her beauty and got allured by her love, seeing her charm and was thinking as to which god or demon had (created) produced her ? (16)

She was having a necklace of pearls, with the letter attached (sewn) to it. She said, " Rajan ! Whatever beautiful form you are seeing in me, (the sender of this letter) should be known to be thousand times more beautiful." (The queen was extremely charming). (17)

Couplet

The Raja got fully enamoured by the charming beauty of this woman. He forgot about his home (family life) and proceeded along with her. (18)

"How should I see her charming beauty, thus making my life worthwhile ? If I were to gain such a beautiful wife, then I would not show my face even to the (present) queens." (20)

He left for that place, picking up this woman (handmaid) on his chariot. Finally moving quickly, he reached the place, where the queen was waiting for him. (21)

Couplet

The Raja, leaving all his pomp and show of kingdom, and dressed himself as a Yogi (mendicant) and under her loft he lit a ritual fire and sat there. (22)

Thus the princess enjoyed the great fun of sensuous pleasure and thus kept the people in wrong belief (deceived the people) while they took him to be a Yogi and no one knew about his being a Raja. (24)

One day the princess went to her father and told him in some curt language (rude language). The Raja was greatly annoyed and exiled her (to jungles). (25)

On hearing the orders of exile, she was crying and wailing openly but inwardly she was feeling relieved of all her pain and sorrow (she was feeling happy), thinking that the Lord had accepted her desires and the father had ordered her exile (which suited her). (26)

The Raja ordered his attendants to send this girl away immediately, and leave her somewhere in the thick jungles. (27)

The attendants took her with them and left her in the woods (jungle).

That Raja (her lover) also reached there and he established his Yogic position there. (28)

Choupaiee

There was known to be a Raja by the name of Hansa Dhuj, whose valour and glory was famous throughout the world . He had a wife (queen) called Kaiso tama. Such a beautiful woman was never heard of or seen before. (1)

They had a daughter by the name of Hans Mati, who was well-read in grammar, Kok and other Shastras. There was none else comparable to her in the world (in beauty). On seeing her beauty the sun would stop its journey onwards (would feel belittled). (2)

Aril

That woman was known in the world to be the most beautiful woman, as there was none else in the world to compete with her (in beauty). She was looking glamorous with her charm and youthful exuberance. Even gods like the sun, moon and Kamdev (god of love) were feeling ashamed of themselves (belittled) on seeing her beauty. (3)

When that woman saw the beauty of a delicate prince, (then she thought) that there was none else like him in the world, either seen or heard of when he would attend the royal assembly (court), then he would enamour all the women (he would steal the hearts of all women). (4)

Choupaiee

The princess called a handmaid and explaining her all details, she sent her to the prince saying, "Bring him here with lot of efforts and then offer him any reward, he would ask for !" (5)

Aril

When the handmaid saw the queen so madly involved in his love, then she thought in her mind, that the princess may not die (in her love affair). So she reached there, casting away all her fear, where her paramour was seated on a nice stage. (6)

Somehow the handmaid managed to bring the prince there but did not tell him anything about his meeting the princess. Then he came to the princess`s house and got pleased and relieved to see the princess. (7)

Then the princess told him, "Leave aside all your modesty or social moral order and have sexual companionship with me. When the friend heard about having a love affair, then he got worried about the loss of his moral duties.?" (8)

Couplet

The prince thought to himself that this woman, "calling herself the most beautiful in the whole world and having been born in a royal family, O obstinate woman ! "You want to have sexual affair with me. O shameless Creature ! You still do not have any shame or moral duty !" (9)

Choupaiee

The princess replied, "When I saw your glorious form, then I had cast away all the social obligations (moral duties). I did not appreciate anything about religious functions or duties, except that on seeing your charm I got fully enamoured by you (I was sold out to you). (10)

Then Raja Hans Ket started for that place and seeing the corpse beneath his daughter, He got frightened. He asked the princess, "Why have you done like this and killed him without any reason?" (21)

The princess said, "The Brahmin had taught me the Chintamani Mantra (magic spell) and had taught me with great stress that if I kill a beautiful prince, then all my jobs (functions) would be successful," (22)

Thus I had caught hold of him and killed him, O dear father! Listen to my words! On top of this corpse, I have recited and meditated on this mantra now you may do as you consider right. (23)

When Hans ket heard the words of the daughter with his own ears, he got furious with rage and ordered the Brahmin to be brought before him, who had taught such a mantra (incantation). (24)

The queen was involved in the love of another man and enjoying sensuous please with him to her satisfaction. Then she told her spouse (Raja). "I was sleeping when Shiva appeared in my dream and spoke to me like this with a smiling face." (3)

Shiva Said

"You come to a thick jungle alone and then worship me there and placate me. I will mingle my. Light with your soul and will bestow on you "Salvation in life itself," and show this to the world. (4)

Taking the name of Shiva, she got permission of the husband (Raja) and went away. The spouse thought that she had gained Salvation, where as she had gone to the house of her paramour and settled. (5)

When the queen heard the beautiful tune of his music with her ears, She also got enamoured and became madly excited with sexual urge and thought to herself to have sensuous pleasure with the buffalo caretaker. (4)

Choupaiee

Where the man was gazing the buffalo, the queen went in the night to that place. After about two hours her husband got up (woke up) and holding a sword in hand went in search of the queen (to chase her). (5)

There was an intelligent handmaid with her, who understood the whole affair (in her heart). So she thought to herself. If her husband would see her having sexual relations with another man, them he would dispatch both of them to the valley of death (kill them both). (6)

So she got up and reached there before him (her husband), where the queen was enjoying sexual relationship with the herdsman. She woke her up by touching her body and told her the whole detail (story) (about her husband). (7)

Aril

Hearing this the queen got frightened and drowned herself in the sea of thoughts. She killed the caretaker by making a noose around his neck with his turban and hanged his body with a huge tree and started bathing underneath the tree, having undressed herself. (8)

The princess became mad like a drunken person (in her craving) and she gave up all desire for food or drink. At times she would start laughing (like a crack) or sometime she would sing his praise or at times she would spend her day and night in crying and wailing. (29)

The body of the princess was becoming feeble (with a pale face). She was pining for meeting the beloved, but this pain she could not divulge to any one. Her beloved was living across the seven seas. She could give out her state of mind to someone, who could arrange to bring her beloved and unite with him. (30)

The poet has stated, "Now I am going to depict the condition of the prince, which also you may care to listen O wise men! Listen to me carefully! Give your attention to me now. (On the other hand) the prince was also spending his day and night in wailing and crying for her. The woman (of the painting) was not to be seen anywhere and her painting was being kissed and placed close to his heart. (31)

Thus she arranged for a meeting of the fairy queen with the prince, and both were seated on the bed. When the friendly fairy had gone from there, the fairy queen had her sexual desires aroused within her. (69)

When the queen was excited with the sexual urge, then she extended her hand towards the prince. The prince said with a laugh, "O dear! Listen to me. I am telling you one thing (somethine). (70)

"First you arrange my meeting with that princess and then you have a sexual companionship with me. At first I shall wed that beautiful woman, she will be my wife and you will be my friend (paramour)." (71)

Aril

The fairy-queen finally failed in her efforts and did not give her sexual companionship. So she agreed to the prince's proposal. The fairy queen took him on her wings and flew to the place where the princess was pining for her beloved like the bird toad (papiha). (72)

That princess also getting embellished with all sorts of beauty-aids and ornaments, stood outside the loft and being forgetful of all her modesty, was trying to glance at the eyes of the prince. (so as to get all the four eyes mingle with each other). The Raja, on seeing the princess busy with many efforts, got surprised. He was thinking in his mind whether this woman was either a human snake or hilly type of beauty? (5)

Was she a female painting, or a statue, fairy, Padmini or Parbati type of woman? If he were to gain a woman of this type, then for eight lives to come, he would offer himself as a sacrifice to every moment of his life. (He was fully allured by her beauty for all times to come). (6)

Both were aroused with love of cach other and in the meantime the sun had set and night had befallen. Then the queen sent her lady messenger (handmaid) and expressed great love and liking for the friend (prince). (9)

That queen was loved greatly by her husband (Raja) ad he would not let her go here and there at night. He would sleep at night by taking her in his embrace clasping her and would enjoy sensuous pleasure in many ways (10)

The queen was not getting a chance as to how she could manage to have cohabitation with the other prince through some witchcraft. The Raja would always sleep along with her, so (she was thinking) how to go and meet him (the other Raja). (11)

She was getting very restive without meeting him (not having peace of mind) she was afraid of the Raja, being in his company while sleeping. When she saw, the spouse had gone to sleep, then taking a chance, she called the other prince (paramour). (12)

She sent her handmaid and sent for him through her and explained to him by all means. The queen told the paramour to have sexual companionship in such a manner so that other person should not be awakened. (13)

Then Chitar Kauch (Raja) came there and due to darkness. He could not make out as to who was the Raja and who was the queen? (where each one was). By mistake he caught hold of the legs of the Raja and pulling them, placed them underneath himself. (14)

When they would come to the Brahmin for studies, they would bow to him and whatever teaching the Brahmin imparted to them they would gain that and were giving lot of money to the Brahmin. (8)

One day the princess went ahead of other's and bowed to the Brahmin The Brahmin was bowing to 'Salig Ram' in many ways and worshipping him. The Brahmin was worshipping Salig Ram by bowing his head to it many ways. (9)

On seeing this the princess laughed and considered the statute as a stone. So she asked the Brahmin as to why was he worshipping it and why was he bowing to it with folded hands. (10)

The Brahmin replied

"O Princess! This Salig Ram was a Thakur (god), who was worshipped by many great Rajas. How could you, a fool, realize this or appreciate it? You were considering in as a stone." (11)

Kabit

You are giving sermons to others, but yourself you do not meditate on the Lord and always tell the people repeatedly to rid themselves of money. Being greedy for money, you are going to the house of high and low, without having any (shame) hesitation. Then you proclaim to be pure (of heart), while actually you are extremely impure (of heart), as you are serving the malechhas (low castes) and pick up their crumbs (alms). You are greatly discontented, while you announce yourself as 'contented', and leaving the' one door of the Lord, you are begging from door to door. (19)

You make 'Shiva' out of them worship it and allow it to be washed away (in river) and them again make another Shiva out of mud by kneading it. You bow to that idol and rub (place) your forehead before it for two hours, O fool! Think over it, what power have they got, so that they could bless you something? You are worshipping the genitive organ of 'Shiva' (the idol) and bow to it, considering it Shiva, and he would give you the same thing in your hands. Will you give that ling (organ) to your daughter or will you gulp it yourself? In the same manner, this Shiva will treat you with great disgrace, in the end. (20)

Praise and slander of anyone lasts only once is the world, but when dust returns to dust on one's death, then nothing out of praise or slander lasts (remains) in the world. (43)

Aril

The Lord, who bestows salvation to human, had not given authority to anyone else for passing on this Salvation. In that case, the father, who does not part with something, could kill his son even. Whosoever gives you money (in alms), gets praised by you, while the person gets your slanderous attack, who does not hand some money. (44)

For the avarice of money alone, people study grammar, and take Puranas in hand for the same greed of wealth. For the same purpose they visit distant lands leaving there own country, without having a glance at their parents. They go to the jungle having large trees of palm, tall trees of Saal and Banayan trees, without having at fear any heart. All are interested in amassing wealth though they call themselves recluses. They are born in Kanshi but die in Kamaon. (49)

Many persons, in the pursuit of amassing wealth, adorn their heads with tufts of hair, while some others, wearing a necklace of wooden pearls roam around the jungles without having any sense of self-respect and some others with a tweezers pull out their hair of the head. They show to the world with hypocrisy that they are punishing themselves (for sins committed). They spoil both the worlds, here and here after. (50)

"They worship the genitive organs of mud. Tell me, what occult power have they gained through such practices? The world knows that the idols of the stone is considered as God an then they bow to it during their worship and become ignorant due to stubbornness. O fool! Try to understand and wake up and (leave) give up your dual-mindedness." (51)

Many people study at Kansi for a long period, and then face death in Bhutan. The father lives elsewhere, While the mother somewhere else, the wife and son, or the daughter-in-law and brother have lived at other places. By getting some training in cleverness (shrewdness) they roam around foreign lands, leaving their homes (and hearths). No one had crossed the line (extent) of greed is alluring (all the people) the whole world. (52)

"All these beings consider themselves having attained Salvation, but they do not understand the cycle of births and deaths. We know fully that many powerful and glorious persons are caught in the bondage of Yoga (asceticism), they consider the stone only as Shiva, without knowing anything about the real Shiva, Why do you not think and (tell) accept the fact that Shiva, the spouse of Parbati, was not present in these stones?" (55)

"The foolish people bow before the mud (idols). Tell me what powers could you gain from such practice? The Prime-Soul which had sustained the whole Universe (kept in joyful position), how could it be pleased with your offering of some rice? You burn incense, blow the conch shells, and shower some flowers before these idols. "O fools! you will get tired of all these practices in the end, but will not be able to attain the Lord through these stones (idols) at all." (56)

These brabmins teach some people about such mantras (incantations) and some others are taught magic spells. The power which is not propitiated with things, they read slokes, songs or Kabits before him (the idols). These Brahmins take away (steal) wealth from the homes of householders during day times. So she (Turkish woman) sent her lady attendant to him (Roop Sain) and informed him about her love and told him to honour her bed with his company. "O master! I am helpless, so make me satiated with your presence." (3)

The Raja told the emissary (attendant), "O woman! Your previous spouse is alive. If you kill the Kazi first, then only you could contact me (for some arrangement)." (4)

The messenger (attendant) came back and informed her accordingly that the Raja had given this message, "That you should kill the Kazi first and then you could gain my company." (5)

The woman kept this message with herself on hearing these words, and did not share it with any other woman. When the Kazi came at night, then she took out her sword, and killed him while he was asleep. (6)

She cut off his head presented it to the Raja and said, "For your sake, I have killed the Kazi, so now you could have sexual companionship with me to your satisfaction. (7)

When the Raja saw his (Kazi's) head, he was greatly frightened. He thought to himself that the woman, who could kill her husband in no time, then what is the value of second, (paramour) before her. (8)

Following the traces of blood stains, the people moved ahead, and all were made to (stop) stand at that place, where she had thrown the head of the Kazi with her own hands. (14)

All saw the cut off head and thought that this Raja had killed the Kazi. So they took him in chains to the place, where Jahangir was having his (royal assembly). (15)

All of then related the whole story to the king and said, "This Raja had killed the Kazi. But no one realized the actual fact (secret) behind. (16)

The Turkish woman took him for killing him and the (Raja) explained to her with the signs of his eyes that "he will do whatever she wanted and will fetch water for her." (17)

Then the beautiful woman thought that he had accepted her demand. So she let him off (from her hands), and said, "I have pardoned his act of murder." (18)

That the demon had carried her towards the sky and they became disappointed about the princess. The Raja, Having lost his princess was very sad and gloomy and kept quiet after wailing and crying. (9)

For few days they had spent all the money and roaming around various land, including foreign lands, they suffered quite a lot. The princess, leaving aside her paramour, came back at midnight to her country. (10)

She wrote a letter to her father, that the Lord have saved her from the clutches of the demon. "Now send somebody to take me back and then enjoy peace and joy on meeting me." (11)

The father kissed the letter, clasping it to his heart and sent many palanquins to escort her back, and brought Champkala back home. But the foolish Raja could not grasp the secret behind all this. (12)

That clever handmaid thought of a secret plan, and set her house on fire and gave the news of the burning (immolation) of the princess to the queen and she herself went crying to the Raja.(10)

She told the Raja "that the princess had been burnt (in the house) and you have not bothered about her whereabouts. (walfar) Now come to collect her physical remains (ashes) and through someonethese ashes may be placed (thrown) in Ganga." (11)

On hearing these words, the Raja rushed to the spot and came to the burning house and started wailing and crying loudly, saying "that the princess may be pulled out and save her from the burning fire." (12)

All of them thought that the princess was burnt inside, but no one thought in mind that she had gone away (eloped). The Raja felt sorrowful at heart, and along with his subjects no one could grasp the true story (the secret behind it). (13)

There was a Raja in (the eastern part of Nepal) Werang and his glamour was known (spread) like the flame of fire. His wife was named Poorab Dei. There was no other woman to match her beauty. (1)

The Raja was called Poorab Sain, who had won great many battles. He was always accompanied by a multi-coloured (four faceted) army consisting of elephants, horses, chariots and infantry men. (2)

A great Shah (merchant) came there, who had a lovable son, whose charm is beyond description, so much so that while writing (about his beauty) the pen loses its strength (it is indescribable). (3)

When Poorab Dei saw him, she got allured by him and lost her sense of proportion. She developed great love for the Shah's son. Now she would not like food or water without seeing him (without his presence). (4)

The queen had got enamoured by his love, now how could she rid herself of this strange love. One day the queen had cohabitation with him. He had sexual companionship with good resolve so that the queen felt happy and satisfied. (3)

So the queen continued to have cohabitation with him for many days, and then explained to him like this. "O friend! Whatever I would say, you accept that and do accordingly." (4)

"If you see a dead body, then remove his male organ and keep it intact in your loin cloth and do not disclose this secret to any other man." (5)

Aril

"When I would blame you for any misbehaviour (of any sort of misconduct) with me, then you get enraged with me, and then taking out that male organ from your loin cloth, throw it at me, and show this deceitful action to all the high and low people including the Raja." (6)

That paramour then did it accordingly. as he was taught. In the morning, the queen showed the Raja (her spouse) to the Sanyasi and at the same time, sent her handmaid to the Sanyasi. (7)

Then she caught hold of the maid (attendant) along with the Sanyasi, and seeing the Raja called the Sanyasi near her. She abused Chhail Giri which pained him immensely, saying "that you had a cohabitation with my handmaid (attendant)." (8)

Hearing this the Sanyasi became furious with rage (in his mind) and he took out a dagger in his hand and taking out the already cut` male organ' from the loin-cloth (hidden there) threw it at the queen's face." (9)

The queen ran away shouting 'Alas, Alas' and then embraced the feet of the Sanyasi. She said, "O Rishil I had not understood your character and without proper realization had falsely blamed you." (10)

Then the Raja thought to himself that the Sanyasi had cut off his organ and thrown it away. So he got furious with the queen, cursing her badly saying, "0 queen! You have committed a great blunder." (11)

"Now keep this Sanyasi at your home and all the women should serve him collectively. So long he is alive, do not allow him to leave this place, and worship this celibate." (12)

Now if you give me away in offerings (alms), then you will gain a wife like me in the next world. For such religious functions, one should not delay at all and by giving alms to the Brahmin, one should win worldly praises. (9)

So hearing this, the Raja made up his mind to give away his wife in offerings (alms) and he called the same Brahmin, who was liked by the queen. (10)

He gave away his wife to him in alms, and the fool did not realize the secret behind this move. The Brahmin went away along with the woman and deceived the Raja in a big way. (11) (1)

There was a merchant's son (Shah's son) called Atbhut Sain and there was no other person so beautiful on the Earth. His charming personality was looking glamorous and neither Indra nor the moon could match the beauty of this prince (young man). (2)

The queen got enamoured by seeing his handsome appearance, and walked to his house herself and developed true love with him. Now this new aroused love could not be curbed. (3)

The queen had sexual relationship with him in many ways and in their love affair lot of time was gone by. In the meantime another handsome person came there. The queen called him also. (4)

That man was also liked by the queen and she had sexual companionship with him by calling him at home and in the meantime the previous paramour also happened to come there. Seeing the queen having cohabitation with him, he got furious with rage and murmured something. (5)

Being enraged, he took out his sword, and saving the queen, he struck the other paramour and he himself. ran away from there. The queen got red with rage (her body got warmed up). (6)

She wrote a letter and sent to/him, saying "O friend! I cannot afford to forget you. Please pardon me for this mistake. Now I will be your slave only." (7)

He had a slave in the house and there was none else comparable to this dark complexioned person. His name was Namafik. He could not be called a human being. (How could anyone call him a human)? (2)

There was a lady attendant (maid) who was in love with him and there was no other greater fool than her on the whole Earth (in the world). That woman called Namafik and had cohabitation with him to her hearts satisfaction. (3)

Then the Raja happened to come there where the lady attendant was having-sexual companionship with the slave. The handmaid got confused and lost her senses instantly. (4)

She could not think of any other solution. So she killed the slave and hanged him upside down and burnt a slow fire underneath him, as if she was going to remove his fat. (5)

When the Raja saw the dead body of the slave, then he asked her being shocked (surprised). "Why have you hanged him upside down after killing him and why have you lit this fire underneath? (6)

That Vaid (physician) told me, that the Raja was suffering from T.B. So you kill this attendant. Take out the (brain) fat and give it to the Raja. Then he will be cured." (8)

"That is why I have killed him and have made arrangements for taking out fat. I will take out this fat only if you are prepared to eat it, otherwise I could leave him now itself" (9)

When the Raja heard like this, then he accepted her as a lady Vaid (physician). He thought in his mind that the Lord had helped us by providing a woman in the house, who could cure this disease. (10)

The Raja then thanked her and said, "That he had realized her qualities to-day only. In the western world we have heard about this medicine being (manufactured) prepared, but it was not to be found anywhere in our land." (11)

Aurangzeb did not know about this secret, and always thought that Roshanarai was his follower (pupil). Roshanarai was taking him as her beloved and used to have cohabitation with him, but always announced him as her Guru (Pir). (4)

One day, the Pir had gone home, but without his presence, she was not having any peace of mind for a moment even. She announced herself as a patient (sick person) and seated in a planquin, went to his house. (5)

She stayed with him for many days and then came back to Delhi. On coming back she said she was now healthy and all right but no one could get at the secret. (6)

Then she told her brother (Aurangzeb), "I was having a serious malady, but God Almighty had cured me. She got the Vaid (Pir) rewarded greatly but Aurangzeb could not gauge the depth of this secret. (7)

Here the two hundred and seventy-eighth episode of the Kings & Minister's dialogue regarding woman's witchcraft from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well . (278-5352) (Contd.)

There was a very clever son of the Shah (merchant) and there was no prince even to compare with him. It is rather impossible to describe his beauty. On seeing him one could not afford to wink one's eyes even (one would continue watching his beauty). (2)

When the queen saw his beauty, then she thought to herself. "Either I should have cohabitation with him or I should become an (female) ascetic (Jogan) and proceed to the jungle. (3)

She sent one handmaid to him and she brought him there after explaining everything. The handmaid brought him there, where the woman was seated being fully embellished. (4)

The queen embraced him, being under the spell of her sexual desires and then had cohabitation with the paramour in many ways to her satisfaction. She enjoyed sensuous pleasure for four pehars of the night (twelve hours) with him and were busy in their love affair throughout the night. (5)

That young woman got entangled with him and continued to develop love for him. She had explained to him first and then came to the Raja herself and made her obeisance to him. (6)

She said, "O Rajan! I had a dream, which you may listen to. Shiva had woken me up and sent me to you, saying, "That you should sleep with me for eight years, and spend the days and nights with me." (7)

"Your body will not have any more sins left. Shiva had told me like this. Your treasures will get filled up with money and all your functions will be successful." (9)

The Raja took it to be true and blind folded both his eyes. lie slept with the queen for eight years and cast away all his afflictions of mind."(10)

The Raja was sleeping with eyes blind folded, so he could not see anybody coming there or going out, while the queen would call any man, whom she liked. (11)

Whichever person, the queen liked was called and she would have cohabitation with him, while she would be talking to the spouse also, while she was enjoying sensuous pleasure with the paramour lying underneath him. (12)

Whichever person she wanted would come there and he would have sexual pleasure with the queen by pulling her underneath. But whosoever has cohabitation with too many men, does not beget a child. (13)

He had cohabitation with the queen in many ways and enamoued the queen's heart. So the woman developed great love for him and forgot about the Raja completely. (4)

Then the queen thought in her mind, that this Raja should be killed and taking away his kingdom, it should be handed over to the Yogi. So some game play (witchcraft) of this nature should be (played) arranged. (5)

So she killed the Raja, while (he was) asleep. Burying him in the ground, she said, "The Raja had handed over the rein (kingdom) of the land to the Yogi and he himself had dressed himself as a Yogi." (6)

The Raja, having taken the guise of a Yogi and after handing over the kingdom to the Yogi, had gone to the Jungle. So I am also giving this rule to the Yogi (kingdom) and will go following the Raja. (7)

The Raja was always lying at her place, just as a person was lying dead in the grave. He would not go to the other queen's house, as such she was feeling very jealous and annoyed. (4)

The second queen had her sway over the whole land and the queen, in the guise of the Raja, used to rule over the land. So the other queen (due to jealousy) felt enraged in her mind. She called a Vaid and "told him openly." (5)

"If you could finish off this Raja, then you may take money of your choice from me (as reward). Then the -Vaid went to the Raja and declared his body as suffering from some disease." (6)

Then he said, "If you agree, then I shall treat you (I will make some arrangement to cure you) and somehow gave him one dose. With that the healthy body of Raja became sick (unhealthy) but the fool could not follow the secret. (7)

With that medicine, he had more motions. So the Raja became very weak and feeble. The Vaid said, "The Raja was suffering from `Sanpat' (some disease), so 1 have treated him like this with full deliberation. (9)

Then the Vaid got about ten tolas (10 gms) of opium and mixed some poison to it. Then this medicine was sprinkled over his body, so that he lost some of his skin even. (10)

When the Raja would utter a note of sorrow of groaning, the Vaid would say, "Let him not talk too much, and close (shut) his mouth.(I1)

The more this powder was sprinkled on the Raja's body, the more he would groan (Alas!) but no one got a clue to this secret and finally he died. (12)

Another queen was called Astir Kala and she was always remembered by the Raja day and night so Amarkala was always feeling enraged at heart. The Raja was always calling Asurkala to his side. (2)

Amar Kala then called a trader and she had sexual relationship with him. He was called Anand Kumar, with whom the Raja's queen had a cohabitation.(3)

She killed Asurkala with her own hands, and then informed the spouse about her death. She then covered her paramour under the wooden plank (of the hearse) and then embellished it nicely. (4)

The paramour was hidden under the wooden plank and on top she placed the corpse of the rival-wife but no one knew about this secret. Thus she managed to help the paramour to escape with this deceit.(5)

When he saw the beautiful garden, he thought to himself "that now we should rest here for sometime, and after two hours, we should move towards the town." (4)

Stopping the horses there he went to sleep for sometime (two hours) and got rid of his worries (afflictions) and then the princess Bikhi came there, and seeing that Raja, lost her sense of proportion (became mad). (5)

She saw Prabha Sain sleeping there, and the princess thought to herself that she was the wife of a canopied Raja, and he was her spouse. "Now I will marry this person only as I have become his slave only." (6)

The young girl had thought of it without any doubt, in her mind that she will marry him only, else she will vacate the kingdom. She saw a letter lying there, so the woman thought to herself. (7)

She wanted to open and read the letter, but due to the punishment of Vedas, she was afraid of it, as it was stated in Vedas that a person, who opens a letter (of someone) is thrown by the Lord in the hell. (8)

Being engrossed in doubt, she took up the letter in her hands, and thinking it to be of her paramour, she embraced it to her breast. At times she was hiding it and at times was showing it off. It seemed as if a poor person had gained lot of wealth, and was watching it. (9)

Then the woman, thinking the letter from her beloved, opened it and felt that if someone opened the letter of the beloved, then she would not be thrown into hell. (10)

There was a Raja with canopy overhead, who wanted to kill Prabha Sain and thinking of it, he had mentioned in this letter. (11)

This letter was addressed to the Raja,whose daughter was the beautiful Bikhia. "When Prabha Sain would come there, then he should be poisoned at that time." (12)

So on reading this letter, the princess got shocked, so she thought of some plan to protect the paramour. She put some collyrium with her hand to the eyes, and made the poison into `Bikhia', (made it from Bikh to Bikhia). (13)

When the girl had gone from there, then the Raja woke up and took up the letter in his hands with great affection and gave the letter to the father of Bikhia. On hearing the name of the paramour, the Raja recognized him. (14)

When the Raja read the letter, then he thought that this letter was written by the friendly Raja and was true which said, on reading this letter, "Bikhia" should be handed over to him "O Rajan! And there should be no delay in it." (15)

There lived a Shah there by the name of Kamal Ket, who had no parallel (in beauty) on the face of the Earth. He was very glamorous, powerful and armed with weapons and was famous in all the four directions as a Kashatriya. (2)

Couplet

When the queen saw his beauty with her own eyes, then with sexual desires aroused in her, she forgot about her household chores. (3)

Choupaiee

The queen then called a clever maid, who bowed to her on arrival. She (queen) told her heart's desires, and sent her to the prince. (4)

In no time, the maid reached there and explained the whole story to the prince, that the queen (Raja's wife) was enamoured by your love. She had left everything and was engaged in only one thing (your love).(5)

Now please come to her house and satisfy her wishes (desires). Please leave this place and come to her place (thus purifying it). O Kumar! Please get up quickly, without any delay, and make the queen's bed glorious (praiseworthy). (6)

The way the maid explained to him, she had satisfied him fully (had won his heart) and along with him came back, thus arranging his meeting with the queen. So he satisfied the queen with sensuous pleasure in many ways and had sexual companionship with her for (four pehars) twelve hours. (7)

The whole night was spent in their love affair and were talking about sex for long hours. With many poses of cohabitation, the sexual desires were fully satisfied (the sexual fever was over). (8)

After the passage of night, the day had dawned and many types of sparrows started chirruping. With sexual company, both of them got tired and being engrossed in sexual play, they slept on one bed. (9)

When they woke up from the slumber, then again they had sexual relationship. They were busy in many sexual poses, which were ten times more than the ones given in Kok Shastra. (10)

They were totally engrossed in their sexual relationships so that they forgot about their household affairs. The queen then thought in her mind and made it clear to her paramour. (11)

"O dear! Listen to my words! From to-day I am your slave, and I have no dearth of money. So let us both get away from here and go to some other place." (12)

"O friend! Make some arrangement to take me away with you. Both of us will dress up (disguise into) like Sadhus (mendicants) and then settle at someplace and enjoy life with this money." (13)

The paramour then told the woman, "How could I go along with you? There were so many guards, who could kill even the birds flying in the sky (they were very strict and vigilant). (14)

"If the Raja would see both of us, then he would kill us on the spot. So you make some other arrangement, which no one else should come to know." (15)

The queen then played a trick. She fell down on the ground, shouting she was suffering from "severe pain". It appeared as if she were actually dead. She started shouting, for the husband by saying 'Alas', `Alas' (wailing a-loud). She called (collected) all the Vaids (physicians) near her. (16)

The Raja then told all the Vaids that they should do some treatment for her recovery, "So that she may not die, and keep my company in glamour." (17)

Then one wise maid who had seen the sexual desires and love affair of the queen, said, "We have got a lady physician (Vaid) and all these Vaids are nothing before her." (18)

"O Rajan! If you call her and get the queen treated by her (she would be cured). She will be able to cure the queen without any delay and she (queen) will keep your bed always in glory." (19)

When the Raja agreed to this proposal, then the wise Vaid (female) was called in. The same man, whom they had declared earlier as a woman was kept as a female Vaid. (20)

Then the maid went to the Raja and brought that man in the form of a female physician (Vaid). When she checked up the queen's pulse, she told the Raja like this. (21)

"The queen `was suffering from T.B (royal malady), which cannot be cured soon. If someone were to get it treated for eight years continuously, then only this suffering could end." (22)

The Raja took it to be true and accepted what the queen's paramour had said about her. So the female Vaid was kept in the queen's place, who was shown as a woman, though actually a male. (23)

That (female) Vaid was staying there day and night and whenever the queen wanted, she would enjoy sensuous pleasure (with him). The foolish Raja never realized this secret and for eight years, he was being deceived. (24)

There was a Raja in the Eastern land, who was known by the name of Poorab Sain in the world. He had a wife by the name of Poorab Dei. Even a godly princess would not be (beautiful) like her. (1)

There lived a Kashatriya, called Roop Sain also, and there was no other person to match him in beauty. He was looking glamorous and by seeing him all the women of snakes or humans were enchanted. (2)

When the queen saw him, then she thought to herself by mind, speech and action, as how to enjoy his sexual companionship? Else she would die by piercing a dagger (in her body). (3)

The queen got up and took the paramour in her embrace and kissed him in many ways, then she had a sexual companionship with him to her satisfaction after having hemp, opium and wine. (8)

When the beloved was drunk with wine, then she made him lie on the bed, and hugged him with great joy and he had cohabitation with her by jumping up and down. (9)

Firstly he was young, secondly drunken with wine and thirdly busy in the company of a young woman, so who will accept (frustration) defeat out of the two? All the four Vedas know this secret fully. (10)

When young woman gets the company of a young man, then she does not want to separate her breast from him (in embrace), so the queen was hugging him closely and continued to have cohabitation throughout the night (for twelve hours). (11)

While in his sexual company, the queen became under his spell, and the strange woman became his own (wife). She would not leave the man even for a moment as the young paramour was being liked by the queen. (12)

They were repeating the cantos of Kok Shastra, while having drugs and then were enjoying sexual companionship. They were not bothered about anyone else and were having many types of relation ships to satiate themselves. (13)

They got some hemp, poppy husk and opium and were consuming it seated on bed. The man was pulling the legs of the queen while laughing and was giving her lot of joy and solace. (14)

In having cohabitation, they would spend the night and then getting up again they would enjoy sensuous pleasure. He would take the woman in many poses and would kiss her many times. (15)

Having sexual relationship he pleased and satisfied her fully, having done cohabitation in many ways. The queen then laughed and said, "O darling! Listen to what I am going to say!" (16)

When he had fully satisfied the woman with many types of relationships, then the woman, in a joyful mood said, "O dear friend! Now I am your slave." (17)

"If you say, then I will fetch water for you, or for your sake I will get sold (auctioned) in the market. I will do whatever you would say and will not feel afraid of anyone else." (18)

The paramour laughed and said, "I have also become your slave. I have never got the company of another woman like you, so my worship is now complete." (19)

"Now you play some deceptive game, so as to gain my company forever and no one else should know this secret. Neither the dog should see nor come (near) for barking." (21)

When the queen heard these words, then she laughed and told the beloved, "You should apply hair remover to your face, and take the form of a woman fully." (22)

The Queen got some hair remover and applied to his whole face. When all the hair were removed from the face, then she dressed him like a woman. (23)

She placed a lyre on his shoulders and kept her in the house for hearing her songs. When the Raja would come there, then she (he) was playing the music on lyre. (24)

The Raja, on hearing the lyre from her, would always accept (consider) him as a woman. He got allured by her on seeing her beauty and became like an insane person after her leaving his household. (25)

Then the Raja called a lady emissary (messenger) and giving her lot of money, sent her to him. When the queen heard about it, then she said to him. (26)

"Lest the Raja get wedded to you and forgot all about me and my love, so I will sleep with you, thus alleviating all my afflictions. (27)

When that maid would come to her on the orders of the Raja, she would always find her sleeping with the queen and then going back would inform the Raja accordingly. (28)

The Raja thought, that the queen had known his secret, so she was not leaving her and was sleeping with her, thus avoiding my tricks not to succeed. (29)

On hearing this information, the Raja would come personally to see it. When he would see the paramour sleeping with the queen, he would not disturb them, thus his efforts would be unsuccessful. (30)

The Raja shook his head and thought to himself "that the queen had understood his intentions, hence she was sleeping with her and my trick does not work." (31)

The queen then made the secret known to all the handmaids and told them "that if the Raja would see her sleeping elsewhere, he would call her for cohabitation with her." (32)

"That is why, I am always sleeping along with her by joining my limbs with his limbs. All the maids, on hearing this, thought it to be correct and saved her from the Raja's effort. (the person disguised as woman). (33)

Here the two hundred and ninetieth episode of the King's & the Minister's dialogue regarding the woman's witchcraft from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well. (290-5536) (Contd.)

The queen had arranged for some poppy husk, hemp and opium and seated on a single bed they consumed it. When both had got intoxicated, then all their sufferings ended (pining came to an end).(5)

Seated on a single bed, they were having lot of fun and frolic and both started talking of sexual love affair. They were kissing each other and then were enjoying sensuous pleasure in great many ways. (6)

The queen, while having love affair with him, got too much attached to him. Dilwali Rai had gone away after the sexual companionship. "The queen thought in her mind that she should also go with him." (7)

There was known to be a temple in a thick jungle, where the lion would kill a person. The queen, in a planquin, went there and had told the paramour also about their meeting point. (9)

When she reached the thick forest, she got out of the planquin for urinating (showing it only) and from there went away with the paramour, throwing some red colour (like blood) on the ground. (10)

When the queen had gone with the paramour, then the maid started shouting "that a lion had taken the queen and someone should save her from the lion." (11)

When the warriors heard about the lion, they all got frightened and drew out their swords. They went back to inform the Raja that a lion had taken away the queen. (12)

The Raja felt frustrated with shaking of his head. He said, "whatever was destined, had happened, now what could be done ? No one knew the secret behind all this and the paramour took away the queen. (13) (1)

There was a great (mighty) Raja by the name of Utter Singh in the north direction. He had a wife, called Uttar Mati and the like of her was never heard off (with ears) nor seen anywhere. (1)

A person, by the name of Lahori Rai, came there, who was very handsome, having all the virtues. When the woman saw him, she was completely enamoured by his love in a moment (losing her senses).(2)

She could not keep her breast covered as the dress was not being kept in check. She wanted to say something, but would utter something else (being out of senses). She was always repeating the word, 'O dear' ! all the time and water was flowing from her eyes. (3)

When the Raja would ask her about it, she would not say anything. She would fall down on the ground reeling and would repeat the word, 'O beloved'! (4)

The Raja, on seeing this, was getting shocked, and surprised and would say to the maids, "What had happened to this woman, so that she was behaving like this?" (5)

"What should be done (to reduce her misery) and avoid her death? Whatever the person, treating her, would demand, I will give that. I am prepared to be sawed alive for her sake (safety)." (6)

If someone could cure the queen, he would rule the country for one day and could enjoy the sexual company of queen also. Next day I will get my queen back and enjoy her sexual company. (9)

When the Raja said many times like this, then one hand_ maid with folded hands, told the Raja, "O dear Raja! Listen to me about this thing, what I am saying." (10)

There was one Vaid (physician) whom you may call and he should treat her. He could cure her of her malady in a moment and she would be normal again (from a sick person)." (11)

When the Raja heard about it, then he sent for that person immediately. "He (felt) saw the queen's pulse, and then the Vaid said like this." (12)

The woman, with this deceit, got half the kingdom for the paramour and the queen enjoyed sensuous pleasure with the paramour. The foolish Raja could not grasp the secret and got openly cheated (deceived). (19)

Couplet

Thus the queen had deceived the Raja and enjoyed the company of her paramour. He got half the kingdom, but this secret was not known to the Raja. (20)

Choupaiee

Thus she got half the kingdom given to the paramour, having cheated the husband like this. One day the paramour would have the sexual companionship of the queen, along with half the kingdom. (21)

The queen would go to the Raja's place one day and the next day the paramour would enjoy her company. One day the Raja would rule the land while the next day, the paramour would have canopy fluttering over his head. (22) (1)

Here the two hundred and ninety-second episode of the King's & Minister's dialogue regarding woman's witchcraft from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well. (292-5571) (Contd.)

There was a Raja Raj Sain in the land of Rajpuri town, and he had a wife named Raj Dei, from whom even Moon had borrowed its light (beauty). (1)

The Raja loved the woman too much and would function according to her wishes and he would not visit any other woman, as he was afraid of her and was frightened due to her fear. (2)

All were following the queen's dictates without giving any importance to the Raja. Whosoever the queen wanted to kill, she would do so and could save the life of one whom she wanted (liked). (3)

Then a prostitute came there and the Raja got enamoured by her. He wanted to call her, but was rather afraid of (the queen) his wife and was too much worried. (4)

When the queen learnt about it, she made a resolve in her mind, that if she were to go to the house of her paramour, then she would tell the Raja first (thus getting her mistake pardoned before hand). (5)

When the Raja came there at night, then the queen shared this news with him, saying, "O Rajan! You are considering the prostitute as more charming & beautiful than me, as such you were in love with her." (6)

ਤਾ ਤੇ ਅਧਿਕ ਰੋਖ ਮੁਹਿ ਭਯੋ ॥ ਬੇਸ੍ਵਾ ਕੇ ਰਾਜਾ ਗ੍ਰਿਹ ਗਯੋ ॥

"So I am in great rage that a Raja was going to a prostitute's house. Either you should stop having cohabitation with her or forget about my love (loving me)." (7)

"If you would go to the house of the prostitutes and then have sexual relationship with her, then I shall also go to my paramour's house and then dishonour you (by throwing ash in your head) by having love-affair with him." (8)

"First you give me this thing in writing, then you may call anyone you like. Whomsoever you like, you may call her at home for cohabitation, as you like." (9)

"When the Raja heard such words, and his eyes met with her eyes, then he kept quiet, and could not say anything. He followed that the queen had gained the news of his secret move." (10)

The Raja then thought to himself that "he had developed love for the prostitute, hence the queen had said these words. Something should be done about it, as I cannot forget (leave) the prostitute also." (11)

Now the queen had got hold of this news that she had seen my loving care for the prostitute. But I cannot live without the prostitute's love, but if 1 had sexual relationship with her, then I will lose the queen also. (12)

ਜਬ ਨ੍ਰਿਪ ਫਿਰਿ ਰਾਨੀ ਕੇ ਆਯੋ ॥ ਤਬ ਰਾਨੀ ਇਹ ਭਾਂਤਿ ਸੁਨਾਯੋ ॥

Jih chahai tih bol pathavai. Kam bhog ruch man kamavai. (17)

When the Raja came to the queen again, then the queen told him like this. "If I hear about your going to the prostitute's house, then I shall have cohabitation with my paramour also." (13)

"O dear! Now you are not having any manliness (any semen left in you) so you have not got any son so far. So if someone else were to have sexual relationship with your queen, then only you may have a son." (14)

Then the Raja thought to himself, that the queen had remarked correctly. "So he gave her permission to have sexual relationship with someone else and he himself went to the prostitute's house." (15)

When the Raja would go to the prostitute, the queen would call any man she liked. She would enjoy sensuous pleasure with him without having any hesitation about the Raja. (16)

The queen had invited the prostitute herself, and through her deceit, she had got permission from the Raja (for having extra marital relationship). Now the queen would call any man she wanted and then have cohabitation with him to her satisfaction. (17)
